AT LAST—INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT!

AT last, after half a century of endeavor, an International Copyright law stands on the statute-books of the United States—a country which should have been in the forefront in doing justice to authors, but which has heretofore lagged far behind its sister nations, large and small. The law is a compromise—like all compromises, in its details satisfactory to no one party, but in its general principle satisfactory to all, because it makes a great stride forward and in its degree reaches every interest involved. It is now fairly to be expected that each interest which has been a party to this compromise shall unite in working heartily for the success of this measure in the public interest, leaving any further questions in abeyance until some years' experience has shown how and where it can usefully be amended. It is our own conviction that when that time comes, the effects of this bill upon American literature and American interests generally, as well as its relations to justice in a large sense, will have borne such fruit that those who have stood most staunchly for the manufacturing clause and other restrictions in the bill will join heartily in bringing American Copyright law into more full harmony with the Copyright law of other nations. Until that time comes, let us all do the best we can to make the best of this all-important measure.

The bill escaped defeat by a very narrow margin because of the unwillingness of this or that interest to concede this or that feature, when it seemed to jeopard the final success of the bill; but it is safely passed, and "bygones are bygones." The American authors, as represented by the American Copyright League, have yielded the most, for their desire has been from the beginning for a copyright law pure and simple, which should give to their foreign brethren, unencumbered by restrictions, the same rights of property which they themselves hold. The publishing interest, as a class, has never been a unit as to what kind of copyright it preferred, and in the discussions of the past few years it has proved that the number of publishers who did not look upon the manufacturing clause as of the first importance is considerably greater than those who regarded this as a sine qua non. The Typographical Unions, however, have felt throughout that their interests required such a restrictive clause, and it has been largely through their effective help that the bill has been pressed upon the attention of Congress and passed. This ought fully and freely to be acknowledged, and specific credit should be given to their committee at Washintgon, of which Mr. John L. Kennedy, of Columbia Typographical Union, is chairman, for their practical wisdom at the final moment, when, by assenting to the importation of two copies for use and not for sale, they secured the very great advantages given to their craft by the bill which would otherwise have been lost. The employing printers, through Mr. Theodore De Vinne, the delegate of the Typothetæ, have taken a similar, though less positive, stand in favor of a manufacturing clause. The fifth element, but recently represented on the Joint Conference Committee, that of the librarians, through the delegate of the American Library Association, had not taken a position one way or the other, but in general seconded the efforts of authors for international copyright on general principles.

The burden of the struggle for the past two years has fallen upon this Joint Conference Committee, whose Secretary since November, 1889, Mr. R. U. Johnson, of The Century, Secretary also of the Authors' League, has been most indefatigable and self-sacrificing throughout the campaign in Washington as well as in New York, to whom the lion's share of credit is due. It is difficult, and not altogether just, to single out, in the long struggle of fifty years and more, those to whom the community owes most for the final result, for the workers of the past have, in their way, contributed as much in the final result as the workers of the present. Mention should be made, however, of the effective labor of Mr. G. H. Putnam, Secretary of the Publishers' League and for some time Secretary of the Joint Conference Committee, upon whom descended the mantle of one of the earliest and most unselfish advocates of International Copyright, his father, George P. Putnam. Dr. Edward Eggleston, as Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Authors' League, at serious risk to his health, laid two winters ago in Washington much of the foundation of the present success. From 1883 to 1885 Mr. G. P. Lathrop gave much unremitting pioneer labor to the organization of the Authors' League and to the support of the general principle of justice to authors at a great sacrifice of time and means. But it is impossible to schedule the names of those who have lent their effective help in this measure. In Congress, the Chace-Breckinridge-Adams-Platt-Simonds bill as it may be called, owes much to each of the Senators and Representatives named, ex-Senator Chace, the father of the present measure, having been untiring from the beginning in its advocacy, while Col. Breckinridge has been most effective in allaying the feeling of many of his associates against the necessarily restrictive measures of the bill, and Senator Platt and Representative Simonds have simply saved the bill by their insistent and alert generalship. Mr. Adams, whose advocacy of the measure possibly defeated his re-election, could not have been more devoted to the Simonds bill had it continued to bear his name. The literary fraternity should bear him in grateful remembrance. In justice to the publishing interest, which has been accused of maintaining a lobby at Washington for selfish purposes in connection with this bill, it should be said that almost all of the work toward enlisting public and Congressional sympathy for this measure has been voluntary, the only exception being the occasional employment, of a sentinel at Washington familiar with the methods of legislation, and capable, therefore, of notifying the committee, especially when none of its members were in Washington, of the course of the bill.

But it is not simply the interests involved, it is the whole American people who are to be congratulated on the passage of this bill. A stain on our national honor is at last removed—perhaps not fully, for we have not yet done full justice to authors, but certainly in such wise as to enable an American citizen to lift up his head where before he hung it in shame. It now remains for American publishers to show their sincerity by their works, by placing before the American public honest, well-made books, paid for to their authors, at a just and reasonable price.

FINAL PASSAGE OF THE COPYRIGHT BILL.

THE appointment of Senate conferrees, Senators Platt, Hiscock, and Gray, was not followed by appointment of House conferrees until Saturday evening session, Feb. 28, when, after the overruling of a point of order by Mr. Payson, the leading opponent of international copyright, that the Senate bill as amended should be referred to the Committee of the Whole, as containing a new provision relating to the tariff, Mr. Symonds moved non-concurrence and the appointment of House conferrees, and Mr. Payson, as an opposition expedient, moved to concur. Mr. Payson's motion was lost, 64 to 128, and in the absence of objection the Speaker ordered a conference, and named Messrs. Simonds, Buchanan and Cowles as House conferrees. Mr. Payson moved an elaborate series of instructions to conferrees, embodying the 10 per cent. royalty scheme, but this was declared out of order.

On Monday March 2, the Conference report was presented in the House as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses to the bill (H. R. 10,881) to amend Title LX., chapter 3, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to copyright, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1 and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Insert in lieu of said amendment the words "photograph, chromo, or lithograph;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows Insert in lieu of said amendment the words: "or from negatives or drawings on stone made within the limits of the United States, or from transfers made therefrom;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Insert in lieu of said amendment the words "chromo-lithograph of photograph;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Insert in lieu of said amendment the words "negative or drawings on stone;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of section 13 after the word "citizens," on page 8, line 21, down to and including the word "arises," on page 9, line 2, and insert the following:

"Or when such foreign state or nation is a party to an international agreement which provides for reciprocity in the granting of copyright, by the terms of which agreement the United States of America may, at its pleasure, become a party to such agreement. The existence of either of the conditions aforesaid shall be determined by the President of the United States by proclamation made from time to time as the purposes of this act may require."

And the Senate agree to the same.

And as to the amendments of the Senate numbered 5 and 6, the committee is unable to agree.

W. E. SIMONDS,
JAMES BUCHANAN,
Managers on the part of the House.
O. H. PLATT,
FRANK HISCOCK,
GEORGE GRAY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the House conferrees was read, as follows:

Statement to accompany report on bill (H. R. 10,881) to amend Title LX., chapter 3, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to copyrights.

The conferrees on the part of the House upon the disagreeing votes of the two Houses upon House bill 10,881 "to amend Title LX., chapter

3, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to copyrights," submit the following statement:

Amendments numbered 1, 2, 3, and 4, as agreed to, put lithographs, chromos, and photographs on the same basis as books, as regards having the two copies which are required to be deposited with the Librarian of Congress, produced in the United States.

Amendments numbered 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11 are verbal only, and do not change the substance of the House bill.

Amendment 12, as agreed to, strikes out the second reciprocity provision contained in the last section of the bill, retains the first and third of those provisions, and provides that the President, instead of the Attorney-General, shall determine the existence of such conditions.

Senate amendments 5 and 6, as to which the conferrees cannot agree, provide that the home copyright shall not prevent the importation of like articles from abroad.

W. E. SIMONDS,
JAMES BUCHANAN,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. Simonds moved the adoption of the conference report and the appointment of a committee for further conference on the matters disagreed to, which was carried, 139 to 90. The same conferrees were reappointed.

At the session of Tuesday evening, March 3 (at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning), the conferrees again reported as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate, numbered 5 and 6, to the bill (H. R. 10,881) to amend Title LX., chapter 3, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to copyrights, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 5 and 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows, to wit:

Strike out all of section 3, after the word "prohibited," in line 13, and insert in lieu thereof as follows:

"Except in the cases specified in paragraphs 512 to 516, inclusive, in section 2, of the act entitled 'An act to reduce the revenue and equalize the duties on imports, and for other purposes,' approved October 1, 1890; and except in the case of persons purchasing for use and not for sale, who import subject to the duty thereon not more than two copies of such book at any one time; and except in the case of newspapers and magazines, not containing in whole or in part matter copyrighted under the provisions of this act, unauthorized by the author, which are hereby exempted from prohibition of importation: Provided, nevertheless, That in the case of books in foreign languages, of which only translations in English are copyrighted, the prohibition of importation shall apply only to the translation of the same, and the importation of the books in the original language shall be permitted."

W. E. SIMONDS,
JAMES BUCHANAN,
Managers on the part of the House.
O. H. PLATT,
FRANK HISCOCK,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the House conferrees was as follows:

Senate amendment 5 permits the importation of copyrighted articles when the copyright belongs to a foreigner. The action agreed on by the conferrees strikes out that provision.

The conferrees' action also provides that a person may import two of the copyrighted articles for his own use on payment of the ordinary duties.

Senate amendment 6 permits the importation of newspapers and periodicals containing copyrighted matter. The action agreed on by the conferrees permits the same to come in when authorized by the author.

W. E. SIMONDS,
JAMES BUCHANAN,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. Simonds stated that this was substantially the House bill in its original shape. Forty minutes were given to debate. Mr. Holman, Mr. Springer and Mr. Kerr opposing the non-importation clause, and Mr. Breckenridge, Mr. Fitch and Mr. Cummings speaking forcibly a last word for the bill. The bill passed the House by the adoption of the conference report by a vote of 127 to 77.

The Senate, on the evening of the 3d inst., by a vote of 28 to 33, refused to recede from the Sherman and Ingalls amendments, and another conference was ordered. The second conference report was made late at night, and explained by Mr. Platt. He said it was the only agreement that could be reached, and that a failure to agree to it would be equivalent to a defeat of the bill. If the report was agreed to, it would provide that books which were on the free list under the McKinley bill (two copies) could be imported free of duty. It left out Mr. Sherman's amendment. It left every one at liberty to import two copies of a foreign book by paying the duties on them, and it left newspapers and magazines to be imported, provided they did not contain copyright matter.

Mr. Sherman said that, in other words, the Senate conferrees had surrendered what had been twice voted for by decisive majorities in the Senate. He mentioned the fact that, contrary to parliamentary usage, a majority of the Senate conferrees had been made up of Senators opposed to the action of the Senate on the bill. That was rather a peculiar organization of a conference committee. The effect of the proposition as it now stood was to make copyright an exclusive monopoly. It also took the heart and life out of the Ingalls amendment. If the London Times contained a chapter of a book copyrighted in the United States, that paper would be excluded. And so as to magazines. The report did not remove his objection to the bill, and he would vote against it.

Mr. Hiscock, the second conferree, defended the report, and Mr. Gray, of Delaware, the third conferree, stated the reasons why he had not signed it. Mr. Gray said that he should mourn the defeat of the bill—defeated by reason of the greed of the publishers. They had not shown a willingness to concede a single iota of their claim. The bill had to be made water-tight in their interest. No leak was to be allowed that could possibly work to their disadvantage. Therefore, he was not willing to compromise any further, not merely his own convictions, but the convictions of the Senate, as already expressed in two deliberate votes.

The discussion was continued by Messrs. Wolcott, Evarts, Aldrich, Daniel and Carlisle. After an interruption the discussion on the Copyright Conference Report was continued. Finally the vote was taken, and the conference report on the Copyright Bill was agreed to—yeas, 27; nays, 19, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Aldrich, Allen, Chandler, Dawes, Dixon, Dolph, Edmunds, Farwell, Frye, Hawley, Hiscock, Hoar, Jones of Nevada, McMillan, Morrill, Pasco, Pierce, Platt, Sawyer, Shoup, Spooner, Stanford, Stewart, Warren, Washburn, Wilson, Wolcott—27.

Nays—Messrs. Bate, Berry, Call, Carlisle, Casey, Coke, Cullom, Daniel, Faulkner, Gorman, Gray, Ingalls, Kenna, Morgan, Pettigrew, Plumb, Ransom, Sherman, Walthall—19.

After disposing of three other bills before the Senate, Mr. Gray yielded the floor to Mr. Pasco, who at 2:25 A.M. moved to reconsider the vote agreeing to the conference report on the Copyright Bill, and also moved that the House be requested to return the bill to the Senate. The vote on the motion resulted: yeas, 13; nays, 22—no quorum. A call of the roll showed the presence of forty-seven Senators. Mr. Allison suggested that the call for the yeas and nays be withdrawn, and that no other business be done except action on conference reports.

Mr. Platt—Where will that leave the Copyright Bill?

Mr. Allison—I don't know.

While the report on the Deficiency bill was being discussed Mr. Pasco called attention to the fact that although there was a motion pending to reconsider the vote on the Copyright bill and to request the House to return the bill to the Senate, the bill had been signed by the Speaker of the House, and had been laid on the table of the Vice-President. He asked that, pending action on his motion, the Vice-President should have his attention called to that motion.

The discussion on Mr. Pasco's motion occupied the attention of the Senate at intervals up to the hour of taking a recess. Mr. Pasco complained that, notwithstanding his motion, the bill had been hurried to the Vice-President, and had received the Vice-President's signature, and was now awaiting the President's. That was an instance, in the opinion of Mr. Hale, of how that bill had been "railroaded."

The idea of the bill being "railroaded" was angrily repelled by Mr. Platt.

Very deep regret was expressed by Mr. Hale that the Vice-President had seen fit to sign the bill; and it was only, he thought, because the Vice-President did not know of the serious effort to have a full vote of the Senate on the motion to reconsider. He hoped that the President would learn the facts in time to withhold his signature.

Mr. Spooner had seen the Vice-President, he said, and had learned that he had (not knowing of the motion) signed the bill. There the matter stood when the hour of the recess came.

At 6:15 the Senate took a recess till 9 A.M.

The Senate resumed its session at 9 A.M., on the 4th inst., with the Vice-President in the chair. It was half an hour later before the attendance of a quorum was obtained.

The first matter of any consequence that came up was Mr. Pasco's motion, made at the night session, to reconsider the vote agreeing to the conference report on the Copyright bill and to recall the bill. The vote upon the latter motion was: yeas, 21; nays, 29.

Before the vote was announced Mr. Hale asked unanimous consent to present the conference report on the Deficiency bill, but Mr. Platt, who was not in the most genial humor, objected to any interruption of the roll-call. It went to its close, and the result was highly satisfactory to Mr. Platt.

The bill, having thus passed both Houses of Congress, became a law by the immediate signature of President Harrison, who used for the purpose a large quill taken from an American eagle and sent to him for that purpose by Robert U. Johnson, Secretary of the League. The pen was then returned to Mr. Johnson, with the President's compliments.

The bill, as passed, is as follows, changes from the existing law in italics, omissions in footnotes below:

A BILL.

TO AMEND TITLE SIXTY, CHAPTER THREE, OF THE REVISED STATUTES OF THE UNITED STATES, RELATING TO COPYRIGHTS.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section forty-nine hundred and fifty-two of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4952. [1] The author, inventor, designer, or proprietor of any book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, cut, print, or photograph or negative thereof, or of a painting, drawing, chromo, statue, statuary, and of models or designs intended to be perfected as works of the fine arts, and the executors, administrators, or assigns of any such person shall, upon complying with the provisions of this chapter, have the sole liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing, and vending the same; and in the case of dramatic composition, of publicly peforming or representing it or causing it to be performed or represented by others; and authors or their assigns shall have exclusive right to dramatize and translate any of their works for which copyright shall have been obtained under the laws of the United States."

SEC. 2. That section forty-nine hundred and fifty-four of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4954. The author, inventor, or designer, if he be still living,[2] or his widow or children, if he be dead, shall have the same exclusive right continued for the further term of fourteen years, upon recording the title of the work or description of the article so secured a second time, and complying with all other regulations in regard to original copyrights, within six months before the expiration of the first term; and such persons shall, within two months from the date of said renewal, cause a copy of the record thereof to be published in one or more newspapers printed in the United States for the space of four weeks."

SEC. 3. That section forty-nine hundred and fifty-six of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby, amended so that it shall read as follows:

"SEC. 4956. No person shall be entitled to a copyright unless he shall, on or before the day of publication in this or any foreign country, deliver at the office of the Librarian of Congress, or deposit in the mail within the United States, addressed to the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia, a printed copy of the title of the book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, cut, print, photograph, or chromo, or a description of the painting, drawing, statue, statuary, or a model or design for a work of the fine arts for which he desires a copyright, nor unless he shall also, not later than the day of the publication thereof in this or any foreign country, deliver at the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia, or deposit in the mail within the United States, addressed to the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia, two copies of such copyright book,[3] map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, chromo, cut, print or photograph,[3] or in case of a painting, drawing, statue, statuary, model, or design for a work of the fine arts, a photograph of the same: Provided, That in the case of a book, photograph, chromo, or lithograph, the two copies of the same required to be delivered or deposited as above shall be printed from type set within the limits of the United States, or from plates made therefrom, or from negatives, or drawings on stone made within the limits of the United States, or from transfers made therefrom. During the existence of such copyright the importation into the United States of any book, chromo, lithograph, or photograph, so copyrighted, or any edition or editions thereof, or any plates of the same not made from type set, negatives or drawings on stone, made within the limits of the United States, shall be, and it is hereby, prohibited, except in the cases specified in paragraphs 512 to 560 inclusive, in section 2 of the act entitled "An act to reduce the revenue and equalize the duties on imports and for other purposes," approved Oct. 1, 1890; and except in the case of persons purchasing for use and not for sale, who import, subject to the duty thereon, not more than two copies of such book at any one time, and except in the case of newspapers and magazines not containing, in whole or in part, matter copyrighted under the provisions of this act, unauthorized by the author, which are hereby exempted from prohibition of importation: Provided nevertheless, That in the case of foreign languages, of which only translations in English are copyrighted, the prohibition of importation shall apply only to the translations of the same, and the importation of the books in the original language shall be permitted."

SEC. 4. That section forty-nine hundred and fifty-eight of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so that it will read as follows:

"SEC. 4958. The Librarian of Congress shall receive from the persons to whom the services designated are rendered the following fees:

"First. For recording the title or description of any copyright book or other article, fifty cents.

"Second. For every copy under seal of such record actually given to the person claiming the copyright, or his assigns, fifty cents.

"Third. For recording and certifying any instrument of writing for the assignment of a copyright, one dollar.

"Fourth. For every copy of an assignment, one dollar.

"All fees so received shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That the charge for recording the title or description of any article entered for copyright, the production of a person not a citizen or resident of the United States, shall be one dollar, to be paid as above into the Treasury of the United States, to defray the expenses of lists of copyrighted articles as hereinafter provided for.

"And it is hereby made the duty of the Librarian of Congress to furnish to the Secretary of the Treasury copies of the entries of titles of all books and other articles wherein the copyright has been completed by the deposit of two copies of such book printed from type set within the limits of the United States, in accordance with the provisions of this act and by the deposit of two copies of such other article made or produced in the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to prepare and print, at intervals of not more than a week, catalogues of such title-entries for distribution to the collectors of customs of the United States and to the postmasters of all post-offices receiving foreign mails, and such weekly lists, as they are issued, shall be furnished to all parties desiring them, at a sum not exceeding five dollars per annum; and the Secretary and the Postmaster-General are hereby empowered and required to make and enforce such rules and regulations as shall prevent the importation into the United States, except upon the conditions above specified, of all articles prohibited by this act."

SEC. 5. That section forty-nine hundred and fifty nine of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4959. The proprietor of every copyright book or other article shall deliver at the office of the Librarian of Congress, or deposit in the mail, addressed to the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia,[4] a copy of every subsequent edition wherein any substantial changes shall be made: Provided, however, That the alterations, revisions, and additions made to books by foreign authors, heretofore published, of which new editions shall appear subsequently to the taking effect of this act, shall be held and deemed capable of being copyrighted as above provided for in this act, unless they form a part of the series in course of publication at the time this act shall take effect."

SEC. 6. That section forty-nine hundred and sixty-three of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4963. Every person who shall insert or impress such notice, or words of the same purport, in or upon any book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, print, cut, engraving, or photograph, or other article, for which he has not obtained a copyright, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars, recoverable one-half for the person who shall sue for such penalty and one-half to the use of the United States."

SEC. 7. That section forty-nine hundred and sixty-four of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4964. Every person who, after the recording of the title of any book and the depositing of two copies of such book, as provided by this act, shall, contrary to the provisions of this act, within the term limited, and without the consent of the proprietor of the copyright first obtained in writing, signed in presence of two or more witnesses, print, publish, dramatize, translate, or import, or knowing the same to be so printed, published, dramatized, translated, or imported, sell or expose to sale any copy of such book shall forfeit every copy thereof to such proprietor, and shall also forfeit and pay such damages as may be recovered in a civil action by such proprietor in any court of competent jurisdiction."

SEC. 8. That section forty-nine hundred and sixty-five of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, so amended as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4965. If any person, after the recording of the title of any map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, print, cut, engraving, or photograph, or chromo, or of the description of any painting, drawing, statue, statuary, or model or design intended to be perfected and executed as a work of the fine arts, as provided by this act, shall within the term limited, contrary to the provisions of this act, and without the consent of the proprietor of the copyright first obtained in writing, signed in presence of two or more witnesses, engrave, etch, work, copy, print, publish, dramatize, translate, or import, either in whole or in part, or by varying the main design with intent to evade the law, or, knowing the same to be so printed, published, dramatized, translated, or imported, shall sell or expose to sale any copy of such map or other article as aforesaid, he shall forfeit to the proprietor all the plates on which the same shall be copied and every sheet thereof, either copied or printed, and shall further forfeit one dollar for every sheet of the same found in his possession, either printing, printed, copied, published, imported, or exposed for sale, and in case of a painting, statue, or statuary, he shall forfeit ten dollars for every copy of the same in his possession, or by him sold or exposed for sale; one-half thereof to the proprietor and the other half to the use of the United States."

SEC. 9. That section forty-nine hundred and sixty-seven of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4967. Every person who shall print or publish any manuscript whatever without the consent of the author or proprietor first obtained,[5] shall be liable to the author or proprietor for all damages occasioned by such injury."

SEC. 10. That section forty-nine hundred and seventy-one of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, repealed.[6]

SEC. 11. That for the purpose of this act each volume of a book in two or more volumes, when such volumes are published separately and the first one shall not have been issued before this act shall take effect, and each number of a periodical, shall be considered an independent publication, subject to the form of copyrighting as above.

SEC. 12. That this act shall go into effect on the first day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and ninety-one.

SEC. 13. That this act shall only apply to a citizen or subject of a foreign state or nation when such foreign state or nation permits to citizens of the United States of America the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as its own citizens, or when such foreign state or nation is a party to an international agreement which provides for reciprocity in the granting of copyright, by the terms of which agreement the United States of America may, at its pleasure, become a party to such agreement. The existence of either of the conditions aforesaid shall be determined by the President of the United States by proclamation made from time to time as the purposes of this act may require.

The following are the sections of the Tariff act bearing on the bill:

512. Books, engravings, photographs, bound or unbound, etchings, maps, and charts, which shall have been printed and bound or manufactured more than twenty years at the date of the importation.

513. Books and pamphlets printed exclusively in languages other than English; also books and music in raised print, used exclusively by the blind.

514. Books, engravings, photographs, etchings, bound or unbound, maps and charts imported by authority or for the use of the United States, or for the use of the Library of Congress.

515. Books, maps, lithographic prints and charts especially imported, not more than two copies in any one invoice in good faith, for the use of any society incorporated for educational, philosophical, literary, or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use or by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

[4] Omits: "within ten days after its publication, two complete printed copies thereof, of the best edition issued, or description or photograph of such article as hereinbefore required, and"

[5] Omits: "if such author or proprietor is a citizen of the United States, or resident therein."

[6] SEC. 4971 is as follows: "Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to prohibit the printing, publishing, importation, or sale of any book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, print, cut, engraving, or photograph, written, composed or made by any person not a resident of the United States nor resident therein."

516. Books, or libraries, or parts of libraries and other household effects of persons or families from foreign countries, if actually used by them not less than one year, and not intended for any other person or persons, nor for sale.

THE JOINT CONFERENCE COMMITTEE.

The Joint Conference Committee at New York of the Copyright League and other bodies favoring international copyright, which has carried the brunt of the campaign, has been composed as follows:

For the AMERICAN [AUTHORS'] COPYRIGHT LEAGUE—its Executive Committee: Edward Eggleston, Chairman; R. U. Johnson, Secretary; Thos. W. Knox, Treasurer; Geo. Walton Green, R. R. Bowker; also ex officio, Jas. Russell Lowell, President; E. C. Stedman, Vice-President; also, in place of Dr. Eggleston in his absence, R. W. Gilder.

For the AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' COPYRIGHT LEAGUE: W. H. Appleton, Chairman; G. H. Putnam, W. W. Appleton, Secretaries; Charles Scribner, Treasurer; Jos. W. Harper, A. D. F. Randolph, H. O. Houghton, Craig Lippincott, Henry Holt, Dana Estes (also representing the International Copyright League, Boston).

For the TYPOGRAPHICAL UNIONS, W. E. Boselly, succeeded by Chas. J. Dumar, the President of T. U. No. 6.

For the TYPOTHETÆ, Theo. L. De Vinne.

For the AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, Frank P. Hill.

The original draft on which the Chace bill was modelled is understood to have been made by Henry C. Lea.

"Honor to whom honor is due."

JOHN WILEY—REMINISCENCES.

WE have received word from several sources, since writing our sketch of Mr. Wiley, that there are still alive many more veterans of the book business than we were aware of. The senior of these, it is believed, is Mr. Robert Lindsay, of the old firm of Lindsay & Blakiston, who is now in his eighty-eighth year. Mr. Lindsay was first employed by Mr. Thomas De Silver, senior, of Philadelphia, in 1813, when he was about ten or eleven years old, and was connected with the book trade from that time until 1882, when he retired from business. Mr. Lindsay served with De Silver father and son, then with De Silver, Thomas & Co. and Thos. Cowperthwaite & Co. until 1843, when he and Mr. Presley Blakiston formed a partnership which lasted forty years—making in all a service in the ranks of the book trade of "three score years and ten." Mr. Linsday's partner, Mr. Presley Blakiston, himself has thus far served in the book trade but five years less than his former partner, and promises to remain with it for many more years to come. Mr. Blakiston was apprenticed to Moses Thomas, with whom he remained but a short time. He then entered the employ of Carey & Lea, and remained with their successors, Carey, Lea & Blanchard, until 1843. He knew Mr. Wiley when he was agent for Carey & Lea, and Thomas Wardle. He remembers very well a small room in the second story of an old house that Mr. Wiley occupied in the lower part of New York City before his connection with Mr. Long or Mr. Putnam and his removal to Broadway. At the time Mr. John Wiley first began business for himself the principal jobbers in New York City were Collins & Hanney and Bliss & White. G. & C. Carvill, well-known retail booksellers of their day, had then just begun; the Harper Brothers were just beginning their career as printers and booksellers on Cliff Street; and Daniel Appleton had just left the dry-goods business to open a bookstore back of the old Merchants' Exchange. Philadelphia was then the publishing centre of the United States, Carey & Lea being at the very front; as publishers of the leading English and American authors of their day, and as jobbers and retailers of books. Everything has changed since, and in a few years more few will be left even to remind us of days gone by.

IN our sketch of John Wiley last week the printer caused us to speak of Charles Wesley's "literary den." This is so palpably an error that it seems hardly necessary to state that Mr. Charles Wiley was meant. By the way, that same room was the resort of nearly all the prominent literary men and journalists of the day. Col. Wm. L. Stone, then editor of the New York Commercial Advertiser, was a daily visitor at the "den," and one night Mr. John Wiley found scribbled on a sheet of paper some verses, the following first lines of which are all that he remembered:

"One night, after tea, Mr. Editor Stone Popped into the 'Den' of C. Wiley's alone."

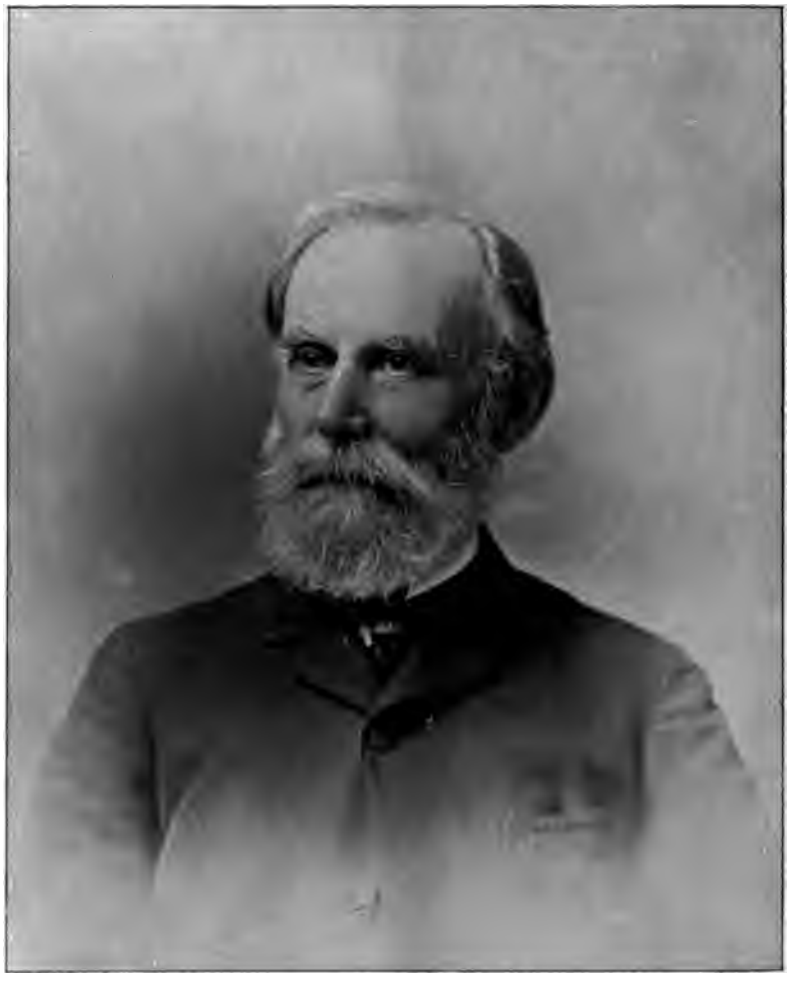
In this same "den," under J. Fenimore Cooper's leadership, was formed the famous "Bread-and-Cheese Club"—the only purely literary club of its day. Their meetings were held at the Washington Hotel, on Broadway near Chambers Street. Members were admitted by bread and cheese. If a name was proposed for admission to membership, and any cheese was found on the plates when the candidate was voted for, he was rejected. Each member took turns as caterer, wearing a key as his badge of office.

The portrait given in this issue is from a recent photograph by Fredericks, of New York, and represents Mr. Wiley as he looked just before his death. Notwithstanding his age, Mr. Wiley was active and quick in his movements and erect in his bearing.

THE "PORT TARASCON" CASE.

THE daily press has, during the past week, circulated a somewhat distorted story concerning a seizure of copies of the illustrated French edition of Daudet's "Port Tarascon" by the New York Custom-House authorities. The facts in the case are briefly these: Messrs. Harper & Brothers made arrangements with M. Daudet for the making and publication of a translation of his "Port Tarascon" into English for the United States and Great Britain. This translation was made by Henry James and copyrighted. Besides this Harper & Brothers also had made for the work a number of illustrations by American engravers, which were also copyrighted by them, and duplicates sold to the French publishers.

To protect their rights in these copyrighted illustrations the Harpers filed a certificate of their copyright with the Collector of Customs at New York City, who ordered that all copies of the illustrated French edition imported should be seized. Accordingly, a number of the volumes of this edition have been taken from the mails at the Customs Bureau in the New York Post-Office building.



JOHN WILEY.

Harper & Brothers made arrangements with the Brentano's, by which the latter had the exclusive right to sell the illustrated French version in this country. J. W. Bouton and another importer, ignoring this arrangement, recently imported copies of "Port Tarascon," which were seized by the customs officials. The books were handed over to Mr. Bouton a short time after, with the consent of Harper & Brothers and Brentano's. Messrs. Harper have also consented to the release of a number of single copies of the French book imported by private parties for their own use, and not for sale.

An appeal was made to the Collector against the right of the customs authorities to stop the transit of this edition through the mail. After consideration the Collector decided in favor of Harper & Brothers.

THE BRAYTON IVES SALE.

THE 5th of March was a red-letter day in the annals of book-lovers and dealers in rare books. Shortly after noon crowds of eager bidders congregated in the rooms of the American Art Association at No. 6 E. Twenty-third St, N. Y. Among those represented were Little, Brown & Co. (Mr. McIntyre); Dodd, Mead & Co. (Mr. Richmond); Estes & Lauriat; D. G. Francis (F. W. Morris); Charles Scribner's Sons (E. D. North); Mitchells (A. J. Bowden); W. E. Benjamin, John Pierce, and others. Of institutions and libraries there were numerous representatives. The Lenox Library, by Dr. Moore; Pennsylvania Historical Society, by Mr. Hildeburn; Columbia College, Massachusetts Historical Society, and the Newberry Library of Chicago, with Mr. Poole the librarian for its representative. The private buyers were also on hand. Among them were Robert Hoe, Beverly Chew, M. C. Lefferts, W. C. Andrews, ex-Judge Arnoux, Judge Truax, Col. Elliott F. Shepard and Theodore L. De Vinne.

Considerable excitement prevailed, which was subdued until Mr. Ives' letter regarding the Columbus letter to Luis De Sant Angel was read and when the Gutenberg Bible was put up for sale. Then the whole audience burst out into thundering applause.

Mr. Ives wrote regarding the Columbus letter that, inasmuch as doubts had been raised in regard to the genuineness of the document, he would give a written guarantee, and agree to take it back at the purchase price at any time within a year, if it were shown that it was not genuine. The first bid was $1000. The bids rose rapidly to $4300, and Dodd, Mead & Co. won it. The same firm secured all the other Columbus letters, at bargain prices, Mr. Ives probably losing heavily on them. Mitchells (A. J. Bowden) secured John Eliot's translation into the Indian language of the Bible, published in 1663 at Cambridge, at $1650. Robert Burns' poems, printed by John Wilson at Kilmarnock, brought $430. Dodd, Mead & Co. got the Balbus, the fourth book printed with a date, at the fair price of $1700. It was at the point of being knocked down at $1000, when Mr. A. J. Bowden of Mitchells' bade on it, and ran it up to the price at which it sold. It was a splendid copy and not at all dear. It sold unbound in the Sunderland sale for £285 to Messrs. Ellis & White, and has since been rebound. The Book of Mormon sold for the high price of $35 (W. E. Benjamin). The Boccaccio of 1473, a choice copy (a poor one fetched £48 lately in London), was sold for $105 to Mitchells.

When the Gutenberg Bible was reached there was a clapping of hands and a genuine stir of excitement. The circumstances under which this copy was purchased, its acknowledged rarity, the various surmises concerning its value, and the report that it was to return to England, gave special importance to its sale. Although it has sixteen leaves in fac-simile, its condition, height, purity of vellum, its illuminated letters, have given it a world-wide reputation. The story of it is well known. Mr. Brinley bought it in Europe. At his sale in 1884 the late Mr. Hamilton Cole purchased it for $8000, Mr. Ives at that time being the next bidder. When the Syston Park copy, badly "cropped," was purchased by Mr. Quaritch for £3500, and offered to Mr. Ives at a small advance, he immediately decided to purchase Mr. Cole's copy. The first bid was $3000 a volume; this was quickly followed by bids of about $500 each until Mr. W. E. Ellsworth, a wealthy Chicago coal merchant and a noted collector of art objects and books, became the purchaser for $14,800—two hundred dollars less than Mr. Ives paid for it. We must defer to our next issue a mention of the other important items of the sale.

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM T. TIBBITTS.

As already noted, William T. Tibbitts, of the firm of Tibbitts & Preston, booksellers and stationers, Providence, R. I., died February 20, aged 56 years. About a year ago he was attacked with the grippe, from which he did not seem really to recover, and shortly before his death a serious kidney trouble set in, which was the immediate cause of his death.

Mr. Tibbitts was one of the leading men in the book trade in Rhode Island. Early in life he manifested a fondness for books, and began his career in the book line as a salesman with the old firm of Gladding Brothers. Here he served about ten years, when he was made a member of the firm, which, upon his entrance, became Gladding Brothers & Tibbitts. In time the Gladdings withdrew, and the junior member of the firm then became the head of a new firm, known as Tibbitts & Randall. At a subsequent period the firm again underwent a change, being known as Tibbitts, Shaw & Company. This firm dissolved in the spring of 1883, and in June Mr. Tibbitts established a store at 64 Westminster Street, of which he was sole proprietor until Feb. 1, 1884, when Howard W. Preston became associated with him as a member of the firm of Tibbitts & Preston. This partnership has continued ever since. Throughout this long and uninterrupted career as a bookseller Mr. Tibbitts showed marked business aptitude and keen literary discrimination. He not only sold the writings of others, but was also a writer himself, and connected with the press in a variety of ways. He had frequently contributed to the Providence Journal articles on bibliography and literary history.

Mr. Tibbitts was the son of James W. Tibbitts, a mason and contractor, and the builder of a portion of the retaining walls of the Cove. He was also a great-grandson of Obadiah Tefft, one of the first settlers of Providence, and a grand-nephew of Ebenezer Knight Dexter. He was a man of uniform courtesy and kindliness, no less than a man of integrity and independence of character, which qualities won for him the respect and esteem of his large clientage and the business community. Mr. Tibbitts was twice married. His first wife was Miss Cobb, of Abington, his second Miss Schuler, of Illinois, who still survives, as do also two daughters. The oldest is Mrs. William H. Keach, of South Attleboro, the other Mrs. Foster H. Townsend, of Providence.

HIRAM T. BLANCHARD, the veteran printer and publisher, died at Fort Edward, Troy, N. Y., on Wednesday, February 25.

FORTUNÉ DU BOISGOBEY, the writer of almost innumerable sensational novels, died in Paris on Friday, February 27. His books were always popular, and have been translated into almost every living language.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

JOHN A. SYMONDS, who has written an exhaustive history of the Renaissance in Italy, is engaged on a life of Michael Angelo.

DR. WASHINGTON GLADDEN is engaged upon a work to be entitled "Who Wrote the Bible?" in which he will give "to the masses frankly and fully the sure results of the higher criticism."

AMELIA E. BARR is to be paid $11,000 for the entire rights to her new novel by a New York publisher, says Mr. Bok. After that she begins her exclusive contract with the Bonners for five years.

C. A. FYFFE, author of the well-known "History of Modern Europe," has in preparation a "History of Greece," for use in schools, and also contemplates publishing selections from the Foreign Office correspondence during the period 1792 to 1815.

"RENASCENCE: A BOOK OF VERSE," by Mr. Walter Crane, with frontispiece and thirty-five other designs by the author, will be published in April by Mr. Elkin Mathews. It will be printed at the Chiswick Press in three editions. Mr. Mathews also announces a volume of songs by Mrs. Ernest Radford, under the title "A Light Load."

MR. WILLIAM MORRIS is getting his press into working order. The printing of "The Golden Legend" will be preceded by that of the romantic story first published in the English Illustrated Magazine under the name of "The Glittering Plain." A very limited number will be printed as the first issue of the Kelmscott Press, by which name Mr. Morris calls his new enterprise.

IT has just developed that the author of "The Chevalier of Pensieri-Vani," recently published by the J. G. Cupples Co., is Henry B. Fuller, of Chicago. This, in some respects, remarkable book, has received a welcome from over half the critical journals of the country as well as from those highest in rank as authors and critics. A book of which that fastidious critic, Prof. Charles Eliot Norton, thought sufficient to make of it a Christmas present to his friend, James Russell Lowell; of which the last-named high authority entertained an opinion high enough to write in acknowledgment of the gift, "It is a precious book; it tastes of genius," and over which Mr. Howells, is enthusiastic, can be no ordinary production.

THE sad news is confirmed that Miss Anna Dickinson, the well-known lecturer and author, has been so far deranged in mind as to be committed to the Asylum for Insane at Danville, Pa. She has been unable to eat or sleep naturally, which, with money troubles and excessive work, has brought about what is considered a deep-seated disease of the mind which leads her to look at everything in a wrong light, and has made her resentful, defiant and suspicious of poisoning. Miss Dickinson was born in 1846 and began lecturing in 1863, which she followed with unusual success until about 1876. At that time she placed her play of "Anne Boleyn" on the stage, and it was a success. She then travelled through the country reading her tragedy, "Aurelian." Her next production, "An American Girl," was played by Fanny Davenport with some success. Miss Dickinson has at present two dramas in manuscript; one, "The Test of Honor," has been read by several managers, who have made offers for it. The other is not quite completed. She wrote a novel, "What Answer?" the plates of which were destroyed at the Houghton & Mifflin fire in Boston. She has lately made arrangements to have a new edition published. Her other books—"A Ragged Register," giving an account of travels in Colorado and California, and "A Paying Investment," a treatise on compulsory education for the poorer classes—have had large sales. Miss Dickinson longed to become an actress, and in 1883 appeared in New York in "Hamlet." On the stage, however, she was a failure, and soon left it to take up her residence in West Pittson, Pa., and continue her literary work.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

ALL who read German and are interested in geographical research will find the publications of the German Geographical Society at Berlin of value and interest. Their titles are as follows: "Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin," Vol. XXVI., 1891, six parts; "Verhandlungen der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin," Vol. XVIII., 1891, ten parts; the price of the two being $2.75. These publications have enjoyed in the course of their long existence, a large circulation among scientific libraries and clubs throughout the world, as well as among geographers, travellers, explorers, and scientific men generally. The publisher is W. H. Kühl, Berlin, W., Jägerstrasse 73.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL CO. are agents for the papers for boys and girls published by the Religious Tract Society of London, which are always ably edited and attractively printed. The Boys' Own Paper is full of information dear to the curious minds and busy fingers of little men, and they can find how to hunt butterflies, how to prepare and mount objects for the microscope, how to boil water in a paper bag etc., etc., all made clear with many well-printed illustrations; The Girls' Own Paper is fully as attractive in its supplies of girlish lore; The Leisure Hour appeals to older minds and gives most varied information on all timely topics, besides most carefully selected fiction; and Sunday at Home gives in every number reading-matter enough to make the longest, rainiest Sunday seem a pleasant hour.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

THE SOCIETY FOR POLITICAL EDUCATION, 330 Pearl St., New York, will publish, March 16, its "Reader's Guide to Economic, Social and Political Science." In its preparation the editors, R. R. Bowker and George Iles, have had the co-operation of twenty-six specialists. The Guide gives carefully selected lists of works in all its departments, with details of publisher, price, number of pages, and size. To the more important titles a brief descriptive or critical note is appended; where practicable and desirable, a prefatory note tells which are the best books in a department, and in what order they can most profitably be studied. In addition to books, magazine articles of weight are mentioned, as also reports, governmental and other. The references to publications by the departments at Washington are particularly full and valuable. Every association of importance in this country for the promotion of an economic, political or philanthropic aim is noted, and the publications of these associations are indicated. Reading courses, elementary, intermediate and advanced, are prescribed, and the Guide concludes with a summary of the courses in economic and political science offered in the principal colleges of the United States to men and women. A copious index doubles the value of the work. To the reader, student, librarian and bookseller the Guide will prove an indispensable aid in a field of literature which constantly increases in importance. The price of the book will be 50 cents in paper, and $1 in cloth.

M. B.-H. GAUSSERON, whose bibliographical contributions to Le Livre Moderne are familiar to some of our readers, has conceived the idea of compiling a sort of French "Book Prices Current"—a priced catalogue of recent book sales in France. The full title of the work is "Bibliographie Instructive; Petit Manuel du Bibliophile et du Libraire, donnant la valeur actuelle des livres anciennes ou modernes recherchés et appréciés, gravures, manuscrits, reliures, etc. Notes sur les Variations et la Plusvalue du Prix des Livres les plus estimés en tout genre et la Mode en Bibliophilie." The catalogue will be issued in fortnightly parts, 24 parts to the volume, 16 francs for the year. Indexes of both authors and titles are promised. The publisher is Ed. Rouveyre, 66 Rue de Seine, Paris. Now that French books come up for sale so frequently in our auction-rooms, M. Gausseron's Manual may be found useful by collectors. In the three parts just issued we notice Dorat's "Les Baisers," large paper, 1130 frs. (£45); the "Fermiers Généraux" edition of La Fontaine, 650 frs. (£26); the fifth edition of Montaigne, 385 frs. (£15). Cruikshank and Rowlandson seem to be in greater demand, even in France, than Gavarni and Cham.

THE CHURCH LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, Cambridge, Mass., of whose good work we have already had occasion to make mention, has just issued a List of Books dated Lent, 1891 comprising "Books which bear directly upon church life, history, or doctrine," as well as such as are not distinctly church books. The list may be had free on application to the Secretary at Cambridge. (14 p., 16°.)

Catalogues of New and Second-hand Books.—John H. W. Cadby, Springfield, Mass., Americana, etc. (No. 4, 842 titles.)—Ch. Chadenat, 21 Quai des Grands-Augustins, Paris, Livres, cartes, et documents relatifs à l'Europe, l'Asie, l'Afrique, l'Amérique, l'Océanie. (No. 7, 1395 titles.)—William B. Harrison, 3 E. 24th St., N. Y., Priced list of books, drawing materials, etc. (16 p. 16°.)—Otto Harrassowitz, Queerstrasse, 14, Leipzig, a valuable catalogue of MSS., Incunabula, and early illustrated books. (No. 171, 586 titles.) William R. Jenkins, 851 6th Ave., The Book Review (v. 1, no. 1, 10 c.)—Henry Sotheran & Co., 136 Strand, London, Price Current of Literature. (No. 501, Feb.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

JOHN WILEY & SONS have in preparation "Ordnance and Gunnery," by Capt. Henry Metcalfe, U. S. A.

A LOVELL & CO. will publish shortly Alarcón's "El Final de Norma," translated by Mrs. Francis J. A. Darr.

J. W. WEEDON is about to close out his second-hand school-book business, and will go in the real estate line. His stock will be sold at auction about April 1.

DERBY & MILLER, 149 Church St., N. Y., announce that the "Autobiography of Wm. H. Seward, his part in the emancipation of the slave and in the defence of the Union," is now complete in three volumes.

HUBBARD BROTHERS, Philadelphia, announce a life of General Sherman, by Willis Fletcher Johnson, assisted by Maj.-Gen. O. O. Howard, an intimate friend of Sherman's. It will be fully illustrated, and sold only by subscription.

IN the Camelot Series the April volume will be "Our Village," by Miss Mitford, edited by Ernest Rhys; and in the Canterbury Poets. Series the May volume will be "American Humorous Verse," selected and edited by James Barr.

THE FOREST AND STREAM PUBLISHING CO. announce a new and enlarged edition of "Fly-Fishing and Fly-Making for Trout," by J. Harrington Keene. The illustrations are actual specimens of the silk, feathers and other materials used in fly-making.

MR. AUGUSTIN DALY, New York, has just issued an edition of 113 copies (of which only thirty are for sale) of Mr. William Winter's monograph of Miss Ada Rehan, which is entitled "A Daughter of Comedy." It contains thirty portraits and groups.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING CO. have nearly ready two novels—one by Maurice Jokai, the Hungarian, entitled "There Is no Devil," which has been translated from the manuscript; and the other a translation of a Spanish novel by Madame Bazan, called "A Christian Woman."

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS will publish this month a book compiled from the columns of the London Times and forming a narrative—written from the conservative point of view, of course—of recent political events, entitled "The Parnellite Split, or, the disruption of the Irish Parliamentary party."

GINN & CO. will publish, during the summer, in their College Series of Greek Authors, "The Prometheus Bound of Æschylus," with introduction and notes by N. Wecklein, Rector of the Maximilian Gymnasium in Munich. The translation is by F. D. Allen, who has added references to American grammatical works.

"THE AUTOGRAPH PIG BOOK" is the latest "literary" novelty in Chicago. It is bound in white and gold and has blank pages on which contestants vie with one another in making sketches of a pig. The one who draws the worst pig while trying to draw the best takes the prize. It is thought that pig clubs will be very popular this spring in Chicago.

CHARLES L. WEBSTER & CO. have just issued a new edition of "General Sherman's Memoirs" written by himself, complete in one volume, which has been revised and corrected by Hon. James G. Blaine, and has had a chapter added describing the end of the General's life and the demonstration attending the burial. The two-volume edition, uniform with the memoirs of Grant, Sheridan, McClellan and other celebrated Generals, is also ready once more.

BRENTANO'S new publications announced for early issue are "Foster's Whist Manual," an important practical treatise, which has met with instant success in England and America; "Foster's Self-Playing Whist Cards," a novel and ingenious method for self-instruction and practice in whist; "Gentlemen, Their Dress and Deportment," a book containing valuable suggestions never previously embodied in a work of etiquette; and a new edition of "Mother's Help," by Carrica Le Favre.

FORDS, HOWARD & HULBERT have in hand, to be published shortly, another little volume by Amos K. Fiske, "Beyond the Bourne: Reports by a Returned Traveller from 'The Undiscovered Country.'" Speculation as to the hereafter always seems to have a fascination for people who read, and Mr. Fiske has made for himself an appreciative "public." This author's previous volume, "Midnight Talks at the Club," was one of the most suggestive and stimulating books of last year.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS announce a valuable book of which the title is not yet made public. It will consist of artistic reproductions of the photographs of at least sixty-four of the more familiar birds of North America, with descriptive text, by John B. Grant, and will fill an important place in popular ornithological literature. They are also preparing "Spain and Morocco," by Henry T. Finck; and a volume of "Original Charades in Verse," by L. B. A. Briggs, a few of which have already appeared in Scribner's Magazine.

"IT is true that American negroes are now among the book writers in this country," said a learned negro. "I have made a collection of books by American negro writers, and there may be a great many more than I have got. Some of them are good books, too. Among them are works of poetry and volumes of sermons, beside novels. A great many negroes are now well educated, and more of them are getting to be. We have negro professors and doctors and editors, and we have always had plenty of negro preachers. I believe that, before a hundred years from now, the American negro will do his share of thinking in the world."—N Y. Sun.

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY CO. have just issued a reprint of "The Workings of the Holy Spirit in the Church of England," by Cardinal Manning, a letter addressed by the Cardinal to Rev. E. B. Pusey, D.D., first published separately in 1864, and afterwards in "England and Christendom" in 1867. The present edition is intended to take the place of the 1864 edition, which is out of print. They have also just issued "At Oberammergau in 1890," by P. J. O'Reilly, a series of papers written for an English magazine during the progress of the play, together with a sketch of the history of the play and a list of the chief books published on the subject by English writers. The book contains about twenty illustrations.

L. PRANG & CO.'s new line of Easter goods fully equals, if it does not surpass, their former productions for refined taste, chaste and delicate designs and appropriate selections. This is expressed not alone in the cards but also in the handsomely and tastefully gotten-up tokens for Easter in books and booklets, in hand-painted and decorated novelties, in satin art prints made up in silk, satin and plush, including novelties in sachets, easel scarfs, mouchoir cases, portfolios, realistic shape mounts, etc., in all of which their line is unsurpassed, presenting a full variety of prices from the comparatively inexpensive to the costliest. Besides cards and booklets they have issued three shaped booklets: 1435 Bk., "Easter Lilies," from the Poets' Garden, illustrated in pen drawings by F. Schuyler Mathews, in the shape of a bunch of Easter lilies; 1436 Bk., "A Bunch of Daffodils," verses by Robert Herrick and Wm. Wordsworth, illustrated in pen drawings by F. Schuyler Mathews, in the shape of a bunch of daffodils; and 1437 Bk., "The Mayflowers," by J. G. Whittier, illustrated in pen drawings by F. Schuyler Mathews, in the shape of a bunch of Mayflowers. They have also a variety of new designs in their satin art prints, in the shape of sachets, mats, etc., as already noted.

JOHN MURRAY, London, expects to have the promised Jenny Lind biography ready this month. It has been prepared by Canon Scott Holland and W. S. Rockstro. The material at their disposal has been very abundant.

THE second volume of Mr. Charles Booth's "Labour and Life of the People" will be published next month. It will contain London street by street, Central London, South and outlying London, London children, etc. Five large maps and several tables of comparative poverty will also be given in a separate volume.

A WORK on "French Revolutionary Generals," dealing with the period between 1792 and 1796, and with Dumouriez, Hoche, Jourdan, and Marceau, is announced in London. It has been written by Major Arthur Griffiths, who has exhumed new facts about men whom the world has neglected owing to the overshadowing figure of Napoleon.

THE next volume of the Saga Library, translated and edited by Mr. William Morris and Mr. Magnusson, and published by B. Quaritch, will contain the "Eyrbyggia Saga," one of the most historical of the Sagas that deal with purely Icelandic matters. The volume is far advanced towards completion. The fragments of the "Heath-Slayings Saga" will be added in an appendix.

MR. GAY, late manager of Brentano's London Branch, and previously with Trübner & Co, for eleven years and Quaritch for five years, has started business on his own account in conjuction with Mr. Bird, proprietor of "The American Newspaper Agency," and the new firm will carry on business at 15 King William St., Strand, London, as importers of American books, periodicals and newspapers; also as publishers' agents.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

No True Mother's Heart Can Resist it.

"DON AND THE BABIES."

FROM A PHOTOGRAPH FROM LIFE.

Size, 14 x 18 on 22 x 28 board, carefully mounted ready for framing.

Retails for $1.00 ; to the trade, 65 cents net, or hundred lots @ 60 cents.

(COPYRIGHT BY RUFUS C. HARTRANFT, 1891.)

THIS CUT IS JUST ONE-TWELFTH THE SIZE OF THE ORIGINAL.

ONE of the sweetest baby pictures ever issued : delicate in suggestion, exquisite in execution, keenly sympathetic, appealing to every man and woman who knows the sound of baby prattle and the tender kiss of innocent child-lips. Hans Christian Andersen said : "God loves children with a tenderness and holiness that man can never understand ; they are the perfection of Divine gifts."

The most eminent picture dealer of New York said: "You have a fine picture—one that touches the sympathies of men and women alike—and we predict a very unusual and satisfactory sale."

Orders may be placed through any Book or Picture Jobber, the American News Co., or direct with the publisher, at the above cash rates.

☞ Sample copy, packed flat between boards, will be forwarded to any address on receipt of 50 cents in two-cent stamps, in order to permit dealers to judge of the large picture and to test its selling qualities. Should any one so purchasing be dissatisfied, the amount will be returned, plus the postage, to the sender. We are pretty sure of our work or we could not make this offer.

The advance orders in New York have been sufficiently large to permit our going to work upon five times the original number contemplated.

This picture may be canvassed with great success, and dealers who are enterprising will find that a smart, active woman can go out and secure an average of ten orders a day among any ordinary country or city population—and without the outlay of more than the sample copy.

RUFUS C. HARTRANFT, PUBLISHER,

No. 78 Fifth Avenue, N. Y., and 709 Sansom Street, Phila.

☞ Magazines and newspapers are requested to send cash rate for insertion of above matter, including the cut.

To be followed shortly by 2 vols. in uniform style entitled

POSTHUMOUS WORKS OF DE QUINCEY.

Edited, with introduction, notes and narrative by ALEXANDER H. JAPP, LL.D., F.R.S.E.

Extract from the Editor's Preface.

"Mrs. Baird Smith and Miss De Quincey, who entrusted to me these letters and papers relating to the De Quincey family, have also in many ways aided me in the task of arranging and editing them, and to these ladies my most grateful thanks are due. I trust that I have not failed in clearing up any obscure or doubtful point in the letters. To me, I confess, the work has been a labor of love—for each of the members of this remarkable family in turn caught my interest and kept it—to such an extent, indeed, that I confess my task became a pleasure, and not the least of the elements contributing to increase this pleasure was the fact that, even at this late date and after all that has been written on the Opium Eater, many new side-lights have been cast on his personality and character by this later 'find' of materials."

No Library will be complete without these volumes. As the edition is limited, send your order early.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, per vol., cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

No. 145. A MINT OF MONEY. By GEO. MANVILLE FENN.

Fenn's novels are all interesting, the characters are original and the local coloring is always correct.

"Everything Mr. Fenn writes is interesting."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

No. 146. A LOST ILLUSION. By LESLIE KEITH.

A new novel by the author of "The Chilcotes" and "A Hurricane in Petticoats," which the Manchester Examiner styles "a perfect story."

BULWER——THACKERAY.

A New Édition de Luxe of

BULWER LYTTON'S COMPLETE NOVELS.

The best and only elegantly illustrated library edition of the brilliant and entertaining novels of Bulwer ever issued in this or any other country.

It will be enriched by about 200 photogravures from paintings by the most noted American illustrators, or reproductions of actual scenes, which will be of great value in bringing before the mind of the reader the real historical background of the scenes depicted in such vivid colors by the author. The illustrations will be proof impressions on imperial Japanese paper.

The text paper will be manufactured especially for this edition, and will be a natural tint laid paper, made of the finest materials, such as are used in hand-made paper, and containing no clay or other filling.

The work will be printed from new electrotype plates, set from new type; and the volume will be bound in English vellum cloth, library style, with paper titles, gilt tops, and uncut edges.

The work will be issued at the rate of about two volumes per month. The edition will be limited to one thousand, and will be sold only in complete sets, which will be numbered and registered.

The price for the complete works, in thirty-two volumes, bound in vellum cloth, gilt top, uncut, paper titles, is $2.50 per volume.

THACKERAY'S COMPLETE WORKS.

LIMITED TO 1000 NUMBERED COPIES.

Unquestionably the handsomest edition of Thackeray's writings, the nearest approach to the highest ideals of perfection in bookmaking ever attempted in this country.

The type is from a new font especially cast for it, and never used for any other purpose.

The paper, also especially made for it, combines the qualities of excellence in finish and in the materials used with a lightness of weight that prevents the volume from being uncomfortably heavy to hold and read.

The illustrations, a distinguishing feature on account of the great variety and excellence, consist of 210 wood-cuts, mainly from drawings of the author, and reproductions from the drawings of Millais, Barnard, and Luke Fildes, together with two etched portraits, twenty original etchings, together with the famous etchings by George Cruikshank, over twenty-five in number, and many photogravures from scenes referred to.

All of these illustrations will be proof impressions on imperial Japanese paper, especially imported for this work.

The set will be completed in 30 volumes, at the rate of about two volumes per month.

Price, bound in vellum cloth, gilt tops, uncut, $2.50 per vol.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE Annual Spring Trade Sale will take place as usual during the month of April, at the salesrooms of George A. Leavitt & Co., 787 Broadway, N. Y.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. have in press a volume of travel by Sir Edwin Arnold, entitled "By Sea and Land," to be abundantly illustrated from photographs; also Rider Haggard's new novel, "Eric Brighteyes."

HARPER & BROTHERS will publish shortly a new volume of stories of New England life by Mary E. Wilkins, called "A New England Nun, and Other Stories." The author's first volume has been reprinted in Edinburgh and translated into French.

GINN & Co. will publish in April "The Children's Primer," by Miss Ellen McCyr, which will be fully illustrated. They have also in press a pamphlet on the "Essential Uses of the Moods," by Robert P. Keep, Principal of Free Academy, Norwich, Conn., revised by Prof. John C. Rolfe, of Michigan University.

ROBERTS BROS. have just ready Balzac's "The Lily of the Valley" (Le Lys dans la Vallée), translated by Miss Wormeley; a revised edition of Dr. G. T. Dippold's "The Great Epics of Mediæval Germany;" and a new and cheaper edition of F. B. Sanborn's "Life and Letters of John Brown," illustrated.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will shortly publish "Dangers of the Apostolic Age," by the Bishop of Manchester, the Rt. Rev. Dr. James Moorhouse, which is already in its second edition in London. He has also nearly ready two volumes in the illustrated series of Science Ladders, by N. D'Anvers, the titles of which are "Life Story of Our Earth" and "Life Story of Man."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just ready "Original Charades," fifty or more ingenious and original charades in verse, by L. B. R. Briggs; "A Manual of Wood-carving,' by C. G. Leland, fully illustrated; and a new edition of Brander Matthews' "French Dramatists of the 19th Century," with an additional chapter, bringing the review of the French drama down to the present time.

ESTES & LAURIAT have in preparation a fine edition of Thackeray's works limited to a thousand copies, numbered, and sold only in complete sets. It will be richly illustrated, including many reproductions of Thackeray's own drawings. It will consist of thirty volumes, two of which will appear each month. They have also in preparation an edition de luxe of Bulwer Lytton's works, in thirty-two volumes, illustrated with about two hundred photogravures, many of them taken from nature.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THOMAS HARDY is at work on a novel to be entitled "To Please His Wife."

THE late Cardinal Newman, in his will, bequeathed all of his manuscripts and copyrights of his books to the Rev. Mr. Neville. The entire value of the late Cardinal's estate is £3574.

DR. SANDYS has undertaken to prepare for Messrs. Macmillan & Co. a critical and explanatory edition of Aristotle's "Constitution of Athens," which will probably form a volume of their well-known Classical Library.

MRS. ALEXANDER IRELAND has, after long preparatory study, written a life of Jane Welsh Carlyle, which will contain several characteristic letters hitherto unpublished, including a very interesting one in fac-simile, and a lifelike portrait.

EMILE ZOLA will begin work as soon as possible on his next novel, "La Guerre." He will visit the city and battle-ground of Sedan, in order to obtain material for an account of the famous battle fought there between the French and the Prussians Sept. 2, 1870, when Napoleon III., at the head of an army of 90 000 men, surrendered to the victorious Prussians. This description of the battle of Sedan will occupy a third of his forthcoming novel.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); (Q. 4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.) D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

American state reports; cont. the cases of general value and authority, subsequent to those contained in the "Am. Decisions" and the "Am. Reports," decided in the courts of last resort of the several states; sel., rep. and annot. by A. C. Freeman. V. 16. San Francisco, Bancroft-Whitney Co., 1891. c. 5–1018 p. O. shp., $4.

Austin, Alf. Savonarola: a tragedy. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 9+306 p. 12°, cl., $1.75.

Bacon, Eugenia Jones. A stone from Oberammergau; with a description of the wonderful phenomenon. N. Y., Ja. Pott & Co., 1891. 19 p. il. D. pap., 25 c.

The "stone" is a bit of rock picked up on the Kofelspitze, and afterward found to be a remarkable natural sculpture resembling a head of Christ. A description of the Passion Play, as given in 1880, is included.

Bierbower, Austin. Socialism of Christ; or, attitude of early Christians toward modern problems. Chic., C: H. Sergel & Co., [1891.] 202 p. D. cl., $1.

The author holds that Christianity was the outgrowth of a dissatisfaction of the populace and a socialistic movement, that Christ's motives were more political than religious, and his doctrines more ethical than spiritual. To substantiate this argument, the personality of Christ in his relation to the different classes that upheld his cause is considered, the conditions of men of Christ's day are dealt with, the Christian tenets and their different phases are described, and personal theories on the subject are advanced.

Bible. New Testament. N. Y., P. J. Kenedy, 1891. 215 p. 8°, vel. cl., $1.50.

Black, W: H:, D.D. Womanhood. Nashville, Tenn., Cumberland Presb. Pub. House, [1891.] 110 p. S. cl., 50 c.

Lectures delivered in the Lucas Ave. [Cumberland] Presbyterian Church. The subjects are: A wife's wages; Women of society; Women as public teachers; The ideal wife; More about the ideal wife; and Woman and Christian progress.

Browning, Rob. Easter interpreted: citations from Rob. Browning, chosen and arr. by Rose Porter. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1891.] c. 28 p. S. pap., 20 c.

Burney, S. G., D.D. Studies in psychology. Nashville, Tenn., Cumberland Presb. Pub. House, 1890 [1891.] c. '90. 16+535 p. D. cl., $1.75.

An attempt to simplify the subject of mental science, to give clear and distinct conceptions of the psychical faculties and their susceptibilities with relative phenomena and the governing laws of the study.

Burr, E. F., D.D. Aleph, the Chaldean; or, the Messiah as seen from Alexandria. N.Y., Wilbur B. Ketcham, [1891.] c. '91. 2+413 p. D. cl., $1.75.

Aleph the Chaldean and his Greek preceptor appear in Alexandria. The young man matriculates at the university, his chief object apparently being the acquisition of the learning of the East and study of its institutions. Through Rachel, a beautiful daughter of the Pharaohs, whose mother is in Judea, he learns of the Messiah, the period of the story being that shortly preceding and following the ascension of Christ. The plot is intricate and the various features of life in Alexandria, its divers people and religions, its temples, palaces, colleges, courts and dungeons are carefully described. By the author of "Ecce-cœlum" and "Pater Mundi."

Cable, G: W. The busy man's Bible, and how to study and teach it. Meadville, Pa., Flood & Vincent, 1891. c. 81 p. D. cl., 75 c.

The author points out that Bible study should be made a routine of life. He advances theories why this should be done, and endeavors to show how it can be accomplished.

Carus, Paul. The soul of man: an investigation of the facts of physiological and experimental psychology. Chic., The Open Court Pub. Co., 1891. 16+458 p. il. and diagrams, D. cl., $3.

The author, the editor of the Open Court, has grouped under this title various articles on a wide range of topics which have appeared in that paper. They treat of "The philosophical problem of mind," "Rise of organized life," "Physiology of brain activity," "Immortality of the race," "Fecundation and sex-formation," "Experimental psychology," "Hypnotism," etc., and "Ethical and religious aspects of soul-life."

Characteristic (A) of modern life: five essays, by the author of the "Recreations of a country parson." N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1891.] 74 p. S. leatherette, 40 c.

"The great characteristic of modern life is worry." This sentence of Arthur Helps serves as text for the five essays, reprinted by an arrangement with the author and his English publishers from a volume entitled "Our little life; a series of essays consolatory and domestic: first series."

Cherry, R: R. Lectures on the growth of criminal law in ancient communities. N.Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 11+123 p. 8°, cl., $1.25.

Cooper, Louise. Behind a mask: a novel. Chic., Laird & Lee, [1891.] c. 5–277 p. D. (Pastime ser., no. 53.) pap., 25 c.

The scene is at Oceanside, a summer resort on the Massachusetts coast. The heroine, known as Mrs. Brown, had captivated most of the hearts in the place, when the arrival of Mrs. Thearle, of Boston, caused a revolution in feeling and the reopening of a former feud. The story is sensational. The mask is an assumed name.

Cruls, Abbé. The blessed Sacrament and the Church of St. Martin at Liège; tr. by permission of Msgr. Doutreloux, bp. of Liège, by W: S. Preston. N. Y., Catholic Pub. Soc. Co., 1891. 160 p. 16°. cl., net, $1.

Verses that deal with varied subjects and many phases of modern life.

Drummond, H: Are they not safe with him? N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph, [1891.] 2+4 p. obl. Fe. pap., 25 c.

Four stanzas; a message of consolation to the bereaved.

Eggleston, G: Cary, and, Marbourg, Dolores. Juggernaut: a veiled record. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hulbert, 1891. c. 4+343 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The hero, the editor of a river town newspaper, "commits suicide" in the first chapter, writes his obituary and compels his foreman to set it up. More literally, he, who had always been an honorable man, allows himself to be bought in the interests of a dishonest railway scheme. Love of gain and love of power form the Juggernaut which crushes him and his lovely young wife.

Elliott, Charles, D.D. Christus mediator. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1891. 145 p. D. cl., 75 c.

An historical and exegetical treatise on the doctrine of the atonement, written by the Professor of Hebrew in Lafayette College, Easton, Pa. Gives explanations of the controversies concerning the orthodox doctrine of the Christian Church, and explains the positions of Gnosticism, Doketism, Ebionitism, Arianism, Nestorianism, Entychiantism, etc., etc.

Forbes, Edwin. Thirty years after: an artist's story of the great war; told and il. with nearly 300 relief-etchings after sketches in the field and 20 half-tone equestrian pors. from original oil-paintings. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hulbert, [1890-91.] c. '90. [Section 1.] 1+79 p. pors. il. sq. F., in 20 divisions, large pap. subs., 50 c. ea.; or, in 4 sections, flex. cl., subs., $3 ea.

The author was a special newspaper correspondent and artist with the armies in the field during the Civil War. In 1885 he published a series of 65 copper plate etchings on 40 plates, entitled "Life studies of the great army," brought out by W. W. Robacher, Rochester, N. Y. These etchings had received the highest art award of their class at the Centennial Exposition. The present work includes these plates reproduced by a cheaper process, with some additional full page illustrations and numerous sketches and pictorial initials and vignettes inserted in the text. The eighty chapters of text are a commentary on picturesque phases of army life, written out from memoranda jotted down on the field, and in conjunction with the sketches reproduce with vivid realism the fun, the tragedy, the comedy, the dulness, the gayety, and the toil of military life as illustrated by infantry, cavalry, artillery, engineers, scouts, foragers, the drummer-boy and the "coffee-cooler."

Foster, R. V., D.D. A commentary on the Epistle to the Romans. Nashville, Tenn., Cumberland Presb. Pub. House, 1891. c. 8+414 p. D. cl., $1.75.

Presents authorities on the date of the Epistle, its authenticity, the attitude of the Church of Rome in that time, etc. There is also an introduction, with a biographical sketch of St. Paul.

Fradenburgh, J. N., D.D. Fire from strange altars. Cin., O., Cranston & Stowe, [1891.] c. 3-324 p. il. D. cl., 90 c.

A study of the environment of the religion of the Hebrews, and the effect of the religions by which it was surrounded upon its own development. The roots of the religion of Israel are found imbedded in other soils; many of its forms are borrowed and adapted. The best commentary on the Bible is "extant in three volumes, Babylonia, Palestine, Egypt," and it can only be properly understood as studied in connection with the history of their civilization, in the midst of which it lived in obedience to the law of the survival of the fittest.

Gage, Alfred P. Physical laboratory manual and note-book, incl. more than two hundred experiments and exercises, and especially adapted to accompany the author's text-books on physics. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1891. c. '90. 12+121 p. D. bds., 45 c.

Experiments are chosen adapted to the usual facilities of secondary schools, and requiring moderate time, close observation and use of the reasoning faculties. Pages are left blank for recording results obtained and the mathematical computations. Directions for performing the experiments are given in direct and simple language.

Gilmore, Mary Isabel. Lessons in industrial drawing; incl. form-study, paper-folding, stick-laying, construction, representation, decoration. Bost., Educational Pub. Co., 1890 [1891.] c. 107 p. il. sq. D. (Ball's ser. of text-books.) bds., 40 c.

Drawing is the expression of ideas of form, therefore form-study should precede drawing. Young pupils progress more rapidly if they make the forms they study; for this reason, lessons in paper-folding and stick-laying are first given. The book is designed for use by teachers of elementary drawing. Dictation exercises, to accustom the pupil to drawing "by ear" as well as by the eye. Outline drawings and the principles of conventional design are methodically presented.

Grant, Rob. Mrs. Harold Stagg: a novel. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, [1891.] 4-240 p. D. (Choice ser., no. 31.) pap., 50 c.

The drawing-rooms of New York, Boston and Newport contain many a woman like Mrs. Harold Stagg. With unflagging energy she undertakes the care of her husband's niece and two nephews upon the death of their father, and the story deals with her worldly wisdom in controlling the young girl's ideals and aspirations. When finally conquered she takes complete charge of extensive wedding arrangements.

Kinston, Whitehall and Goldsboro [North Carolina] expedition. December 1862. N. Y., W. W. Howe, 157 E. 37th St., 1890 [1891.] c. '90. 92+12 p. S. cl., $1.50.

Account of the expedition that was planned to destroy connection between Richmond and the South, to keep the Confederates from sending troops to the support of General Lee when General Burnside was marching on Fredericksburgh, December, 1862. The letterpress is from the N. Y. Herald, Dec. 20-25, 1862, also from N. Y. Times. The illustrations, which are printed on separate sheet, are reproduced by arrangement from Harper's "History of the Rebellion."

Leavens, Philo F., D.D. The planting of the kingdom: a synopsis of the missionary enterprise. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1890 [1891.] 48 p. D. cl., 40 c.

A brief résumé of the missionary activity of Christian churches throughout the world since the discovery of America. Events are given in chronological order, dates in the margin, under a heading indicating some section of the globe. Originally prepared for the Synod of New Jersey, for the purpose of increasing interest in missions, and now revised and enlarged, gives a "bird's-eye view" of what has been done toward the Christianizing of the world in the last four centuries.

Livius Patavinus, Titus. Books xxi. and xxii.; ed. on the basis of Wölfflin's ed. with introd. by J: K. Lord. Bost. and N. Y., Leach, Shewell & Sanborn, 1891. c. '90. 26+388 p. maps, S. (Student's ser. of Latin classics.) cl., $1.20.

Wölfflin's text has been adhered to literally, but in an appendix there is a brief consideration of the variations of the mss.

Livius Patavinus, Titus. Livy, Book 27; with introd. and notes, by H. M. Stephenson. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 23+140 p. 16°, cl., $1.10.

Mackay, T:, ed. A plea for liberty: an argument against socialism and socialistic legislation: consisting of an introd. by Herbert Spencer, and essays by various writers, ed. by T: Mackay. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. 24+414 p. O. cl., $2.25.

Essays critical of socialism and socialistic legislation. Herbert Spencer's introduction brings down to date the arguments of "The Man vs. the State." While holding the present social order to be neither happy nor just, he deems its improvement to be not in legislative restriction or state control, but in full freedom for both individual initiative and voluntary co-operation. He maintains that a caste of officials would rise in a socialistic regime, divorced from the body of the people in sentiment and interest, and inflicting injuries vastly more serious than those incident to free competition. Mr. Fairfield, in "State socialism in the Antipodes," gives an adverse review of Sir C: Dilke's picture in "Problems of Greater Britain," declaring that the prosperity of Australian state control of railroads and the like is bought at the expense of the British subscriber to ever-increasing colonial loans. The other contributors discuss various phases of state interference in the economic and social sphere in the key set by Mr. Spencer.

McLaren, E. T. Dr. John Brown and his sister Isabella: outlines. [N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1891.] 60 p. pors. il. O. cl., $1.50.

Two short sketches, written by a dear friend of the Brown family. She brings out the wholly unselfish and deeply sympathetic nature of Dr. Brown, his power to see in every-day life what others did not see; his desire to tell it and make others share his feelings, which forced him to write, and made his conversation a liberal education. She also describes the beautiful life of Isabella Brown, who had friends among all sorts and conditions of men, women and children, and added a superb education to her many charms. The frontispiece is a portrait of Dr. Brown, after a photograph by Caldesi, London, 1859; and there is another from a photograph by M. Bowners, Ambleside, 1866. The pencil-sketch of Miss Brown, taken in 1866, shows a beautiful profile. The book is handsomely printed.

Magnusson, Eirikr, and others. National life and thought of the various nations throughout the world: a series of addresses. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., 1891. 6+414 p. O. cl., $3.

The lectures were delivered on Sunday afternoons, at South Place Institute, London, during 1889-90, and were designed to give information in a popular form and by sympathetic and trustworthy accounts of the national development and political action of various nations, namely: Armenia, Austria, Hungary, Germany, Russia-Poland, Italy, Spain, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Iceland, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Greece, Turkey, Egypt, Servia and Montenegro, the Jews and the Gypsies. It is thought a general dissemination of these facts would not only improve our institutions, but stimulate interest in foreign countries, and tend to promote international amity.

Jacqueline Meunier, who tells the story of "Mademoiselle," is a peasant girl, one of a large family in the north of France. She goes to the relief of a sister in Paris at the time of the siege, taking with her the schoolmaster's carrier pigeons. During the perils of the siege the thoughtfulness, generosity and courage of "Mademoiselle," and the brave devotion of Jacquette are shown in bright contrast to the treachery and selfishness of other characters in the story.

Reunited: a story of the civil war; by a popular Southern author; il. by F. A. Carter. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, 1891. c. '90, '91. 350 p. il. D. (Choice ser., no. 30.) pap., 50 c.

Two sons of Kentucky took opposite sides at the breaking out of the war. Harry, the younger, and the Confederate, was engaged to the daughter of a Union officer. Paul, the Union man, loves a woman of southern sympathies. The story deals with events of army life on the Cumberland, the hospitals, a court-martial and guerilla raids. A vein of comedy enlivens the gloom of treasons, strategems and spoils.

Stickney, J. H. Word by word advanced: a spelling-book for the use of grammar and common schools. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1891. c. '90. 152 p. D. cl., 30 c.

The material comprises the usual words of the English vocabulary of a common school pupil "Odd and rare words require least of any to be taken into account." A person instructed in the rudiments will instinctively observe the singular and unusual words. A "Teachers' edition" is interleaved with selections of direct and forceful English prose, to serve as dictation exercises and illustrations of the meaning. Lessons are classified in order to illustrate some general principle applying to the words chosen.

United States. (State Department.) Bureau of American Republics. Bull. no. 1: Handbook of the American republics. Wash., D. C., Government Printing Office, 1891. 288 p. maps, il. O. pap.

At the International American conference in session at Washington, from October 2, 1889-April 19, 1890, all the independent nations of North, Central and South America, with the Republic of Hayti, were represented. They formed the International Union of American Republics, for the purpose of collecting and distributing commercial information. This bureau was to be under the supervision of the Department of State, Washington. The union proposed to issue bulletins of information for producers, merchants, manufacturers, etc., and this volume is the first of the series.

Vermilye, Elizabeth B. The life of Alexander Duff. Chic., Woman's Presb. Bd. of Missions of the Northwest, [1891.] c. '90. 123 p. D. [Missionary annals ser., no. 9.) cl., 30 c.; pap., 18 c.

Alexander Duff, born in Scotland in 1806, of poor and devout parentage, educated himself for the ministry at St. Andrew's University, and on the death of a friend and college mate decided to take his place as a missionary to India. Thenceforward his life was spent in unremitting missionary labor, directed with great intelligence and rewarded with great success. Arriving in India in the midst of an intellectual movement of an atheistical character, he resolved to make that character Christian.

The youngest brother, a workman and a socialist, after many wanderings, returns destitute and ill to the head of his house, the respectable Geheimrath. An effort is made, by furnishing him with capital and arranging a suitable marriage, to fit him for the class to which his more fortunate relatives belong. The difficulties of the latter, and the independent spirit of the workman, provide the material of the story.

Williams, Francis Howard. Atmân: The documents in a strange case. N. Y., Cassel Pub. Co., [1891.] c. 10+303 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 61.) pap., 50 c.

The hero, a physician who has devoted his life to occult science, steals one woman's soul and imprisons it in the body of a woman who was physically and mentally perfect, but soulless. No sooner does her soul-life begin, than her heart goes out to another. The dramatic story is told in four parts by four different characters. The conversations on the doctrines of occult Buddhism are very skilfully worded.

PICK-UPS.

HIS WEAKEST BOOK.—Miss Weston: "Which of your many books do you consider of the least account, professor?" Prof. Writer: "My bank-book, Miss Weston."—Lowell Citizen.

AN IMPRESSIONIST.—"Almost all de Feuilleton's work is so disjointed. His essays are always broken up by lines of stars. What's the sense of that?" "They indicate the places where he dipped his pen into the mucilage bottle, and stopped abruptly to make a few remarks. The stars represent the remarks."—Puck.

AN INDIGNITY.—"Yes, Charles, I have determined to give up the muse. I shall write no more." "Why, Thomas, the world will pine for the lyrics of your pen. And will you be so heartless?" "Yes, Charles, I must. I write for fame, and what is fame? Even now the world denies Homer an existence, and declares Shakespeare an impostor. I cannot, I will not, subject myself to inevitable indignity."—Chicago Times.

A FACT.—A well-dressed lady entered a Western bookstore and inquired, "Have you 'Shakespeare's Hiawatha'?" The salesman, astonished, hesitated, and then replied that they had "Longfellow's Hiawatha," and that he was not acquainted with a work with that title written by Shakespeare. The lady, seeing she had made a mistake, but wishing to conceal it, asked somewhat petulantly, "Do you not keep Shakespeare's complete works in stock?" Two editions were shown her; she looked through both, but of course failed to find "Hiawatha." Noting the fact that one was printed in somewhat more solid type than the other, she said to the salesman, "Well, I shall not take either edition this morning, but will be back this afternoon and take one; I am undecided now whether to take the one in poetry or the one in prose."—C. THE PROFESSION OF BOOKSELLING.

ENTERING THE PROFESSION.

"The greatest public benefactor is the man distributing good books."—Gladstone.

OUR advice to such as contemplate joining the ranks of the book trade is to hesitate and to consider well the step before taking it. There are few callings that require more special qualifications than this. Whoever would fit himself for the book trade must have patience, endurance, a love for literature, a capacity for hard work, an eagerness to learn; in one word, must be in love with his profession in every particular. He must come prepared by a good general and some business education. He must, above all, have the capacity to master infinite details—details that would discourage, if not disgust, ninety out of a hundred business men in other callings. He must have unlimited ambition, and yet remain satisfied in rarely seeing it gratified. He must live ever hopeful of the future, notwithstanding his dissatisfaction with the present. He must never fail in his effort at well-doing and his energetic pushing and striving, though he see his substance drawn from him by unscrupulous and short-sighted competition. A living can be made, and very often a good one; but it requires an amount of application, persistence and bull-dog perseverance that in any other occupation would very likely lead to fame and fortune.

The young man equipped with the above qualifications, and resolved to fight manfully for his cause against all odds, may reasonably hope for success. But before taking the step, again we say, let him consider it well—for "there's the rub." So many rush in blindly; and when they awake to the situation and see what is before them, they become disheartened, and, after having lost much valuable time, seek other occupation.

PREPARATORY TRAINING.

It is of the utmost importance that the bookseller should be well grounded in literature; by that we mean he should be acquainted, as intimately as possible, first with English literature from the earliest period to the present; then with American literature, especially the period of the last fifty years; and lastly with the literature of France, Germany, Spain, Russia, etc. A knowledge of classical literature is also necessary; not that a bookseller need be able to read Greek or Latin (a knowledge of the Greek alphabet and of the rudiments of Latin would, however, help him wonderfully at times), but that he may know who the prominent authors were and to what period and country they belonged. We place English literature first, because as the bulk of our stock is derived from English sources more attention must, for the present at least, be given to that branch, notwithstanding the fact that American literature has recently developed to goodly proportions. The knowledge to be gained is not the knowledge necessary for the critic, but rather that which comes with general information. It need not therefore be acquired by careful critical study and comparison of the individual works of the author, but may be reached by study of the works of those who have digested the subject, and whose judgment has been recognized as authoritative.

The bookseller must have a literary knowledge and a technical knowledge. That is, he must know something of the author and what he has written, as well as who publishes the book, in what editions, and at what prices. The technical points we will treat later on. To gain the literary information the study of the following works will be found useful:

English Literature.

ADAMS, Oscar Fay. Brief handbook of English authors. 2d ed. rev. and enl. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1885. 16°, cl., 75 c.
Gives authors' names, dates of birth, in some cases also date of death; titles of their principal books; in some cases characteristics of their styles; and the names of their publishers. A valuable work of reference.

EARLE, J: Anglo-Saxon literature. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co.. 1884. 16°, cl., 75 c.
From the heathen period to the Norman conquest and later.

HARLOW, W. B. Introduction to early English literature, from the lay of Beowulf to Edmund Spenser. Syracuse, N. Y., C. W. Bardeen, 1884. 16°, cl., 75 c.
Prose and poetical selections, with explanatory and biographical introductions.

HUNT, Theodore W. Representative English prose and prose-writers. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1887. 8°, cl., $1.50.
A contribution to the study of English prose in its representative historical periods, in its representative literary forms, and in some of its representative authors. Covers the period from Bede to Carlyle.

LAWRENCE, Eugene. English literature primers: Romance period; classical period; modern period. N. Y., Harper & Bros., 1878-1880. 3 v. 32°, (Harper's half-hour ser.), pap., ea., 25 c.
An outline of English history from earliest times to the Victorian era.

MASSON, David. British novelists and their styles. N. Y., Sheldon & Co., 1859. 12°, cl., $1.25.
Describes the work of the British novelists from Swift to the author of "Tom Brown."

MORLEY, H: English writers: an attempt towards a history of English literature. N. Y., The Cassell Pub. Co., 1887. Probably 20 vols. 16°, (Six vols. thus far published). ea., $1.50.

One of the most ambitious works thus far published. Planned on the basis of the author's earlier works on English writers (1864, 1867.) It begins with the origin of English literature and expects to include the period in which the work will be brought to conclusion.

MORLEY, H: Of English literature in the reign of Victoria, with a glance at the past. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1882. 16°, pap., $2.

From the beginning of the reign of Elizabeth to 1878.

OLIPHANT, Mrs. Margaret O. [Wilson.] Literary history of England in the end of the 18th and beginning of the 19th century. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1882. 3 v. 8°, cl., $3.

Includes a chapter on literature in Ireland Covers English writers who lived between the years 1790 and 1825 and their works. Every chapter is followed by a bibliography.

SHAW, T: B. New history of English literature, with a history of English literature in America, by Truman J. Backus. N. Y., Sheldon & Co., 1884. 12°, cl., $1.25.

An excellent brief text-book, covering the subject from 55 B.C. to 1880.

STEDMAN, E. C. Victorian poets. Rev. and enl. ed. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. 8°, cl., $2.25.

Carries the history of English poetical literature of the period covered down to date of publication. New analytical index.

TAINE, H. A. History of English literature; tr. by H. Van Laun. N. Y., H: Holt & Co. 2 v. 8°, cl., $5.

— Same. 1 v. Boston, T. Y. Crowell & Co. 12mo. cl., $1.50.

Covers English literature to the Victorian era. In its powerful, though arbitrary unity of composition, sustained æsthetic temper, brilliancy, variety and symmetry a monumental work.

TUCKERMAN, Bayard. History of English prose fiction from Sir Thomas Malory to George Eliot. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1882. 8°, cl., $1.75.

Traces gradual progress of English prose fiction from the early romance to the novel of the present day in connection with the social characteristics of the epochs to which the respective works belong. Chapters on Chaucer, the age of Elizabeth, the Puritans, the restoration, the 18th century and the novel of the 19th century.

English and American Literature.

CHAMBERS, Robert. Cyclopædia of English literature. 3d ed., rev. by Robert Carruthers. Phila., J. B. Lippincott & Co., 2 v. il. 8°, cl., $9; also an ed. in 8 vols., 24°. without illustrations, pub. by Am. Book Ex., N. Y., cl., $2.25.

A critical and biographical history of British and American authors, with specimens of their writings. Covers the period from the earliest period to 1876. Chronologically arranged.

SMITH, G. J. A synopsis of English and American literature. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1890. 8°, cl., $1.20.

Condenses within narrow limits a great deal of information. The outlines are arranged chronologically. The author's name, date of birth and death, the class of writers to which he belongs, his best-known works, his contemporaries at home and abroad, and leading events in the general history of his time are given.

American Literature.

Adams, Oscar Fay. Brief handbook of American authors. 2d ed. rev. and enl. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1885. 16°, cl., 75 c.

See note to this author's handbook of English authors (under English Literature), which it resembles in plan.

LAWRENCE, Eugene. A primer of American literature. N. Y., Harper & Bros., 1880. 32°, (Harper's half-hour ser.), pap., 25 c.

From the Puritans to John Lothrop Motley.

RICHARDSON, C: F. American literature, 1607–1885. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1887–88. 2 v. 8°, cl., $6.

Mr. Richardson demonstrates what American writers have thus far done worthy to be mentioned beside the works of the great writers of the old world; which of our books are world's books, and why; how and why American writers have succeeded or failed.

STEDMAN, E. C. Poets of America. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1885. 8°, cl., $2.25.

Traces the rise and progress of the various schools of American poetry, and critically analyzes the chief characteristics of their leading poets. Index.

TYLER, Moses Coit. History of American literature, 1607–1765. Popular ed. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1881. 8°, hf. leath., $3.

A philosophical and critical history, including representative excerpts from significant writings, following the literary development of the American mind from the earliest English settlements to 1765. The work was planned to cover four volumes, but is complete to date covered. Index.

German Literature.

CONANT, Helen S. A primer of German literature. N. Y., Harper & Bros., 1878. 32°, (Harper's half-hour ser.), pap., 25 c.

An outline of the growth of German literature from ancient times to the writers born at the beginning of this century.

HOSMER, Ja. K. Short history of German literature. St. Louis, G. I. Jones & Co., 1879. 8°, cl., $2.

The author confines himself to belles-lettres, polite literature.

SCHERER, W. History of German literature; from the 3d German ed. by Mrs. F. C. Conybeare, ed. by F. Max Müller. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1878. 2 v. 8°, cl., $3.50.

A survey of German literature from the earliest times to the death of Goethe. The most important work on the subject in English.

French Literature.

SAINTSBURY, G: A short history of French literature. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1882. 12°, cl., $2.25.

A succinct history of the course of French literature (from the origins to the moderns), compiled from an examination of that literature itself, and not merely from previous accounts of it. Owing to the author's prejudices his criticism of modern authors has been questioned, but the work in many ways is a masterpiece.

SAINTSBURY, G: A primer of French literature. N. Y., Harper & Bros., 1881. 32° (Harper's half-hour ser.), pap., 25 c.
Covers the period from 1200 A.D. to 1850.

TICKNOR, G: History of Spanish literature Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1872. 3 v. 8°, $5.

SYMONDS's "Renaissance in Italy: Italian Literature" (Holt) contains a chapter on "History and Philosophy," and another on "Retrospect of the Renaissance Literature." "They are," says the Nation, "the best in the whole work, the first especially, showing that the author has made good use of the exhaustive study of Machiavelli, by Prof. Villari, the 'History of Italian Literature,' by De Sanctis, and the Italian authors mentioned in the preface."

Scandinavian and Russian Literature.

BAZAN, Emilia Pardo. Russia, its people and literature; from the Spanish by Fanny H. Gardiner. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1890. 16°, cl., $1.25.
Covers evolution of Russia; Russian nihilism and its literature; rise of the Russian novel; and modern Russian realism, with special criticisms of Turgenief, Goutcharof, Dostoyevski and Tolstoi.

BRANDES, G: Impressions of Russia; from the Danish by S: C. Eastman. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., 1889. 16°, cl., $1.25.
Second part deals with Russian literature and gives valuable information, especially about the famous and less known authors of the present century.

HORN, F: Winkel. History of the literature of the Scandinavian North, from the most ancient times to the present; tr. by R. B. Anderson, with bibliography of important books in English language relating to Scandinavian countries by Thorvald Solberg. Chic., S. C. Griggs & Co., 1884. 8°, cl., $3.50.
The subject is divided into three parts: "The old Norse and Icelandic literature," "Denmark and Norway," and "Sweden." Together, they present a complete résumé of the literature of Scandinavian countries from the mythical age to the present.

VOGÜÉ, E. M. de. The Russian novelists; tr. by Jane L. Edmands. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1887. 12°, cl., $1.25.
A series of studies upon Gogol, Turgenief, Dostoyevski and Tolstoi, showing the men, as well as their work, as illustrating the Russian national character and the moral evolution of Russia.

Oriental Literature.

REED, Elizabeth A. Hindu literature; or, The ancient books of India. Chic., S. C. Griggs & Co., 1891. 8°, cl., $2.
A chronology of the ancient books of India, with their commentaries and the works connected with their history and philology, showing where they belong in the world's history and presenting a résumé of their teachings, and specimens of their literary style. Full index.
See also Botta's "Universal Literature," under miscellaneous.

Miscellaneous.

ADAMS, C: Kendall. Manual of historical literature. Rev. ed. N. Y., Harper & Bros. 12°, cl., $2.50.
Brief descriptions of the most important histories in English, French and German, with practical suggestions as to methods and courses of historical study. Of especial value to booksellers.

BARROWS, C: M. Acts and anecdotes of authors. Bost., New England Pub. Co., 1887. 12°, cl., $1.50.
Facts about prominent American books, authors and publishers; English books and authors; popular translations, dramas, operas, etc. Arranged alphabetically. Somewhat ill-balanced, but nevertheless useful for reference.

BOTTA, Anne C. L. Handbook of universal literature. New ed. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1885. 12°, cl., $2.
An exceedingly useful book. It covers briefly Chinese, Japanese, Sanscrit, Babylonian and Assyrian, Phœnician, Syriac, Persian, Hebrew, Egyptian, Greek, Roman, Arabian, Italian, French, Spanish, Portuguese, Finnish, Slavic, Dutch, Scandinavian, German, English and American literature. Especially full in its biographical data. A good index.

Consult also the volumes in the series of American Men of Letters (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.); Famous Women (Roberts Bros.); Foreign Classics for English Readers (J. B. Lippincott Co.)

For Supplementary Reading, the following will be found useful: Bulwer's "Caxtonia" (Harper); John Hill Burton's "The Book-Hunter," in various editions; Carlyle's essays, especially those on the German authors of the 18th century; Richard de Bury's "Philobiblion," of which Lockwood & Coombes published a good edition, translated and edited by Ernest C. Thomas; De Quincey's admirable essays on English literature—especially full as to the "Lake School;" Disraeli's "Curiosities of literature" (Armstrong); Ellwanger's charming chapters on books in his volume, "Story of my House" (Appleton); Emerson on books and literary ethics (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.); Frederick Harrison's interesting volume on "The Choice of Books" (Macmillan & Co.); F. H. Hedge's "Hours with German Classics" (Roberts Brothers); Karl Hillebrandt's "German Thought," from the Seven Years' War to the death of Goethe (Henry Holt & Co.); Mrs. A. Jameson's "Sketches of Art, Literature and Character" (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.); Sam Johnson's "Lives of the English poets," from Cowley to Gray—crusty, but full of valuable information; Andrew Lang's "Books and Bookmen" (Dodd, Mead & Co.); Lowell's charming and scholarly volume "Among my Books" (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.); Hamilton W. Mabie's critical essays, "My Study Fire" (Dodd, Mead & Co.); Max Müller's "Essays on Literature" (Charles Scribner's Sons); Walter Pater's scholarly volume, entitled "Appreciations, with an essay on style" (Macmillan & Co.); James Payn's "Some Literary Recollections" (Harper); Poe's critical essays on the literature of his day—very biassed, but neverthless worth reading; Porter's "Books and Reading" (Charles Scribner's Sons); W. H. Prescott's "Biographical and Critical Miscellany" (J. B. Lippincott Co.); Pycroft's "Course of English Reading" (James Miller's edition); George Ripley's authoritative essays on "Literature and the Fine Arts," with an index to terms employed in belles-lettres, philosophy, mythology, etc. (A. S. Barnes & Co.); Ruskin's "Sesame and Lilies," a number of editions; A. P. Russell's "Library Notes," "In a Club Corner" and "A Club of One," all published in neat editions by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.; Frederick Saunder's "Stray Leaves of Literature" (Thomas Whittaker); Henry Stevens' Recollections of James Lenox and the formation of his library (London, Henry Stevens & Son); Robert Louis Stevenson's delightful "Familiar Studies of Men and Books" (Dodd, Mead & Co.); E. P. Whipple's "Literature and Life" (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.); G. White's "Sketch of the Philosophy of American Literature" (Ginn & Co.); Wilson's "Noctes Ambrosianæ," glances at the coterie of English literary men of the early part of this century (Armstrong); W. E. Wink's curious volume on "Lives of Illustrious Shoemakers," many of whom drifted into literature or the book business (Funk & Wagnalls); and Edmund Yates' gossipy "Fifty Years of London" (Harper & Bros.).

In the way of Books of Reference we should recommend Allibone's "Dictionary of English Literature, and British and American Authors," of which a revised edition in three volumes has recently been issued by J. B. Lippincott Co.; Brewer's "Readers' Handbook of Allusions, References, Plots and Stories" (Lippincott); Wm. A. Wheeler's "Dictionary of Noted Names of Fiction" (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.); as well as the volumes of the Book-Lover's Library and of The Bookworm (Armstrong); the volumes of the Bric-à-brac series (Charles Scribner's Sons); and the exhaustive articles on the literatures of the various countries in the "Encyclopædia Britannica," the ninth Edinburgh edition.

The list might have been extended, but it was thought desirable to quote only such books as could be recommended from personal acquaintance with their merits and usefulness. Any one book in any of the departments may perhaps be found sufficient, but, as will be discovered by the student as he grows in experience, though much matter may be duplicated, every author covers some ground not so fully treated by another, or possibly disregarded altogether. In making a study of literature too many authorities cannot be consulted.

The beginner thus equipped, with books under his care, can, by careful and diligent study, soon construct for himself a skeleton plan which in time and by experience he can fill out and use to advantage. In this study the young bookseller should train his mind to take certain periods, and fix them by grouping around a central figure the names of his contemporaries; as, for instance, the Elizabethan period, 1558–1603, with Shakespeare as the central figure, and around him Spenser, Bacon, Sidney, Raleigh, Johnson, Beaumont and Fletcher, Massinger, and others. By this means it will become easy to make mental reference to them when called upon for information, whereas, if the young bookseller were to endeavor to fasten in his mind the names of authors in succession, without reference to certain periods, he will end in failure and confusion.

Having acquired the literary part of his training, the beginner must next familiarize himself with the books themselves. This can be done in the store; but the enterprising and ambitious youth will find the public library — if such an one be accessible in the evenings — the best training-school; for there can be seen collections of authors not always to be found in the store. There, also, can be gathered knowledge which, though not of immediate use, gives the young man confidence, and will in time prove of the utmost value.

EARLY in January this year the wholesale and jobbing book and stationery trade of San Francisco combined and adopted resolutions (copies of which were duly circulated in the East), to the effect that they would refuse to buy in the future from houses who also canvassed the retail trade in California. Naturally enough this called out strong feeling on the part of Eastern houses, all of whom are determined to continue their operations on the old lines, these resolutions to the contrary notwithstanding. We are afraid that the San Francisco firms will discover in time that their action was not altogether wise. Threats and aggressive action do not tend to harmonious feeling or remove abuses. Already retaliatory measures are spoken of, which we hope good sense and calm reflection will prevent. Rather let action be taken to re-establish good feeling between all concerned.

THE issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for March 21 will be the Spring Announcement Number. The business for the coming season, while not large, promises to be encouraging, a number of important publications being under way. We again remind those who have not already responded to our circular letter, that we must have word from them before the 18th inst., or it will come too late.

ERASTUS DARROW FIFTY YEARS A BOOKSELLER.

WE are pleased to note that Mr. Erastus Darrow, of the firm of E. Darrow & Co., publishers and booksellers, Rochester, N. Y., has just celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his career as a bookseller. He commenced selling books in the Yale College bookstore of A. H. Maltby, at New Haven, Conn., on March 4, 1841, the day Wm. Henry Harrison was inaugurated President of the United States. Dr. Noah Webster had then just published the second edition of his unabridged dictionary, which was printed on a hand-press, and bound in two octavo volumes. In 1844 Mr. Darrow removed to Rochester and became clerk in the bookstore of Clarendon Morse, succeeding as clerk the late D. M. Dewey, who then commenced business on his own account in the Arcade, at that time the most noted building in western New York. In 1846 Mr. Darrow followed his predecessor's example and opened a bookstore in the Minerva block. James H. Gregory soon became interested, and remained with him for five years, when his brother, Wallace Darrow, became partner. In 1868 Henry Kempshall took Wallace Darrow's place, remaining up to the time of his death, not many years ago.

When Mr. Darrow settled in Rochester it had a population of a little over thirty thousand; now this has at least quadrupled. His first considerable venture in publishing was in 1848, when he issued an edition of 3000 copies of "Differences Between Old and New School Presbyterians," by Dr. Lewis Cheseman, nearly all of which sold, as it was an interesting history of a great controversy. Among other ventures were the English Grammar of President W. C. Kenyon, of Alfred University; Dr. F. De W. Ward's "History of the Churches of Rochester;" "Summer Vacation Abroad" and the "Christian Gift," by the same author; and Dr. Baldwin's "Pocket Homœopathist," which still has a large sale. Mr. Darrow has also borne a part in the spread of good reading and general education in his city. He helped to welcome Charles Dickens at the Tontine Hotel in New Haven, 1841, and entertained Martin Farquhar Tupper (whose works he still publishes) and Mr. Macmillan, the publisher, when they were in America. He is personally known to nearly all the leading authors, publishers and booksellers in this country.

Though born over seventy years ago (in Plymouth, Conn.), Mr. Darrow is still active in his book business, a Trustee of the East Side Savings Bank of Rochester, a promoter of the Rochester "Historical Society" and other local enterprises, as well as an occasional contributor to the literary and trade journals.

THE COURSE OF COPYRIGHT LEGISLATION.

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

SIR: Recent editorial articles in The Evening Post, commenting upon the passage of the Copyright Bill, appear to have been written under the impression that the successful result was secured without the sympathetic action of the majority party in the two houses of Congress, and that in some way the bill was extorted from the Republican leaders. Such an impression is, however, by no means in accord with the actual history of the enactment, and constitutes an injustice to certain cordial friends of the reform which ought not to be passed over in silence by those who are familiar with that history.

It is probably hardly necessary to explain that the Conference Committee which represented the several Copyright Leagues, and which has had charge of the campaign, has from the outset done all that was in its power to keep the business of copyright reform free from the entanglement of party politics. The membership of the Committee included Republicans, Democrats, and Mugwumps, protectionists, revenue-reformers and free-traders; but it was held that the cause of copyright had no logical connection with any of the policies or opinions indicated by these terms.

The bill which has just passed is substantially identical with that introduced in the Fiftieth Congress, in the Senate, by Senator Chace, of Rhode Island, a Republican and a protectionist, and in the House, by Mr. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, a Democrat and a free-trader.

In the Fifty-first Congress the bill has been under the charge, in the Senate, of Senator Platt, of Connecticut, and in the House, of Mr. Adams, of Illinois, and later of Mr. Simonds, of Connecticut. The favorable action of the House is to be credited not only to the persistence and parliamentary skill of Mr. Simonds and Mr. Adams, but to the leadership and active coöperation of Mr. Lodge, Mr. Butterworth, Judge E. B. Taylor, Gov. Stewart, Mr. McKinley, Mr. Farquhar, and other Republicans who had the reform at heart; while on the Democratic side the services of Mr. Breckinridge, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Fitch, Mr. Covert, Mr. Bynum, Mr. McAdoo, Mr. Cummings, Mr. Dargan and others were most important.

It is not too much to say, however, that the bill could hardly have been saved in the House during the critical hours of the conference in the last night of the session if it had not been for the cordial interest and prompt action of Speaker Reed, seconded by the energetic watchfulness of Mr. Lodge.

In the Senate, the brunt of the campaign has, of course, been borne by Mr. Platt, whose patience and tact have been unwearying. His efforts were ably seconded on his own side of the Senate by Messrs. Hawley, Evarts, Hiscock, Hoar, Aldrich, Wolcott, Dixon and others, while the friendly interest of Vice-President Morton was also of material service. Among the Democrats, Mr. Platt was supported in the roll-calls by Messrs. Butler, Hampton, Brown, Voorhees and others. In the final struggle it must, however, be admitted that the Democratic Senators appeared to be willing to leave to the Republican majority the entire credit for achieving the reform.

The movement in behalf of international copyright began in 1837 with the report made to Congress by Henry Clay, a report framed upon the suggestions submitted from the first Copyright League by W. C. Bryant and George P. Putnam.

If the present Copyright Bill had failed, the responsibility for such failure would unquestionably have been placed on the Republican majority, which has controlled the business of the Fifty-first Congress.

That, after half a century of fruitless effort, a copyright bill has at last become a law, is assuredly an achievement for which this Republican majority and the present Administration are justly entitled to claim the chief credit.

Respectfully,

ROBERT U. JOHNSON,
Secretary Am. (Authors') Copyright League.

GEO. HAVEN PUTNUM,
Secretary Am. (Publishers') Copyright League.

NEW YORK, March 10.

PROFITS OF FRENCH AUTHORS.

THE Paris Temps some time ago devoted an article to the consideration of the sums paid to great English and French writers for their books. After referring to the fact that Fielding received $3000 for "Tom Jones" and $5000 for "Amelia," Gibbons $3000 for his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," Hume $1000 for the first part of his "History of England," and $25,000 for the second, and to the $42,000, $25,000, and $35,000 paid for single novels by Walter Scott, Thackeray and George Eliot, it goes on to say that in France prices were generally much lower. In the eighteenth century good books generally were paid for at the rate of from 400 to 1000 livres. Delille sold his "Géorgiques" for 3000 livres. In our own century the most sensational prices have been $90,000 paid by Ladvocat for the publication of Chateaubriand's collected works; and the purchase of "Jocelin" by the publisher Grossillin for $20,000. The "Méditations" were almost given away; for the "Nouvelles Méditations" $3000 was paid, and for the "Harmonies" $5000. Some books which have had an enormous sale were at first given away for a ridiculous sum—$60 or $70 for "Scènes de la Vie Bohème," $160 for "Mme. Bovary." There was a rumor subsequently that Flaubert had got even for this by selling "Salammbô" for five or six thousand dollars, but the publication of his correspondence showed that he received only $2000. At the present day it is not easy to give exact figures, for the reason that authors generally arrange with the publishers on the plan of receiving a certain percentage on all the copies sold during the continuance of the copyright.

THE BRAYTON IVES' SALE.—II.

THE greatest book-sale that ever agitated the collectors and dealers of New York is a thing of the past. For three days the cream of the dilettanti were pitted against each other for the possession of precious volumes, and some exciting contests were the result. For one thing, the first folio Shakespeare has risen another point or two in value, and the highest price on record at public sale was reached, viz., $4200. (Dodd, Mead & Co.) The copy was not a superior one. The third folio (with a later impression of the portrait inserted) went for $950 to W. E. Benjamin. The title-page was mended, and the book generally an indifferent copy. "Romeo and Juliet," a quarto, said to have been issued about 1609, went for $535. (Dodd, Mead & Co.) I am since assured that the true date of this quarto is 1636 or 1637. A fine copy of "Midsummer Night's Dream," 1600, realized $725, and being a really fine copy, was perhaps the cheapest item in all the Shakespeariana. Shelley's "Queen Mab," the first edition in boards, uncut, which sold for £58 in London in 1879, at this sale fetched only $190. (Mitchells.) It has since been sold at a much advanced price. A remarkable collection of the quarto plays of Ben Jonson was also sold—Mr. Pierce, the "Elizabethan" bookseller, securing them all. A first edition of Keat's Poems with presentation inscription from the author, and in the original binding, sold for $120. (Mitchells). Cartier's "Newe Fraunce, 1580," was purchased by Dodd, Mead & Co., for $1,000. It was a beautiful copy, and well worth the money. Why, however, a bookseller should give $126 for a set of "Cook's Voyages" is a mystery. The book can be bought for $30 in London. The series of Cortes' Letters were all secured by Dodd, Mead & Co. at lower prices than Mr. Ives paid for them. The set of "De Bry," which Mr. Ives purchased from Ellis some years since, was knocked down to Mitchells for $900. It is hardly possible that Mr. Ives made much profit on that sale. Dodd, Mead & Co. got the French edition, Part I. of the "Grands Voyages," for $600. It is a very rare volume, and was cheap. The "Columbus' Letters" all sold for much less than Mr. Ives paid for them. Dodd, Mead & Co. were the buyers. The first German translation, which was for sale a few years since by J. Hess, of Ellwangen, a small town in Würtemberg, for 800 marks, was brought to this country by Dodd, Mead & Co. at somewhere near that figure, and sold only a short time ago to Mr. Ives. It only realized $155 at the sale. Three leaves were in facsimile. Pynson's "Ship of Fools," 1509, was well worth the $825 paid for it by Dodd, Mead & Co. Smith's "Virginia, 1627," with the two rare added portraits, $315. The Sunderland copy of the editio princeps of Virgil, which sold in London for £810, went to Mr. Pierce for $3000, and was sold at a good profit the same evening. It was in every way a lovely and delightful book, in finest condition. There were many other fine books, the prices of which we have not space to chronicle. It is said that Mr. Ives will lose $40,000 by the sale of his books, which is quite likely. One cannot buy largely at the top prices and then dump his collection into the same market within a few months and realize a profit, or even come out clear. But when there is another such sale in New York, with John Gilpin, "may I be there to see." BIBLIOPHILUS.

BOOKSELLERS' QUEER CUSTOMERS.

"I SUPPOSE you meet some queer customers?" Mr. E. W. Bok recently asked of a salesman in one of the large New York bookstores, and his answer was interesting.

"Indeed we do," he rejoined, "and my experience alone would fill a book of fun. It was only the other day that a man rushed in here in a dripping perspiration, and with an intense, strained expression on his face—an expression that gave way to one of despair, as he exclaimed, 'There, I knew it. My wife told me to get a book. My memory is poor, but I thought I could remember the title. About half way here I felt it slipping so I hurried fast, but it is no use. It's gone;' and all I could do for him wouldn't bring it back.

"The average intelligent reader is a nice customer to handle. He knows what he wants, and you have only to show him the latest in his line. But many buyers are crabbed and fussy, very positive in their ignorance and altogether disagreeable. The worst customer, however, is the one who thinks a bookstore is a free library. There is such a one who has been in the habit of coming here for a good while past, seating himself for hours at a time and reading our books through without buying anything. Now I hold that when a man has read a book through he has gotten the value of it and ought to pay. I stood this fellow as long as I could; but the other day, when he coolly took down an English book with uncut leaves and began to cut it, I stepped up and said, 'Please do not cut those leaves. The book would pass for second-hand, if you do that.' Well, the fellow actually had the assurance to get angry, and went off to report the matter to my employer. It was the worst way he could have selected to get satisfaction, as he found out when he made his complaint.

"An annoying bookstore customer," continued my book-clerk friend, "is the one who tries to get out of purchasing a book by saying, 'Now if you only had this in such and such a style, I would buy it;' mentioning a style which he was sure we didn't have. Not long ago I caught one of these customers badly, for it so happened in his case that I had the very style he was so particular about having concealed in my desk. I said nothing about it till I had cornered him by getting him to say that if we only had that style he would take it in a minute. Then I brought it out, and his consternation was quite evident and very amusing. He couldn't very well get out of the fix, so he bought the book; but he never forgave me, and always goes to some other salesman now.

"I have a curious customer, a wealthy man, who has bought a lot of handsome books of me, choosing them entirely by their bindings, so as to match in color his furniture and carpets, and regardless of their contents.

"Yes, there are many queer customers, and we have exasperating experiences; but it is an interesting life, and an educating and refining line of business. One imbibes valuable information almost unconsciously, and five years of salesmanship form quite a liberal education."

OBITUARY NOTES.

M. C. REINWALD, the oldest member of the publishing trade in Paris, died at Nice on the morning of February 23. M. Reinwald was the Paris agent of the Tauchnitz house, and was the publisher of well-known scientific works, including translations of Darwin. His office was one of the most interesting resorts of literary and scientific men in Paris. A man of keen intellect and great force of character, he opposed, says the Publishers' Circular, "the idea that science should exert undisputed sway over imagination and romance, and looked forward confidently to a reaction in favor of idealism in the bookbuying public. In the course of a recent interview, he said: 'The author who has now the best chance is the idealist, provided he does not take leave of common-sense. Were writers like Bernardin de St. Pierre and Goldsmith to come back to life, they would make their own and their publishers' fortunes.'"

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

GUSTAVE BRUNET, the well-known bibliographer and book-lover, has just published, through Vve Moquet, Bordeaux, a volume of "Études sur la Reliure des Livres, et sur les Collections de Bibliophiles Célèbres." It is an amplification of a pamphlet published in 1873. Its chief value is as a supplement in some sort to the lists of books owned by famous collectors — M. Leroux de Lincy's catalogue of the Grolier Library, for example, and certain of the briefer catalogues contained in M. Quentin Bauchart's "Femmes Bibliophiles de la France." M. Brunet is able to add nearly fifty titles of books owned by Grolier to the list of some three hundred and fifty contained in M. Leroux de Lincy's bibliography.

THE LIBRARY BUREAU, Boston, notifies subscribers for the third edition of Dewey's Decimal Classification that, owing to the removal of the author from New York to Albany, the promised introduction giving new users detailed results of the experience of others, could not be got ready. In the meantime the edition was sold without this introduction; but the fourth edition, just ready for delivery, contains this long-promised material, with a greatly enlarged supplementary index and many additions to the tables. This will be sent without increase of price to all who subscribed to the third edition, but who failed to get a copy, if they will notify the Library Bureau.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—Alfred Smith, bookseller and importer, has commenced business at 61½ Bromfield St., under Horticultural Hall. Mr. Smith has had nine years' experience in the book trade in Scotland and America. He has purchased the book stock of the firm of Wm. McDonald & Co., who have retired from bookselling.

CLEVELAND, O.—Taylor, Austin & Co., booksellers and stationers, formed themselves into an incorporated society February 6, under the name of The Taylor, Austin Co. B. G. Helman is President and Treasurer; W. R. Austin, Vice-President and Business Manager; Charles Orr, Secretary; and G. R. Woolf and W. H. Cathcart, Directors.

COUNCIL GROVE, KAN.—F. P. Rightly & Co., booksellers, have sold out their business.

COVINGTON, KY.—The A. Lindsay Company has been incorporated to publish books.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Dunning & Hanna, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—M. Langstadter has removed his book and stationery store from No. 208 to No. 229 South Spring Street, next door to the Los Angeles Theatre building.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.— Edsten & Givertsen, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

NEW YORK CITY.—Samuel C. Tatum & Co., of Cincinnati, have opened a New York office for the sale of their specialties at 116 Chambers Street.

PITTSBURG, PA.—A heavy explosion of gas in the night of the 11th inst. blew out the entire rear of the J. R. Weldin & Co. building, at Diamond and Wood Sts. In a moment the entire five-story building was a sheet of flame. Every stream at the command of the city was turned on without avail, and Allegheny was called to her aid. The entire building, which was supposed to be fire-proof, burned down, with the entire stock of fine stationery, pictures, etc., a total loss. The Board of Trade building, just opposite, containing the Custom House and other offices, and other buildings across the street were also severely injured by the fire. This building is the one which on January 9, 1889, was destroyed by a tornado, killing and seriously maiming a number of persons, among them a son of Mr. Weldin.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—The annual meeting of the Milton Bradley Company was held at Springfield, Mass., February 16, and the following officers were re-elected. George W. Tapley, President; Milton Bradley, Treasurer; Messrs. Tapley and Bradley, with George H. Ireland and Mr. Ireland, Clerk-Directors. Mr. Ireland was also chosen Assistant Treasurer, to facilitate business during Mr. Bradley's absence. For the fifth year a profit-sharing dividend of two per cent. was declared on the earnings of all the employees whose names were on the pay-roll February 1st. Mr. Bradley left on the 24th for a Southern trip, the first vacation worthy of the name which he has had in years. He intends remaining in Alabama for six weeks, and perhaps longer. He was tendered a complimentary banquet at Barr's on the 23d, by about twenty members of the company.

STELLA, NEB. — M. L. Hays, bookseller, has sold out.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

GRIFFITH, FARRAN, OKEDEN & WELSH have just issued the Talleyrand Memoirs in two volumes. G. P. Putnam's Sons will have their edition ready at once.

HUNT & EATON, N. Y., have just published E. Irenæus Stevenson's new story, "Left to Themselves," described as "a vignette of early friendship." Though nominally for young readers, the pathos and study of adult human nature in the story commend it especially to riper minds; and a special preface concerning a tendency in juvenile literature emphasizes the book's breadth.

THE publication is promised in Leipsic of a "Wagner Encyclopædia." The purpose of the work is to enable any one to ascertain all that Wagner has said on other persons, and his views on art works other than his own. The book, in other words, will answer such questions as, What has Wagner written about Palestrini, or Mozart, or Moltke, or Marcus Aurelius, or Beethoven's Ninth Symphony? The compiler is an eminent Wagner enthusiast, Mr. Glasenapp.

STATEMENTS having been made in Paris affecting the authenticity of Marie Bashkirtseff's "Journal," M. André Theuriet writes to the Temps that Marie's mother brought him the whole of the journal of her daughter, from 1873 to almost the eve of her death, and he undertook, too goodnaturedly, to edit it because implored to do so, and in memory of his dear friend Bastien Lepage. He consulted the Bashkirtseff family as to the cutting out of oft-repeated passages, childish nonsense, tedious descriptions of toilets, and unpleasant reflections upon other persons. After this pruning there was enough of the original matter to fill two volumes.

J. M. DENT & CO. London, will shortly issue Landor's "Imaginary Conversations" in six volumes, the first to be issued in April and the remainder at intervals. It is hoped that the whole publication will be completed by December. The edition is by Mr. C. G Crump, who edited the "Pericles and Aspasia" for the Temple Library series. The text will be a reprint from the complete edition of "Landor's Works," published in 1876, compared with previous editions, and a bibliography will be added to each conversation, showing the various forms in which it was originally published. There will also be short explanatory notes. Macmillan & Co. will issue the American edition of this series.

THE PRESBYTERIAN BOARD OF PUBLICATION, Phila., sent out the following circular, under date of March 4: "After April 1, 1891, the discount hitherto allowed to the trade on the Sabbath-school Papers and Lesson Helps issued by the Board, will be discontinued. They will be furnished only at the regular catalogue prices. The discount given you and our other branch houses will be the same as heretofore, our object being to confine the discount to our own houses. Please see that your people all understand that no discount is to be given any one on these Papers and Helps. I send plain circulars for notice to your trade customers. JOHN A. BLACK."

IN the fall of 1889, the American Secular Union, a voluntary association having for its object the complete separation of Church and State, in practice as well as in profession, and in no way committed to any system of religious belief or disbelief, offered a premium of one thousand dollars ($1000) for "the best essay, treatise, or manual, adapted to aid and assist teachers in our free public schools and in the Girard College for orphans, and other public and charitable institutions professing to be unsectarian, to thoroughly instruct children and youth in the purest principles of morality without inculcating religious doctrines." The committee chosen to examine the numerous MSS. submitted in competition included Richard B. Westbrook, LL.D., President of the Secular Union, Felix Adler of New York, and Dr. D. G. Brinton of Philadelphia. On its recommendation, the prize has been equally divided between the two MSS. considered the best. The successful authors are Rev. N. P. Gilman, of West Newton, editor of the Literary World of Boston, and Mr. Edward P. Jackson, one of the masters of the Boston Latin School.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish at once, in their series of Questions of the Day, "The Question of Copyright," a volume comprising the following material: (1) The text of the new Copyright law of Feb. 4, 1891, which, under reciprocity arrangements, secures American copyright for aliens and foreign copyright for Americans; (2) The text of the Copyright law of July 8, 1870, now superseded; (3) The present Copyright law of Great Britain; (4) The amended Copyright law as recommended by the British Parliamentery Commission of 1879; (5) The amended Copyright law as recommended by the British Society of Authors in 1891; (6) An analysis of the Royalty Scheme of Copyright (recommended by Mr. R. Pearsall Smith, Sir T. H. Farrer, and others); (7) The International Copyright Convention as ratified at the Berne Conference, Sept. 5, 1887; (8) Report of the International Copyright Convention of South America, held at Montevideo, Jan. 11, 1889; (9) Henry Clay's Report on Copyright, Domestic and International, Feb. 16, 1837; (10) The Evolution of Copyright, by Brander Matthews; (11) Literary Property, by G. H. Putnam; (12) The Influence of International Copyright on the Price of Books, by Brander Matthews and G. H. Putnam; (13) Copyright, Monopolies and Protection, by G. H. Putnam; (14) The Nature and Origin of Copyright, by R. R. Bowker; (15) Development of Statutory Copyright in England, by R. R. Bowker; (16) Summary of Copyright legislation in the United States, and (17) Summary of the terms of Copyright in the different countries of the world.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers as a guarantee of good faith.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis, will find it to their advantage to put after their firm name the word [Cash].

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS NEW BOOKS

ORIGINAL CHARADES.

By L. B. R. Briggs. 16mo, $1.00.

Fifty or more ingenious and original charades in verse form the contents of this book. The author's grace of style, delicate sense of humor and refined literary feeling will commend the clever volume to persons of cultivated tastes.

A MANUAL OF WOOD-CARVING.

By C. G. Leland. Fully illustrated. 8vo, $1.75.

The appearance of this volume is peculiarly timely. Mr. Leland's mastery of the technique of the art is complete, and his instructions proceed step by step in the clearest manner, and with the aid of an admirable series of illustrations by the author.

FRENCH DRAMATISTS

Of the Nineteenth Century. By Brander Matthews. New edition. 12mo, $1.50.

This new edition has an additional chapter, bringing Mr. Matthew's review of the French drama down to the present time. "There is no book from which the English reader can obtain so trustworthy a view of the contemporary French drama, and none surely in which a theme so complex is so pleasantly unfolded."—Boston Traveller.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, 743-745 Broadway, N. Y.

PETERSONS' 25-CENT SERIES.

The idea of Petersons' New 25-Cent Series is to fully meet the present demand for cheap, and at the same time highly meritorious fiction, and the various volumes are not only the best selected, but the largest ever offered for the money, as they are by far the cheapest and best collection of novels ever issued. A great deal of charming and excellent reading matter is given in sufficient variety to please young and old, grave and gay—in short, all classes of romance readers. The works are by some of the leading writers of this country and Europe, and not a single volume has been chosen that is not first-class in every respect, and now numbers nearly one hundred. Among the famous novelists represented in the Series are Mrs. Southworth, Mrs. Stephens, Mrs. Hentz, Mrs. Burnett, Alex. Dumas, T. A. Trollope, Emile Zola, Lady Gladys Hamilton, Captain Hawley Smart, Henry Greville, John Habberton, and others occupying an equally exalted rank in literature. Everybody should read them, and everybody can afford to have the entire Series, thus securing for a moderate outlay sufficient good and entertaining literature to last them for months. A complete list of them will be sent to any address, and copies will be sent by mail on receipt of price by the publishers, T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE LATEST ISSUES ARE AS FOLLOWS:
BROKEN PLEDGES; or, Noir et Blanc. By Southworth.
PETERSON'S NATIONAL COOK BOOK. The best.
THE JOYS OF LIFE; or, How Jolly Life Is. By Zola.
MRS. MAYBURN'S TWINS. By aut. "Helen's Babies."
GEMMA. T. Adolphus Trollope's Charming Italian Story
BERTHA'S BABY. Equal to "Helen's Babies."
SAVELI'S EXPIATION. A Russian Story. By Greville.

Messrs. D. APPLETON & CO. have the pleasure of announcing

A NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF "A SOCIAL DEPARTURE,"

An American Girl in London.

BY SARA JEANNETTE DUNCAN.

With 80 illustrations by F. H. TOWNSEND. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

A brilliant book, picturing English sights, society, customs, and amusements, as seen by an unconventional and witty observer. The same qualities which made "A Social Departure" so remarkable a success will make "An American Girl in London" a book which is "talked about everywhere."

A Social Departure:

How Orthodocia and I Went Round the World by Ourselves.

BY SARA JEANNETTE DUNCAN.

Illustrated by F. H. TOWNSEND. 12mo, cloth, $1.75.

"It is a cheery, witty, decorous, charming book."—New York Herald.

"Widely read and praised on both sides of the Atlantic and Pacific, the diary is now republished in New York, with scores of illustrations which fit the text exactly, and show the mind of artist and writer in unison."—New York Evening Post.

". . . It is to be doubted whether another book can be found so thoroughly amusing from beginning to end."—Boston Daily Advertiser.

"A very bright book on a very entertaining subject. We commend it to those readers who abhor the ordinary statistical book of travels."—Boston Evening Transcript.

"A brighter, merrier, more entirely charming book would be, indeed, difficult to find."—St. Louis Republican.

"For sparkling wit, irresistibly contagious fun, keen observation, absolutely poetic appreciation of natural beauty and vivid descriptiveness, it has no recent rival."—Mrs. P. T. BARNUM's Letter to the New York Tribune.

COLONEL JOHNSON'S NEW BOOK.

The Primes and Their Neighbors.

BY RICHARD MALCOLM JOHNSTON.

Illustrated by KEMBLE, FROST and others. 12mo, cloth, uniform with "Widow Guthrie," $1.25.
Also in TOWN AND COUNTRY LIBRARY, not illustrated. 12mo, paper, 50 cents.

This volume contains ten of the characteristic tales of middle Georgia, which furnish such charming illustrations of the author's mellow humor.

BULWER—THACKERAY.

A New Edition de Luxe of

Bulwer Lytton's Complete Novels.

The best and only elegantly illustrated library edition of the brilliant and entertaining novels of Bulwer ever issued in this or any other country.

It will be enriched by about 200 photogravures from paintings by the most noted American illustrators, or reproductions of actual scenes, which will be of great value in bringing before the mind of the reader the real historical background of the scenes depicted in such vivid colors by the author. The illustrations will be proof impressions on imperial Japanese paper.

The text paper will be manufactured especially for this edition, and will be a natural tint laid paper, made of the finest materials, such as are used in hand-made paper, and containing no clay or other filling.

The work will be printed from new electrotype plates, set from new type; and the volumes will be bound in English vellum cloth, library style, with paper titles, gilt tops, and uncut edges.

The work will be issued at the rate of about two volumes per month. The edition will be limited to one thousand, and will be sold only in complete sets, which will be numbered and registered.

The price for the complete work, in thirty-two volumes, bound in vellum cloth, gilt top, uncut, paper titles, is $2.50 per volume.

A New Edition de Luxe of

Thackeray's Complete Works.

LIMITED TO 1000 NUMBERED COPIES.

Unquestionably the handsomest edition of Thackeray's writings, the nearest approach to the highest ideal of perfection in bookmaking ever attempted in this country.

The type is from a new font especially cast for it, and never used for any other purpose.

The paper, also especially made for it, combines the qualities of excellence in finish and in the materials used with a lightness of weight that prevents the volume from being uncomfortably heavy to hold and read.

The illustrations, a distinguishing feature on account of the great variety and excellence, consist of 210 wood-cuts, mainly from drawings of the author, and reproductions from the drawings of Millais, Barnard and Luke Fildes, together with two etched portraits, twenty original etchings, together with the famous etchings by George Cruikshank, over twenty-five in number, and many photogravures from scenes referred to.

All of these illustrations will be proof impressions on imperial Japanese paper especially imported for this work.

The set will be completed in 30 volumes, at the rate of about two volumes per month.

Price, bound in vellum cloth, gilt tops, uncut, $2.50 per vol.

J. M. BARRIE'S WORKS.

MY LADY NICOTINE

J. M. BARRIE

My Lady Nicotine.

A Study in Smoke. By J. M. BARRIE. One volume, 12mo, gilt top, $1.50.

This is the most delightful of all the books that have been written on the subject of pipes and tobacco. It is, as the London Echo expresses it, "Humor refined, irresistible, characteristic." It is a book to be read straight through. Every smoker will rejoice in it, and every man who has "sworn off" from smoking will read it with sympathetic interest.

A WINDOW IN THRUMS

J. M. BARRIE

A Novel. By J. M. BARRIE. One volume, 12mo, printed on heavy tinted paper, cloth, gilt top, $1.50.

Of "A Window in Thrums" the London Standard says: "We think that this is the very best of the many good sketches of Scottish peasant life which we have ever read." While Mrs. Oliphant remarks in Blackwood's Magazine: "We follow the homely record with an interest which the most sensational drama could not surpass."

THE "UNKNOWN" LIBRARY.

A new series which promises to be one of the successes of the year. The stories are written by well-known writers who prefer for the once to write over a pseudonym. The books are long and narrow, just the right shape to slip readily into the pocket of a man or woman's coat, and they are bound in flexible cloth and ornamented with a chaste design. The type is large and the margin generous. Now ready. Price, 50 cents per volume.

Mademoiselle Ixe.

By LANOE FALCONER. Cloth, 50 cents.

"Mademoiselle Ixe" is the story of a Russian Nihilist, told with such strength and power as to hold the reader spellbound.

The Story of Eleanor Lambert.

By MAGDALEN BROOKE. Flexible cloth, etc., 50 cents.

The New York World says: "The ideal, perfect form in which a novelette should fall from the press."

☞ A BOOK FOR EUROPEAN TOURISTS.

PARIS OF TO-DAY.

From the Original of RICHARD KAUFMAN. By Miss OLGA FLINCH. Profusely illustrated. Unique binding. $3.00.

In this book we have the best picture that has yet been printed of the Paris of to-day, its boulevards, its theatres, its cafés, its drives, its actors and actresses, its famous men and its famous women. We have Paris at play, together with the manners and customs of this most popular city in the world. The illustrations, which are numerous, are by the best-known artists of Paris, and they have all the chic for which French draughtsmen are conspicuous.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); (Q. 4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.) D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Ashby, N. B. The riddle of the sphinx: a discussion of the economic questions relating to agriculture, land, transportation, money, taxation, and cost of interchange. Des Moines, Ia., Industrial Pub. Co., 1890 [1891.] c. '90. 14+474 p. por. O. cl., $1.50.

"A consideration of possible remedies for existing inequalities, and an outline of the position of agriculture in the industrial world; with a comprehensive history of the leading farm organizations, their constitutions and by-laws." The author is Lecturer of the National Farmers' Alliance.

Barrows, H: D. International bi-metalism: an essay. Los Angeles, Cal., Stoll & Thayer, 1891. c. 55 p. O. pap., 50 c.

One of the 39 essays submitted to the Concours-Cernuschi, in May, 1890. The author holds "there is such a thing as scientific bi-metalism, exactly as there may be scientific mono-metalism," and that the system of exchange, which requires in theory the delivery daily of more of a single commodity than its total aggregate in all the world, is fraught with constant financial danger.

Barry, C: A. What shall we do with our children? How to find their true natures, and the best way to educate them. Bost., Occult Pub. Co., 152 Boylston St., 1891. 35 p. 16°, cl., 35 c.; pap., 25 c.

Bettany, G. T. The world's religions: popular account of all the principal religions of civilized and uncivilized peoples; their doctrines, rites, priesthoods, sacred books and moral teachings, together with lives of their founders, great teachers and reformers, with an introd. by Rev. J: Hall, D.D. N. Y., Christian Literature Co., 1891. 908 p. il. 8°, cl., $5.

Bible. The Cambridge Bible for schools and colleges; ed. by J. J. S. Perowne: Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi, with notes and introd. by T. T. Perowne. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 16°, cl., 90 c.

Billings, J: S., M.D. Public health and municipal government: an address delivered before the American Acad. of Political and Social Science at the Art Club, Philadelphia, Jan. 14, 1891. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1891.] 23 p. O. pap., 50 c.

Supplement to the "Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, February, 1891."

Bowker, R: R., and Iles, G:, eds. The reader's guide in economic, social and political science. N. Y., The Society for Political Education, 330 Pearl St., [G. P. Putnam's Sons,] 1891. c. 169 p. D. cl., $1: pap., 50 c.

The titles of this bibliography include the leading works by American, English, French and German authors. In addition, recent magazine articles bearing upon political questions are mentioned, and full references are given to government publications. The principal American organizations for economic and political study or philanthropic work are noted, and their publications set forth. The chief value of the Guide is in the descriptive and critical notes appended to its principal titles. In providing these the editors have been aided by twenty-six eminent educators and specialists. Their recommendations include three brief reading courses planned for youths, for readers in a second stage of progress, and for students. An appendix shows in summary the courses in political and economic science offered in the leading colleges to both men and women. The little volume photographs every existing means of education in American citizenship, and aims to advance that education by giving it trustworthy guidance. Full index.

Braeme, Charlotte M., ["Bertha M. Clay," pseud.] Put asunder: a novel. N. Y., Street & Smith. [1891.] c. 5–408 p. D. (Primrose ser., no. 16.) pap., 50 c.

Originally published under the title of "Wedded and Parted."

Brewer, Rev. E. Cobham. The historic note book, with appendix of battles. Phil., J B. Lippincott Co., 1891. 10+997 p. O. hf mor., $3.50.

A dictionary of historic terms and phrases, briefly explaining allusions made to historical events, acts of parliament, treaties and customs, in books, speeches and familiar conversation. Third and last volume of a series of which the preceding volumes are the "Dictionary of phrase and fable," and the "Reader's handbook." "The present book does for history what the first of the series did for phraseology, and the latter for poetry and romance."

Chisholm, Belle V. In search of a home. Phila., Presb. Pub. Co., 1891. 182 p. 12°, cl., 75 c.

Daniels, Cora Linn. Sardia: a story of love. Bost., Lee & Shepard, [1891.] c. 299 p. D. (Good company ser., no. 7.) pap., 50 c.

Two heirs of a great fortune must marry in order to inherit the millions. They agree to endure one another and be comrades merely, but the wife is secretly attached to her husband, and is aided in her desire to win his love by a generous-minded friend. A Russian "adept" in Buddhism, Princess Menshikoff, assists in the discomfiture of the evil genius of the story, who is an adept, among other things, in the Delsarte method.

Davenport, B: R., ed. The best fifty books of the greatest authors, from Homer, B.C. 2000, to Wallace, A.D. 1880; condensed for busy people; incl. brief biog. sketch and por. of each author. Buffalo, N. Y.,

Genung, J: F. The epic of the inner life: being the book of Job; tr. anew, and accompanied with notes and an introd. study. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. c. 14+352 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Based on "The interpretation of the book of Job," Andover Review, Nov., 1888. A new translation has been made from the "natural" or literary, rather than the clerical point of view. This translation has then been treated as an English poem, the notes being designed "to trace the sequences and interdependencies of the thought, and to solve briefly the difficulties inherent in the work of a remote age and land." The author is a professor at Amherst College, and has published a rhetoric and essays in higher literary criticism. This book he treats as a masterpiece of literature and not as involving any theological questions. He regards it as relating in form more or less dramatic the story of the inner life of an upright man under extreme trials and perplexities.

Graham, Rob. H. Geometry of position. N. Y., Macmillan & Co. 15+192 p. 12°, cl., $1.75.

Author is Principal of the Chicago Kindergarten Training-School. The talks were delivered before classes in Chicago and elsewhere. The writer's object in publishing is to lead readers to a deeper study of Froebel's thought.

Harsha, W: Justin. The story of Iowa. Omaha, Neb., The Central West Co., 1890 [1891.] 3-341 p. map, O. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

An account of the work and experience of the pioneer missionaries of the Presbyterian Church in Iowa. The history of the State which bears upon the subject is given, and many incidents of mission work are told.

Howe, E:, comp. Handel and Haydn for the Sunday-school: selections from Handel's "Messiah" and Haydn's "Creation," and church music; arr. and adapted for use in Sunday-schools, church choirs, and congregations. N. Y., C: T. Dillingham, [1891.] c. 4+51 p. Q. bds., 40 c.

Prepared especially for children's voices, avoiding difficult passages and very high notes. Used in schools, it is intended that the children sing the air or soprano in unison, but alto, tenor and bass parts are added, making the selections complete as anthems for choirs. Mr. Howe is organist of Bethany Presbyterian Church, New York.

Kingsley, H: Austin Elliott. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 352 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1710.) pap., 20 c.

These Epistles present the Judaic form of Christianity which is the complement of the teaching of St. Paul. Their authenticity, the character of their authors, the class of persons addressed, their relation to other writings, Scriptural and secular, and a full exposition of the text, form the subject matter of this work.

Reid, Mayne. The lone ranch: a novel. N. Y., Street & Smith, [1891.] c. 398 p. D. (Primrose ser., no. 15.) pap., 50 c.

The scene is Mexico and New Mexico; the characters are Mexican, with the exception of the Kentuckian hero and his attendant. The story opens with a duel in which the Mexican villain is wounded, who ever after plots revenge on the hero from Kentucky.

Réno, Itti Kinney-. An exceptional case: a novel. Phil., J: B. Lippincott Co., 1891. c. 2+181 p. D. (American novel ser.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The heroine, a beautiful daughter of Tennessee, has a great desire to study art. She declines the hand of a New York millionaire, whose anger at the slight sets in operation a plan of revenge. His point of attack is the tendency to financial speculation in the worldly and selfish father of the girl. The tragedy which results convinces her of the impossibility of marriage for herself.

Rules for duplicate* whist: the Kalamazoo method. (Patent applied for.) Kalamazoo, Mich., Ihling Bros. & Everard, [1891.] c. '90. 11 p. S. pap., 6 c.

In "duplicate whist" the cards are dealt but once, the players changing places after the first hands have been played and playing with the cards originally held by their opponents, thus eliminating chance from the game. Rules, score-sheets, and the history of the game are given.

Rutherford, Miss Millie. English authors: a handbook of English literature from Chaucer to living writers. [2*d ed.*] Athens, Ga., D. W. McGregor, [1891.] c. 728 p. il. por. D. cl., $2.

Compiled from notes accumulated during an experience of ten years in lecturing. The dates of birth and death and a list of the author's works precede a chatty account of every writer's life and work, in which the literary and historical matter is enlivened by personal anecdote. The material in regard to the later Victorian writers has been collected from magazines and newspapers; judgments of well-known critics are quoted, and a few extracts, mainly poems, are given.

Victor, Mrs. M. V. The gay captain. N. Y., Street & Smith, 1891. c. 3-250 p. D. (Select ser., no. 79.) pap., 25 c.

The daughter of an English lord is reared by a coarse, ill-tempered New England woman as maid-of-all-work. A mysterious stranger provides her with means to study for the stage. She acts in England, is wooed by the "gay captain" and learns her parentage. Insanity, attempted bigamy, false imprisonment, etc., make a sensational story.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MARCH 21, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE SPRING OUTLOOK.

THE year has opened with the realization of hopes in which, for some years past, the trade has vainly indulged. International copyright has become a fact, and close upon the opening of this season the book trade for the first time in its existence may feel that its business at last rests upon a firm foundation, and that it has a more even chance of meeting competition than ever before. The possibilities of the future seem enormous—if the trade is wise. A country of over 60,000,000 of people, and steadily growing, speaking one language, nearly all of them able to read, and on an average more able to buy books than the people of any other country, to be supplied with good literature by a service of well-organized, intelligent book-producers and book-distributers, whose interests are identical! After the reconstruction of the book trade the new conditions will, very likely, call out new forces. The book manufacturer—the printer simply, who heretofore has taken advantage of the brains and experience of others in putting his books on the market, on a "hit or miss" plan, will have to make way for the publisher—a man of literary discrimination and business enterprise. The automaton behind the counter, who heretofore has "handed" over the current books of the day, and sold them (chiefly to the fair sex) on their looks, or on his looks, he and his "emporium" will have to make way for the trained and scholarly bookseller and his bookstore. And literature—American literature—will be raised to a higher plane than ever before. Is this a fancy picture? We believe not. The book business in this country has hardly ever had a fair chance, yet it has in spite of adverse circumstances made for itself an honorable reputation. Why, then, should it not doubly do so under conditions favorable to success?

The publishing season, judging from the announcements to be found elsewhere in this issue, promises to be considerably better than that of many years. A few Boston houses, owing to the electrotypers' strike in that city, refrain from making announcements at present—they will no doubt be heard from later on. As for the rest, some very important announcements are made, showing an encouraging departure from the custom of previous years to put out in the spring only the riffraff, and to keep everything of any consequence for the fall. We believe a division of the output of the books of the year into three seasons—spring, summer, and fall and holiday—would in the end prove vastly more profitable than the present system of crowding everything, light and heavy (art, history, fiction, etc.), into the three last and busiest months of the year.

The reports, too, from the retail trade and jobbers indicate that the business of the year thus far holds its own with the sales of last year, an unusually good one. At any rate, there is no alarming falling off in business such as was experienced two or three years ago, and the watchword still seems to be Forward.

"WHAT, by the way, does 'Fourth Edition' mean on the title-page? Four thousand?—or four hundred?—or four times two hundred and fifty?" This is the question asked by a contemporary, and the echo still answers, in a faint voice, "What, indeed?" Would it not be more logical, not to say business-like, to state in exact terms how many copies a given new issue represents? French and German publishers, as a rule, and a number of English publishers, have for years adopted such a rule, and therefore the "fourth thousand" on their title-pages represents something that the "fourth edition" on other books does not always convey. Either the term has a meaning or it has not. In the first case it ought to be stated, in the second it might be omitted, unless it be a revised or an enlarged issue of a book. And in the latter case the term ought to apply to more than a mere verbal change in the title-page.

SUBSCRIBERS to the "English Catalogue" for 1890 will be interested to learn that their copies may be expected in about a week, advices having reached us that the consignment is under way. Only a few copies remain unsold, and as probably no more copies can be had after the present supply is exhausted, those who want a copy must apply at once.

DESCRIPTIVE SUMMARY OF THE SPRING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

THE descriptive summary which here follows presents, as usual, in its alphabetical arrangement by publishers, a survey of the entire field, so far as the necessary information is at hand. Other books, not yet fully determined upon, will find mention in subsequent issues. In our announcement lists proper, the books will be found arranged by classes, while the advertising pages will afford further detailed information as to prices, sizes, styles, etc.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY announce as nearly ready "Studies in St. John's Gospel," by Rev. Dr. David Gregg, an exposition of the International Sunday-School lessons for the second half of 1891; a cheap but correct "Bible Atlas," a series of maps made by Johnston, of London; and an edition of Spurgeon's "Sermons in Candles." In new fiction this house is preparing "Winter's Folly," a story by Mrs. Walton, the author of "Christie's Old Organ;" and "A Fisherman's Daughter," by Jenny Harrison. Several sets of plates of books formerly published by Robert Carter & Bros. have come into the possession of the Society, and new editions of many old favorites are promised. The separate titles will be found in the classified list in this number, under Juvenile Literature. They also call attention to an edition in eight volumes of D'Aubigné's "History of the Reformation in the Time of Calvin."

D. APPLETON & Co. have just issued "A Plea or Liberty," edited by Mr. Thomas Mackay, containing an introduction by Herbert Spencer, which is a most eloquent and comprehensive argument against the rapidly-increasing habit of looking to the government for help in private enterprises. Among the books announced as in preparation, a volume of present political and social and future historical value will be "The Sovereigns and Courts of Europe," in which a singularly well-informed writer has described who and what the rulers of Europe are to-day, in careful studies of twelve sovereigns, beginning with Queen Victoria, the German Emperor and the Czar of Russia, and ranging through all the countries of Europe until it reaches Turkey and its reigning Sultan. The author's name will be withheld for the present, but speculation will be eager regarding his identity when it is understood how intimate is the information given, which however excludes all scandalous gossip. Every study will be accompanied by a recent portrait of its subject, engraved on wood. Richard Malcolm Johnstone's delightful short stories, which have enlivened the pages of Harper's, The Century and other magazines, with the addition of an unpublished tale, will be brought out as a volume in The Town and Country Library, and there will also be a cloth edition, uniform with that of the author's "Widow Guthrie," of which a second edition is already in preparation. The new volume will contain ten of the author's stories of Middle Georgia, and will bear the general title of "The Primes and Their Neighbors." Miss Duncan's delightful and successful book, "A Social Departure," will be followed by "An American Girl in London," which is said to be just as bright and witty a record of travel as her former book, and the volume will be made specially attractive by illustrations from the pencil of F. H. Townsend, who did the clever pictures in "A Social Departure." Although the first editions of two recently published books were far larger than first editions commonly are, new editions have already been called for, and are in preparation, of Ellwanger's "Story of My House," and Gail Hamilton's "Washington Bible-Class."

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON have nearly ready the first volume of "Institutes of Christian Religion," by Prof. E. V. Gerhart, of the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church, Lancaster, Pa., with an introduction by Philip Schaff. The book will consist of four parts: 1, The Source of Theological Knowledge; 2, The Christ-Idea, the principle of Christian doctrine; 3, Theology, or, the doctrine on God; and 4, Cosmology, or the doctrine on creation and Providence. The work has considerably outgrown the proportions first planned upon its announcement in 1890, but will nevertheless be issued at the price then fixed. A full index of subjects will be annexed, testifying of much care and labor. The new volumes in the Expositor's Bible will be "Book of Proverbs," by Rev. A. F. Horton; "The Book of Leviticus," by Rev. Dr. S. H. Kellogg; "The Gospel of St. John," vol. 2, by Rev. Dr. Marcus Dods; and "The Acts of the Apostles," by Rev. Dr. G. T. Stokes, of Dublin University.

BAKER, VOORHIS & CO.'s announcements for the Spring season will be found under the heading of Law, Government, etc., in the classified list preceding this department.

THE BALTIMORE PUBLISHING CO. will bring out an edition of their "New Testament" (Roman Catholic Version) in double-column and large print. They are not prepared as yet to make further announcements.

BENZIGER BROTHERS have in preparation "Life of Just de Bretenières, Missionary Apostolic and Martyr in Corea," and "The Priest at the Altar, or, the sacrifice of the Mass worthily celebrated," from the French of Father Chaignon, S.J., by Bishop de Goesbriand.

P. BLAKISTON, SON & CO. will publish immediately some important works, of which the titles will be found under the heading of Medical Science, in the classified list preceding this department.

ROBERT BONNER'S SONS have recently added several good novels to their Choice Series, which will soon number half a hundred volumes. It already includes illustrated editions of Balzac's "Cousin Pons," "The Alchemist" and "César Birotteau;" "A Matter of Millions," by Anna Katherine Green, illustrated by Victor Perard; "Mrs. Harold Stagg," by Robert Grant, who has been unusually successful in satirizing society and its plans and purposes; "Reunited," a strong story of the Civil War, by a Southern writer, and other stories of interest by well-known writers. Among the volumes shortly to be added to the series are "Lilith," a sequel to "The Unloved Wife," in which Mrs. Southworth will contribute some recent work; "The Beads of Tasmer," by Mrs. Amelia E. Barr, who is just beginning a five-years' contract to write exclusively for the Bonners; and two translations from German authors, to be entitled "The Northern Light," translated from the German of E. Werner by Mrs. D. M. Lowrey, and "The Breach of Custom," adapted from an unnamed German author by the same translator and to be illustrated by O. W. Simons.

The new books in The Popular Series, the twenty-five-cent library of copyright novels, will be Sylvanus Cobb's "The Outcast of Milan" and "Rollo of Normandy," William O. Stoddard's "Mark Satterlee Among the Indians," and Leon Lewis' "Kit Carson's Last Trail."

THE BOSTON SCHOOL SUPPLY CO. have in preparation a series, to be entitled The Information Readers, the object of which will be to aid the young learner to understand the life of the world around him—that is, for instance, to be able to describe the sources from which food is obtained, how cloth is made, etc. The series, in other words, will subordinate elocution to instruction in practical information. The first volume will be on "Foods and Beverages," by Dr. E. A. Beal. They also announce Part 2, Modern History, in Edgar Sanderson's "Epitome of the World's History," fully illustrated with maps, charts and engravings.

BRADLEY & WOODRUFF, Boston, will publish shortly "The Hearing Heart," by Anna Shipton.

BRENTANO'S, New York, announce several books specially calculated to make social intercourse pleasant and amusing. "Do" will be a handy book for reference, giving advice in social matters—such as calls, cards, chaperones, clubs, correspondence, débuts, dinners, dress, guests, invitations, acquaintances, balls, etc., and also calling attention to special characteristics of parents and children, to annoyances of oddities, pets, etc., all arranged under general headings and pointing out many things which well-bred men and women do. "Gentlemen, Dress and Deportment" will go a step further, and deal with phases of social etiquette, which the ordinary book on manners cannot treat. It will presuppose a thorough acquaintance with the fundamental rules and habits of polite society, and deal exclusively with delicate questions which often puzzle experienced men of the world, the answers in many cases being precedents established by the leaders of American Society of the day. In Foster's "Whist Manual" will be found a complete system of instruction in the game for those who intend to give it true study, formulated and arranged by an experienced teacher. Of use to little ones in training for social life will be "Mother's Help and Child's Friend," by Carrica le Favre, dedicated to the children of America, whose nurseries the author thinks are seriously in need of improvement. They have also under way a story for boys, of smugglers and royal English revenue officers, by Manville Fenn, entitled "Cutlass and Cudgel."

A. L. BURT, 56 Beekman Street, N. Y., announces a series of select works by standard authors, to be published on the 1st and 15th of every month, which will be known as The Manhattan Library. The books will be printed on extra paper, and will be bound in an attractive paper cover. The volumes thus far planned for the series are: Blackmore's "Lorna Doone;" Auerbach's "On the Heights," translated by F. E. Bunnett; Ebers' "Uarda," translated by Clara Bell; Charles Kingsley's "Hypatia;" George Eliot's "Romola;" Fouqué's "Undine," translated by F. E. Bunnett; Charlotte Brontë's "Jane Eyre;" Wilkie Collins' "The Moonstone," and Bulwer's "Last Days of Pompeii." Emerson's Essays will also form a volume in the new library.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING COMPANY have arranged for a new series of fiction, to be known as Cassell's Blue Library, for which they have engaged a special editor, who will admit none but books of high literary merit and of permanent value. Four volumes are thus far planned for. The initial volume will be "A Christian Woman," translated by Mary Springer from the Spanish of Mme. Emelia Pardo Bazán, who ranks as "the George Eliot of Spain." Mr. Rollo Ogden, who has specially studied the literature of Spain, will contribute an introduction to the book, in which he will give a sketch of Mme. Bazán and her work, and a fine portrait of the author will add to the interest of the volume. "A Wedding Trip," also by Mme. Bazán, will soon follow in the series. The titles of the other volumes will be: "There Is no Devil," by Maurus Jokái, the Hungarian novelist, whose hero is an American "Silver King," and "The Story of Two Lives," by Stuart Sterne. The Unknown Library, most auspiciously inaugurated with the publication of "Mademoiselle Ixe," will also receive many excellent stories told by writers of fame, who prefer for once to write under a pseudonym. The titles, as far as ascertained, will be "The Story of Eleanor Lambert," by Magdalen Brooke; "A Mystery of the Campagna and Shadows on the Wave," by Von Dezen; and "The Friend of Death." New volumes in the Sunshine Series will be Henry Harland's "Yoke of the Thora" and "Grandison Mather;" "Dead Man's Rock," by Q; "Who Is Guilty?" by Dr. Philip Woolf; "At Love's Extremes," by Maurice Thompson; "New Man at Rosemore," by Mrs. J. H. Walworth; "The Wedding-Ring," by Robert Buchanan; and "Vengeance Is Mine," all books already on the lists of the house, but not as yet put into the Sunshine Library. A new novel by Edgar Fawcett will be issued shortly, to be called "A New York Family," of which the main incidents take place during the reign of the "Tweed Ring," and in which the famous "Boss" will be an important character. The book will be profusely illustrated, chiefly by Thomas Nast, who did such efficient work in breaking up that notorious "Ring." Arrangements are just concluded whereby the Cassell Publishing Company become the authorized publishers in the United States of the works of J. M. Barrie, and they will shortly bring out his "A Window in Thrums," said by the London Standard to be "the very best of the many good sketches of Scottish peasant life;" and "My Lady Nicotine," a study in smoke, a delightful book on the subject of pipes and tobacco, full of refined and irresistible humor, in which every smoker will rejoice, and every man who has "sworn off" also. "Bras d'Acier," a novel by Alfred Brehet, will be translated from the French by A. Estolet, and will present a stirring story of the California of 1849, in which the hero is a French Admirable Crichton. A work of more serious character will be "The Parnell Movement," a history of the Irish question, from the death of O'Connell to the present time, by T. P. O'Connor, who, since his arrival in America, has added several chapters to his work, and brought it down to the present date. The introductory pages, by Thomas Nelson Page, give a sketch of the widely famed fighter for Home Rule. "Paris of To-Day," translated from the Danish of Richard Kaufmann by Miss Olga Flinch, will give a true picture of the boulevards, theatres, cafés, drives, actors and actresses, and in-mous men and women of beautiful Paris, which will be fully illustrated by H. Gerbault Cordova and others, and will be eagerly looked for by those who have seen all the wonders described, and also by those who have not yet realized their dream of seeing that wonderful city. A practical volume will be "Hints to Power Users," by Robert Grimshaw, who has already won a wide reputation as a writer of technical works in the various departments of engineering. The publishers as yet only mention a book which will be forthcoming, under the strong title of "Black America." "Through Russia on a Mustang," by Thomas Stevens, the famous bicyclist; and "The Enchanted," an authentic account of the strange origin of the New Psychical Club, by John Bell Bouton, complete an unusually interesting series of announcements.

ROBERT CLARKE & CO., Cincinnati, have in press reprints of Withers' "Chronicles of Border Warfare: a history of the settlement by the whites of Northwestern Virginia," etc. (1831); Haywood's "Civil and Political History of Tennessee," from its settlement to the year 1796 (1823); the same author's "Natural and Aboriginal History of Tennessee" (1823), and a new work, entitled "Beginnings of Literary Culture in the Ohio Valley," by Dr. W. H. Venable. They also announce a book of great historical value in "The Spanish Confederacy," a review of early Spanish movements in the Southwest, containing proofs of the intrigues of James Wilkinson and John Brown and of Sebastian in 1795–1797, by Thomas Marshall Green, author of "Historic Families of Kentucky."

J. G. CUPPLES CO. already announce a second edition of "The Chevalier of Pensieri-Vani, with Frequent References to the Prorege of Arcopia," which will bear the name of its author, Henry B. Fuller, of Chicago, and not his pseudonym. A few copies of the new edition in white cloth will be reserved for special application. Among other announcements are "Letter and Spirit," a volume of sonnets collected from the best poetical work of Anna M. Richards; also, "Therapeutic Sarcognomy," by Prof. J. R. Buchanan, who will offer a new science of soul, brain and body, which will aim to present one systematic view of the functions of the brain, the body and soul, with their exact anatomical connections and complex relations, and promises to develop a new system of practice in disease, and of hygienic laws for all humanity.

DE WOLFE, FISKE & CO. announce to the trade that they will hereafter break the sets of their handsome complete edition of the "Works of Charles Reade," and will supply any of the volumes as desired; a fact which will without doubt make the books more salable, as many customers who cannot hope to own a whole set of Charles Reade will be more than content to get separate volumes in such attractive permanent shapes. The house will also have ready at once new editions from the plates purchased from the estate of Robert Carter, of the famous "Warner Books," and of the most popular works of Joanna M. Mathews, including six volumes of the "Bessie Books," six volumes of "Miss Ashton's Girls," and six volumes of "Haps and Mishaps."

DICK & FITZGERALD will have ready immediately "Little Lines for Little Speakers," by Clara J. Denton, which will contain short pieces suitable for recitation for children from four to ten years of age, including well-selected pieces for special and holiday occasions.

DODD, MEAD & CO. announce as additions to the series of Makers of America, "Francis Higginson (1587–1630)," by Thomas Wentworth Higginson; "Cotton Mather (1663–1728)," by Prof. Barrett Wendell, of Harvard University; and "Sir William Johnson and the Six Nations (1715–1774)," by William Eliot Griffis, author of "The Mikado's Empire." To the Giunta Series will be added "The Citation of William Shakespeare," by Walter Savage Landor, with an introduction by Hamilton Wright Mabie, and the "Journal of Maurice de Guerin," with a biographical and literary memoir by Sainte-Beuve, translated from the twentieth French edition by Jessie P. Frothingham; and a volume on "Ferdinand Magellan," by F. H. H. Guillemand, with illustrations and colored maps, will be ready in the series of The World's Great Explorers. Several of the successful novels recently published by the house will be reissued in the Blue Paper Series. Among those thus far mentioned are "Ardis Claverden," by Stockton; "The Jew," by Kraszewski; "The Doctor's Dilemma," by Hesba Stretton; "The Delight-Makers," by Bandelier; "Jan Vedder's Wife" and "The Bow of Orange Ribbon," by Amelia E. Barr. A welcome book will be "Under the Trees and Elsewhere," by Hamilton Wright Mabie, a companion to "My Study Fire," of which charming volume a new edition is also forthcoming. "Political and Social Letters of a Lady of the Eighteenth Century," edited by Emily F. D. Osborn, will be a companion to "Letters of Dorothy Osborne;" "Health without Medicine" is announced as a record of personal experience by Theodore H. Mead; and Prof. James M. Hoppin will have a volume of "Sermons upon Faith, Hope and Love." The titles of the new novels in preparation are: "The Villa at Centurano ('Fantasia')," translated from the Italian of Matilde Serao by Luigi Monti; "Madame d'Orgevaut's Husband," translated from the French of Henry Rabusson by Frank Hunter Potter; and "Iermola," by Joseph Ignatius Kraskewski, translated by Mrs. M. Carey.

E. P. DUTTON & CO. will publish shortly a second edition of "Forty Days with the Master," a series of readings for Lent, by Bishop Huntington; a third edition of "The Light of the World, and other sermons," by Phillips Brooks; and a book of sermons by the Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington, of Grace Church, New York City, to be entitled "Causes of the Soul." Three new stories by Emma Marshall are forthcoming, to be entitled "Winchester Meads in the Days of Bishop Ken," "Eastward Ho!" a story for girls, and "When I Was Young." The same author will also have ready "Eventide Light, or, passages in the life of Dame Margaret Hoby." Mrs. Mary D. Brine has written two stories which will be brought out with illustrations under the titles "My Little Margaret" and "The Little New Neighbor;" and "Laddie," by the author of "Miss Toosey's Mission," will also be ready in one of the dainty volumes these publishers are so skilled in making.

ESTES & LAURIAT have in preparation a fine edition of Bulwer's "Last Days of Pompeii," in two volumes, uniform with the "Romola" published last Christmas. It will be illustrated with fifty photogravures from restorations and photographs. There will also be an édition de luxe in full parchment binding, printed on large paper, with the plates on imperial Japan paper, which will be limited to 250 copies. A bright story for girls may be expected in the sequel to "Queen Hildegarde," Laura E. Richards' pretty book, which will deal with "Hildegarde's Holiday."

THE EXCELSIOR PUBLISHING HOUSE, New York, will have ready shortly "Rules of Order in a Nutshell," by William Hallenbeck; "A Political History in Cipher, with Key," useful to Masons, who are advised to master its contents and not encourage the publishing of Masonic regulations in books that may be read by outsiders; and a new edition of Byron's "Modern Bartender's Guide," with many new recipes.

W. APPLETON FERREE, Philadelphia, announces the publication of a series of helps for the student and practitioner, under the general title of "Medical Don'ts," all to be written by men of ability and standing, and all promising to be of marked professional value and of great practical use in diagnosis and treatment. The volumes will be of convenient size for the pocket and will be sold at uniform price. The first publication is almost ready and will be "Obstetrical Don'ts," by Dr. T. Ridgway Barker, of the Medico-Chirurgical College and Hospital, Philadelphia. Other books thus far planned for the important series are "Surgical Don'ts," "Therapeutical Don'ts," "Dental Don'ts," "Gynecological Don'ts" and "Don'ts in Medical Specialties."

FORDS, HOWARD & HULBERT announce a separate issue of "Henry Ward Beecher: a study of his personality, career and influence in public affairs," by John R. Howard, originally written as an introduction to Beecher's "Patriotic Addresses—1850 to 1885." This is reprinted in answer to calls for a brief biography of Beecher, and as it is recognized as having been written from fulness of knowledge in personal intimacy, but with discrimination and good taste, it will doubtless find a place. A new book by Amos K. Fiske, author of "Midnight Talks at the Club," will soon be ready, entitled "Beyond the Bourn: reports of a traveller returned from the 'Undiscovered Country'" — popularly philosophic and speculative, which will be uniform with "Midnight Talks." An interesting announcement is that this house will, from March 16, be the exclusive trade agents for Bromfield & Co.'s list of books; interesting especially because the first title is Henry Ward Beecher's "Life of Jesus, the Christ: Completed Edition"—a book originated by the Ford house in 1867, and after many vicissitudes again in their hands. The others of this list are: "Biography of Henry Ward Beecher," by Wm. C. Beecher and Rev. Samuel Scoville, assisted by Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher; "American Christian Rulers," sketches of religious men prominent in American colonial and national history, by E. J. Giddings; "The Pastor's Pocket Manual for Funerals," ed. by Rev. Joseph Sanderson, D.D., LL.D.; "Biblia Triglotta," giving the Old and New Testaments in triple columns, in the original tongues—Hebrew, Greek Septuagint, and Latin Vulgate, O. T., and Greek, Syriac, and Latin Vulgate, N. T.; "Mr. Dide: his vacation in Colorado," by L. B. France; "Trying to Find Europe," by Jimmy Brown (W. L. Alden); and some others. The house reports a growing interest in Tourgée's "Murvale Eastman: Christian Socialist," and the new combination-novel "Juggernaut: a veiled record," by Geo. Cary Eggleston and Dolores Marbourg, bids fair to take both the public and the critics. One of the latter calls it "a keen, irresistible story of two lives; swift, straight and brilliant as a sword-thrust—and as terrible."

FUNK & WAGNALLS will have ready shortly "The Epic of Saul," by Prof. William Cleaver Wilkinson, of which certain passages have already appeared as separate poems in the columns of The Century, The Independent and other periodicals. The complete poem is said to popularize in a vivid way one of the most striking incidents of Gospel history, and to make impressive the great lessons taught by the greatest Apostle. The book will be printed on heavy super-calendered paper, and will be illustrated by fifteen full-page photogravures made in Paris specially for this work. "The Encyclopædia of Missions" is also rapidly nearing completion. This will be a thesaurus of facts historical, statistical, geographical, ethnological and biographical, with maps, statistical tables and full bibliography, the first attempt to give all the facts of importance concerning the missions of all denominations and countries, the character of the races among whom the work is done, and their social and political conditions. This great undertaking will be in two volumes, when completed. Another important undertaking is "The Encyclopædia of Temperance and Prohibition," which is planned to cover all phases of the question, to treat every pertinent subject, giving full statistical tables, sketches of organizations, etc. The article on Bible wines will contain contributions from the most distinguished leaders of opposing views—Dr. G. W. Samson and Dr. Howard Crosby. Indeed, the bulk of the large volume will be made up of signed contributions from men and women known as authorities on certain phases of the temperance problem. "Frederick Douglass: the colored orator," by Frederic May Holland, just issued in their series of American Reformers, will shortly be followed by volumes on "Abraham Lincoln: the emancipator," by Prof. C. H. French, and on "John G. Whittier: the poet of freedom," by W. Sloane Kennedy.

GINN & CO.'s list of spring announcements will be found under the heading of Education, Language, etc., in the classified list elsewhere in this issue.

W. S. GOTTSBERGER & CO. have just ready in sumptuous form one of Sir Edwin Arnold's "Indian Song of Songs," entitled "After Death in Arabia." It is illustrated with eighteen head and tail pieces, printed on parchment paper and tied with silk ribbon.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready "Our Italy," by Charles Dudley Warner, giving an enthusiastic description of Southern California; and "A New England Nun, and other stories," by Mary E. Wilkins, whose "Humble Romance, and other stories," gave promise of fine work in the future. "Flute and Violin, and other Kentucky tales and romances," by James Lane Allen, is announced in press; and "Recollections of President Lincoln and His Administration," by Lucius E. Chittenden, as nearly ready. These will shortly be followed by "New York and Its Environs," by Gustav Kobbé, an acknowledged expert in descriptive handbooks, who will spare no pains to secure a valuable collection of maps, plans and illustrations; and two stories in one volume, by Lucy C. Lillie, to be entitled "Phil and the Baby."

and "False Witness." A little later in the season there will be cheap editions, in paper covers, of several popular books, including Howells' "Hazard of New Fortunes" and "Annie Kilburn;" "A Box of Monkeys, and other farce comedies," by Grace L. Furniss; "Iduna, and other stories," by George A. Hibbard; "A Flying Trip Around the World," by Elizabeth Bisland," and "What to Eat and How to Serve It," by Christine Terhune Herrick.

D. C. HEATH & Co.'s list of spring announcements will be found under the heading of Education, Language, etc., in the classified list in this issue.

HENRY HOLT & Co. announce a long list of valuable educational works, of which the full titles will be found in the classified list preceding this department, under the heading of Education, Language, etc. The house has been fortunate in obtaining the American novel entitled "Jerry," one of the strongest stories now running in the magazines, which has been a great attraction in Scribner's Magazine for many months. There will also be, in the course of the spring, a new volume by Jerome K. Jerome, entitled "Diary of a Pilgrimage," and a cheaper edition of Auerbach's "On the Heights" in the Leisure Moment Series.

HOMANS PUBLISHING Co. have in preparation two new volumes in their special line of books for bankers. "The Banker's Almanac and Register," edited by Albert S. Bolles, is dated January and July; but its varied material can rarely be brought into shape until several weeks after date. The volume for the first half year is announced as just ready. Albert S. Bolles has also prepared "The Law of Suspension of the Power of Alienation in the State of New York," which will be out very shortly.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. publish this spring some important books in biography, notably the "Life of Dr. James Freeman Clarke," which includes an autobiographical sketch, copious extracts from his diary and correspondence, the whole connected and supplemented by Edward Everett Hale. The book will contain a fine portrait of Dr. Clarke, and on account of the perhaps unique place which he held in the regard of Americans, it ought to have a wide circulation. "John Wesley" has just been placed with "Cardinal Newman" in the series of English Leaders of Religion; the "Life of President Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin," by Prof. G. F. Wright, of Oberlin College, will soon be added to the series of American Religious Leaders; and "Lewis Cass," by Prof. Andrew C. McLaughlin, of the University of Michigan, will be added to the series of American Statesmen. A new edition of the "Life of Longfellow" will appear shortly, in which the "Final Memorials," originally included in a third volume supplementary to the two volumes of his "Life," will be incorporated in their rightful places in those two volumes, but the work thus brought into proper chronological order will not be reduced in size, and will still form three crown octavo volumes, though the price will be reduced from $9 to $6. In the department of history there are only two announcements to make, but these are of the first order of interest. "The American Revolution," by John Fiske, includes articles which he has contributed on that subject to the Atlantic Monthly during the last two years or more, with such additions and corrections as are necessary to make a continuous narrative. This work will have as an embellishment a steel portrait of Washington, which has never been engraved or in any way given to the public. It is from a miniature now belonging to Mrs. Augustus Hemenway, of Boston. The other work is also by Mr. Fiske, and is entitled "The Discovery and Spanish Conquest of America." This is based upon a series of lectures delivered by Mr. Fiske, and is the fullest, most readable and most satisfactory account which has been given of the period and the events covered by it. This work, like the other, will be in two octavo volumes. In the department of Fiction the most noteworthy book perhaps is "Felicia," by Miss Fanny N. D. Murfree, which has just concluded a very prosperous course in the Atlantic Monthly, in which it has won perhaps more attentive readers than many of the serials which appear in American magazines. Mrs. Miriam Coles Harris has written a story, the title of which cannot now be given, but it will be issued in good season for summer reading. There is no need of commending to public favor a novel by the author of "Rutledge." There will be three volumes of short stories, which promise to be of far more interest than ordinary volumes of that class, namely "Balaam and His Master, and other stories," by Joel Chandler Harris; "Otto the Knight, and other stories," by Octave Thanet, whose previous volume, "Knitters in the Sun," contains some of the best short stories in American literature; and "Fourteen to One" (or perhaps the book will bear some other title), by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps. In the Riverside Paper Series will appear, at an early date, "Two Coronets," by Mary Agnes Tincker, and "Steadfast," by Rose Terry Cooke. The department of Travel will receive some noteworthy additions: "Japanese Girls and Women," containing a great deal of information with regard to the domestic life of Japan, by Alice M. Bacon, who has had peculiarly favorable opportunities for learning facts in regard to Japanese domestic life; "Noto: an unexplored corner of Japan," by Percival Lowell, which has just been completed in the Atlantic Monthly; a revised edition of the "Satchel Guide" for the vacation tourist in Europe; a new edition of Mrs. Hawthorne's very interesting "Notes in England and Italy;" a tourists' edition of Mr. Ballou's "Alaska," which describes the parts of that country which travellers are most likely to visit, and newly revised editions of Sweetser's three "Guide-Books to New England," the White Mountains and the Maritime Provinces. Several religious books are announced: a little volume, by Miss Larcom, entitled "As It Is in Heaven," containing earnest and reverent reflections upon the future life; a volume of "King's Chapel Sermons," containing twenty-eight discourses given in one of Boston's historic churches, by Rev. Dr. A. P. Peabody; "Who Wrote the Bible?" by Rev. Washington Gladden, a useful, reverent book, embodying the results of the most scholarly and judicious criticism of the few past years; and a new edition of "Christian Symbols and Stories of the Saints as Illustrated in Art," by Mrs. Clara Erskine Clement, and edited by Katherine E. Conway, containing a large number of illustrations. Other books not necessary to classify are a volume of most readable essays, entitled "Excursions in Art and Letters," by William W. Story; "The Epic of the Inner Life," a volume by Prof. Genung, of Amherst, treating of the Book of Job, not from the standpoint of theology, but as a dramatic representation of a good man sorely pressed by trials and calamities; a translation of the entire Odyssey of Homer into English rhythmic prose, by Prof. Geo. H. Palmer, of Harvard University; a new edition, at reduced price, of Langley's wonderfully interesting volume on "The New Astronomy," with many illustrations; "Whist in Diagrams," by G. W. P., a companion volume to his "American Whist Illustrated;" a second volume of Prof. Sargent's very important work on "The Silva of North America;" and the first portion of Prof. Norton's prose translation of Dante's Works.

THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO. will publish the "Encyclopædic Dictionary of the English and German Languages," a companion work to the "German-French and French-German Dictionary of Sachs and Villate," a most valuable publication which has been prepared in the course of twenty years (1868–1888) with the aid of able contributors, natives of Great Britain and the United States, by Dr. Edward Muret. As nearly as can yet be calculated, this dictionary will be completed in thirty-three numbers, every one containing about 112 pages, and it is planned to publish five numbers a year. The wider range and superior richness of the English vocabulary will make it necessary to treat the material more briefly at certain points than was done in the Sachs-Villate work. The dictionary, being international, will not follow all the interpretations of a word to its finest shades of meaning, but will be planned to serve two nations as a means of understanding each other, and above all give translations and furnish definitions only when the mere translation will not suffice. The English-German part contains a complete phonetic re-spelling of every title-word, indicated after the widely-known system of Toussaint-Langenscheidt, which has stood the test of practical application for upwards of a quarter of a century. The publishers also announce the fifth edition of "Das Amerikanische Skizzenbüchele," two epistles in verse written by Georg Asmus, who is supposed to be a young unsophisticated German boy telling his first impressions of America to the still more unsophisticated people he has left behind him in a little German nest.

JOHN IRELAND, New York, will publish at once a valuable work on the English language by F. Horace Teall, entitled "The Compounding of English Words," which explains when and why joining or separation is preferable, and gives clear, concise rules, and full alphabetical list of words to illustrate them. The author dedicates his book to authors, printers, teachers, telegraphers, stenographers, typewriters, and all who care for correct writing of English, and proves that his is the first systematic attempt to disentangle the perplexities of English compounding. He maintains that principles exist upon which a classification of all necessary compounds may be based, and he endeavors to afford an accurate exposition of the same. The author is a practical printer, and his advice to proof-readers and compositors is especially practical. "The Century Dictionary" has been freely consulted, and a number of terms have been included that have not been given in earlier dictionaries. The headings of the chapters show the field covered: Dictionary vocabularies, Webster's International Dictionary; Idiomatic phrases; Adverbs and prep*ositions used as* adverbs; Nouns used as adjectives; Needless joining of adjective and noun; List of phrases needlessly compounded; Bad teaching of noted teachers; When two words become one; Compounds of solid form, and List of inseparable compounds.

JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY, through its publication agency, will issue during the coming season "The Development of Municipal Unity in the Lombard Colonies," by William K. Williams, announced a year ago, but still unpublished; "State and Federal Government in Switzerland," by J. M. Vincent; "University Education in Maryland," by B. C. Steiner, which will include a sketch of the Johns Hopkins University, by D. C. Gilman, and a note on "University Education," by R. G. Moulton; and the "First Report in Surgery of Johns Hopkins Hospital," by W. S. Halsted. Valuable contributions to natural history will be "The Oyster" and "Memoir on the Genus Salpa," both by W. K. Brooks.

P. J. KENEDY has in press a new book by Christine Faber, entitled "A Chivalrous Deed, and what came of it," a truthful tale of New York City school life.

H. L. KILNER & CO., Philadelphia, are preparing a large assortment of prayer-books and books of devotion, as well as of stories for young Catholic Christians, among which the most important are "First Prayer-Book;" "A Simple Prayer-Book;" "Little Way of the Cross;" Christian Reid's "Carmela;" Lady Herbert's "Edith;" "Last Cæsars of Byzantium;" "Jacques Cœur;" "Robert Bruce;" "The Moor of Granada," etc.

LEE & SHEPARD will bring out early in the spring the second volume in their Library Edition of "The Speeches, Lectures and Letters of Wendell Phillips," covering the years immediately after 1861, during which Wendell Phillips did some of his most telling work with special reference to the causes of temperance and the emancipation of women; also a Library Edition, in five volumes, of "The Life and Works of Horace Mann," which will contain the biography written by his wife, and his lectures, reports, essays and miscellaneous papers, edited by his son, George Combe Mann. A little later will be issued "Struggles of the Nations," by S. M. Burnham, which will give the history of the principal wars, battles, sieges and treaties of the world. Of works bearing on fine arts, there will be the "Catalogue of the Engraved and Lithographed Work of John and Letto Wells Cheney," compiled by S. R. Koehler, Curator of the Section of Graphic Arts in the United States National Museum of the Smithsonian Institution; "Outlines for the Study of Drawing," prepared by Emma F. Bowler, and adapted to the needs of normal schools; and "Gestures and Attitudes," an exposition of the Delsarte philosophy of expression, theoretical and practical, by Edward B. Warman, author of "The Voice, and How to Train It." A series of sermons by the Rev. Dr. Louis Albert Banks, will be entitled "The People's Christ." The works of fiction announced for the Good Company Series are "Sardia," a study of love, by Cora Linn Daniels; "If She Will She Will," by the author of "That Husband of Mine;" and "Which Wins?" a story of social conditions, by Mary H. Ford. Juvenile literature will be represented by "A Queer Family," by Effie W. Merriman; "Little Folks East and West," a collection of stories by Harriet R. Shattuck, and "Glimpses at the Plant World," by Fanny D. Bergen. A volume of recitations, compiled by Anna H. Shaw, Alice Stone Blackwell and Lucy Elmina Anthony, will be called "The Yellow Ribbon Speaker," and this will be followed by "The White Ribbon Speaker" and "The Blue Ribbon Speaker."

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO. have just ready E. Cobham Brewer's "Historic Note-Book," for which many have been impatiently waiting since it was reported in press last fall. Another valuable contribution to history will be "The Old Navy and the New," by Rear-Admiral Daniel Ammen, which will contain an appendix of personal letters written by General Grant. Of scientific importance will be "Aids in Practical Geology," by Grenville A. J. Cole; "An Introduction to the Study of Metallurgy," by W. C. Roberts-Austen; "Tables for the Determination of Minerals," by Persifor Frazer, Jr., and "The Design of Structures," a practical treatise on the building of bridges, roofs, etc., by S. Anglin, with numerous diagrams, examples and tables. The list of novels promised is extended, and includes, to be published in Lippincott's Series of Select Novels, "The Plunger," by Hawley Smart, a turf tragedy of five and twenty years ago; "A Draught of Lethe," the romance of an artist, by Roy Tellet; "Two English Girls," by Mabel Hart; and, in the American Novel Series, "An Exceptional Case," by Itti Kinney-Réno. Separate works of fiction will be "Di," a story by Squier L. Pierce; and "Captain Blake," by Captain Charles King. An allegorical poem, to be entitled "Man Immortal," has been written by William Stitt Taylor; and there will be a new edition of "A Sketch-Book of the American Episcopate," by Rev. H. G. Batterson. The house intends starting a quarterly periodical, to be called International Clinics, and to cover clinical lectures on medicine, surgery, gynæcology, neurology, ophthalmology, laryngology, etc., delivered by the professors in the leading medical colleges of the United States, Great Britain and Canada. It will be edited by Drs. John M. Keating and Crozier Griffith, of Philadelphia, and Drs. J. Mitchell Bruce and David Finlay, of London. The quarterly volumes will run about three hundred pages.

LITTLE, BROWN & CO. have just ready "The Birds of Greenland," by Andreas T. Hagerup, translated from the Danish by Frimann B. Arngrimson, and edited by Montague Chamberlain, which furnishes a complete catalogue of the birds of the North, with interesting notes. As yet the firm make no announcements of future publications.

D. LOTHROP COMPANY have issued several books since the beginning of the year, and still have in preparation several works, chiefly in the departments of religious books, fiction and juveniles. "Christ Himself," by Rev. Dr. Alexander McKenzie, will be a volume of sermons marked by deep thought and bright verbal illustrations; "The Gospels Are True Histories," by Rev. John Henry Barrows, will have an introduction by Rev. F. E. Clark, who will also publish a history of the Christian Endeavor movement, under the title of "Ways and Means." In fiction there will be "Fidalgos of Casa Mourisca," translated from the Portuguese by Roxana L. Dabney, showing the home-life, customs and characteristics of the Portuguese in an interesting story; and "Brotherhood," by Mary Cruger, a story forcibly presenting the difficult problems of man's relation to man in various phases of domestic, social and business life. For younger readers there will be "Aunt Hannah, and Martha, and John," by Pansy and Mrs. C. M. Livingston; "Rob: a story for boys," by Margaret Sidney; and "Sunday Album for Boys and Girls," arranged by Rev. J. R. Simmons. A Library Edition of the "Arabian Nights," edited by W. Eliot Griffis, will be issued in four volumes. Besides the above, which are all in active preparation, the house plans to bring out during the season "Stories of the Land of Evangeline;" "The True Womanhood," by Rev. John C. Fernald; "The Story of Massachusetts," by Edward Everett Hale; and "The Story of New Mexico," by Horatio O. Ladd, in the Story of the States Series, and a volume of poems collected from the writings of the late Horatio Nelson Powers, well known by his former collection entitled "Ten Years of Song."

A. LOVELL & CO. will issue at once "The Centenary Life of Wesley," by Edith C. Kenyon. Later they will bring out "Brunhilde, or, the last act of Norma," translated from the Spanish of Pedro A. Alarcón by Mrs. Francis J. A. Darr.

A. C. MCCLURG & CO. have lately brought out some volumes of enduring literary value in their Masterpieces of Foreign Authors, and have in preparation some new additions to the series. They thus far make definite announcement of only one book, Sainte-Beuve's "Portraits of Men," with a critical memoir by William Sharp, who holds that Sainte-Beuve was one of the foremost practical engineers in literature who "altered the course of the alien stream of criticism, compelled its waters to be tributary to the main river, and gave it a new impetus, a fresh and vital importance." The house also announces several works of fiction, among which the more important are "Down the O hi-o," by Charles H. Roberts; "From Timber to Town," a dialect story of distinct historical value, describing a phase of life now rapidly passing away, and giving vivid pictures of the early settlements in Southern Illinois; and "Monk and Knight," an historical novel by Rev. Dr. Gunsalus, of Chicago, dealing with the period of the Reformation.

DAVID MCKAY will publish shortly a German edition of "Physical Life of Woman," by Dr. Napheys. This book, the publisher claims, has had a sale of nearly half a million in English, and the German edition is prepared in response to a continued demand.

MACMILLAN & CO. are about to issue "Dr. Schliemann's Excavations at Troy, Mycenæ, etc.," written by Dr. Schuchhardt and translated by Eugenie Sellers, which will be fully illustrated; "A Biography of the Right Hon. A. M. Kavanagh," by Mrs. Steele; Hoffding's "Outlines of Psychology," translated by M. G. Lowndes; Kluge's "Etymological German Dictionary," translated by Dr. J. F. Davis; "A History of Chemistry," by Ernest Von Meyer, translated by George McGowan; "Canada and the Canadian Question," by Goldwin Smith; and a "Treatise on Human Marriage," by Edward Westermarck. In fiction the firm is preparing the Author's Edition of Rudyard Kipling's "The Light that Failed" and "Chips from the Log of an Old Salt," forming volume 6 of the Adventure Series, and dealing with the life of James Choyce, Master Mariner. There will be a new edition in six volumes of "Landor's Imaginary Conversations," with illustrations and an introduction and notes by C. G. Crump, of which the first volume will appear in April and the rest will follow in monthly issues; also a new and cheaper edition of Dr. Martineau's "Types of Ethical Theory." An important work in contemplation is "A Dictionary of Political Economy," edited by R. H. I. Palgrave, to which numerous authors in England and America will contribute. The work will appear in quarterly parts, of which the first is planned to be issued in April.

JOHN MURPHY & CO., Baltimore, Md., will bring out during the spring Richard Brinsley Sheridan Knowles' charming story of Irish life, called "Glencoonage," and two new stories in one volume, by Mrs. Anna Hanson Dorsey, to be called "Two Ways" and "Tom-Boy." They also announce the "Life of St. John Baptist de Rossi," in which Lady Herbert has given the history of the canonized secular priest, and the Bishop of Salford has furnished the introduction; a pretty "Altar Manual," printed in a rubrical style; and "The Will of God," a book of admonition and consolation for Catholic Christians who are sorely tried by the sorrows and perplexities of life. Later in the season they will also have ready "The Negro Problem," an essay by W. Cahill Bruce, of the Baltimore Bar, who takes the position that it is a race problem, pure and simple, aggravated by the abrupt elevation of the negro to citizenship and the sectional bias of the Republican party.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS have already issued their spring publications, and the trade is no doubt already handling them with success. Among the most attractive juveniles are "Archie's Find," by Eleanor Stredder; "Birdie's Resolve, and How It Was Accomplished," and "Dulcie's Love-Story," by Evelyn Everett-Green; "Little Lines and Threads of Gold to Guide Them," by Lady Alicia Blackwood; "The Land Where Jesus Christ Lived," by Hester Douglas, and "Summer Suns in the Far West," in which the Rev. Dr. W. G. Blaikie describes a holiday trip to the Pacific Slope. James Main Dixon's "Dictionary of Idiomatic English Phrases" is a valuable work; and the long array of Oxford Bibles and Prayer-Books is constantly growing by addition of new designs in shapes, covers and bindings, among which the most notable at the moment are the "Finger Testaments" and "Finger Prayer-Books."

THE OPEN COURT PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, make a specialty of works in philosophy, psychology, philology, science and economics. Among their recent publications a notable book is "The Soul of Man," by Dr. Paul Carus, who has made an investigation of the facts of physiological and experimental psychology, divided into six parts, under the following headings: The philosophical problem of the mind; the rise of organized life; physiological facts of brain-activity; the immortality of the race and the data of propagation; the investigations of experimental psychology; and the ethical and religious aspects of soul-life. An authorized translation of Th. Ribot's "Diseases of Personality" is under way; and a fine edition in two volumes of Gustav Freytag's world-renowned novel, "The Lost Manuscript," is just ready.

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY, Philadelphia, have under way, in their line for entertainments and exhibitions, "Best Selections, No. 19," compiled by Mrs. Anna Randall Diehl; "Conundrums and Jokes;" and "The Debater's Treasury," by William Pittenger. In their line of juvenile stories they promise "The Story of the Odyssey," by Dr. Edward Brooks, a companion to his "Story of the Iliad;" and volumes by Horatio Alger, James Otis and Sidney Marlow. Attention is also called to a line of handbooks which will open with a "Handbook of Pronunciation," and will also contain volumes on "Etiquette," "Letter-Writing" and "Conversation."

ISAAC PITMAN & SONS, N. Y., have just ready "The Holy Bible," lithographed in the easy reporting style of [Pitman's] phonography. The Bible in phonography has now been out of print for a long time. It is exactly twenty years since Mr. Isaac Pitman lithographed the last edition in 1871, the first edition having been done in 1867. The edition which is now ready is therefore the third edition of the Holy Scriptures which has appeared in phonography. In each case lithography has been employed, the cost of engraving the Bible in the style of the phonographic editions of the New Testament and Prayer-Book, being too great. The volume now issued is a very handsome one of 808 demy 8vo pages. The lithography has been done by Mr. James Butterworth, of South Shields, England, who has been a year in writing the transfers. Mr. Butterworth has spent his life in writing phonographic transfers, and seldom have we seen better work from his pen. The paper on which the edition is printed has been specially made, and combines thinness and opaqueness. As the work is lithographed, the edition is necessarily limited. Messrs. Pitman announce that a number of old editions of their books have been reprinted in this country which cannot be used with the keys for the later issues of those books. As this has given rise to considerable correspondence and dissatisfaction, booksellers will do well to take notice of the fact.

JAMES POTT & CO. will have ready shortly two new books by Henry Drummond which will be brought out in leatherette, with title in silver and blue, and also in cheap paper editions. The titles will be "First, a Talk with Boys," an address delivered to the Boys' Brigade at Manchester, England, and "The Changed Life," both full of the practical Christianity which makes this author's books so helpful.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS are planning for a very active season, during which they will publish works in almost every line of literature. A work already impatiently expected is promised in "The Memoirs of Talleyrand," edited by the Duc de Broglie, which will be in five volumes, the first two to appear early in April. The book will have an introduction by the Hon. Whitelaw Reid, U. S. Minister to France. Extracts from this biography are now appearing in the Century Magazine. Other volumes of biographical interest will be "The Life and Letters of George Mason, of Virginia," a two-volume work, edited by Kate Mason Rowland; and two additions to the Heroes of the Nations Series, treating respectively of "Theodoric, the Goth," in which the barbarian champion of civilization will be described by Thomas Hodgkin, and "Sir Philip Sidney," in which the chivalry of England will be described by H. R. Fox-Bourne. History will be represented by "A Commentary on the Campaign and Battle of Manassas, of July, 1861," by General G. T. Beauregard, who will also give a summary of the art of war, fully illustrated with plans; "The History of the Nineteenth Army Corps," by Richard B. Irvin, formerly Lieut.-Col. of Volunteers in the Department of the Gulf; and "The Story of Portugal," by H. Morse Stephens, which will be volume 33 in the Story of the Nations Series. In the department of description there will be "Pilgrims in Palestine," a narrative of a family journey through the Holy Land, with a preface by Thomas Hodgkin; and a fourth edition of "Norsk, Lapp and Finn, or, travel-tracings from the far North of Europe," by Frank Vincent, a book first issued in 1881, and still fresh in all its details about life in Norway, Sweden and Denmark. New works of fiction will be "The Speculator," a romance of the present day, by Clinton Ross, and "The Sardonyx Seal," a romance of Normandy, by Belle Gray Taylor. "Representative Irish Stories," compiled with introduction and notes by W. B. Yeats, in two volumes; "Stories from the Arabian Nights," selected and edited by Stanley Lane-Poole, in three volumes; "French Ballads," edited by Prof. T. F. Crane, and printed in the original text; and "German Ballads," edited by Prof. H. S. White, and also printed in the original text, will be the additions to the Knickerbocker Nuggets. Other forthcoming volumes of poetry will be "Rose Brake, and other poems," by Danske Dandridge, and "Idle Hours," a collection of verse, by W. De Witt Wallace. Political science will receive additions in "The Relation of Labor to the Law of To-Day," by Lujo Brentano, Professor of Political Economy in the University of Berlin, translated with an introduction by Porter Sherman; "Chapters on the Theory and History of Banking," by Professor Charles F. Dunbar, of Harvard University; and two new volumes in the Questions of the Day Series: an essay to be entitled "Parties and Patronage," by Lyon G. Tyler, President of William and Mary College, and "The Question of Copyright," consisting of the text of the new American law, of the older law, now superseded, of the British law, etc., the International Copyright Convention at Berne, Sept. 5, 1887, and many other important documents, essays, etc., on the general subject. Of hygienic bearing will be "Drinking-Water and Ice Supplies, and Their Relations to Health and Disease," by T. M. Prudden; "Manual of the Domestic Hygiene of the Child," by Julius Uffelmann, translated by Harriot Ransome Milinowski, and edited by Mary Putnam Jacobi, intended for students, physicians, sanitary officials, teachers and mothers; also Mrs. Brugière's "Good Living," a practical cookery-book for town and country. The third volume of the "Papers of the American Society of Church History;" "Gospel Criticism and Historical Christianity," by Rev. Dr. Orello Cone; "Application and Achievement, and other essays," by J. Hazard Hartzell, edited by his sons; and Kirk Munroe's "Boring for Oil" complete the list as far as announced.

A. D. F. RANDOLPH & Co. will have ready shortly "The Psalms," a new translation, with introductory essay and notes by the Rev. Dr. John De Witt, Senior Biblical Professor in the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, New Jersey, beautifully printed on heavy paper by the University Press. "The Hittites, Their Inscriptions and Their History," by John Campbell, will be a monument of patient and profound scholarship, such as it requires the best part of a student's life even under the most favorable circumstances, to erect. The mere enumeration of the titles of the learned societies, which have enrolled Prof. Campbell on their lists of members and correspondents, would go far beyond our space, but would include a large proportion of the most famous organizations on both sides of the Atlantic devoted to archæological studies and researches. "The Spiritual Development of St. Paul," by Rev. George Matheson, Minister of the Parish of St. Bernard's in Edinburgh, will be a volume of great ability in which the author will draw his materials solely from the epistles of the great apostle and not dwell upon the view of St. Paul given in the writings of others. New volumes in The Biblical Illustrator will be "Genesis" in two volumes; and "Philippians and Colossians" in one volume; the volumes planned for the Pulpit Commentary will cover "Romans" and "Proverbs;" and to the Men of the Bible will be added "Gideon and the Judges," by Rev. Dr. John Marshall; and "Ezra and Nehemiah." "The Planting of the Kingdom" will give a synopsis of missionary enterprise written by Philo P. Leavens; "The Old Lieutenant and His Son" will be the title of a new story by Dr. Norman Macdonald; and "How to Get Muscular," by Charles Wadsworth, will contain five addresses on higher athletics. "The Great Discourse," the clever topical arrangement of the words of Christ recorded in the New Testament, is proving a most successful book, and a new edition will soon be called for.

FLEMING H. REVELL CO. will issue early in April "Three Gates on a Side, and other sermons," by Charles H. Parkhurst, pastor of Madison Square Church, New York, one of the most notable preachers of the day. The second volume of Prof. Revere Franklin Weidner's "Biblical Theology of the New Testament" is in press; and also the second volume of "Sermons," by John McNeill, containing the sermons of this forcible Scotch preacher, as delivered to his great London audiences. "Syllabus of Old Testament Theology," by Ira M. Price, Professor of Hebrew in Morgan Park Theological Seminary, will be a valuable compendium for students, which will comprise an introductory outline of Biblical geography, some chronological facts, and a division of the history into periods, and will be interleaved with writing-paper for notes; and "The Jewish Problem, Its Solution," by David Baron, with introduction by Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, will give a clear picture of Israel's present and future. There will be new and revised editions of the works of Rev. A. J. Gordon, including "Ecce Venit," "The Two-Fold Life," "Grace and Glory," "Ministry of Healing," and "In Christ;" and of Rev. Dr. T. T. Eaton's "Talks to Children," with introduction by J. A. Broadus.

ROBERTS BROTHERS have just issued several important books, and still have in preparation several volumes of unusual literary interest. Balzac's novels, "Ursula" and "The Lily of the Valley," are almost ready in Catharine Prescott Wormeley's most satisfactory translation, and the publishers have already in press "Last Words," a final collection of stories by Juliana Horatia Ewing; "A Book o' Nine Tales with Interludes," by Arlo Bates; "A Question of Love," translated by Annie R. Ramsey from the French of T. Combe; "A Violin Obligato, and other stories," by Margaret Crosby; and a new volume of "Sermons," by Frederic Henry Hedge. Later in the season are promised "My Three Score Years and Ten," an autobiography by Thomas Ball; "The Professor's Letters," by Theophilus Parsons; and "The Peerless Cook-Book," by Mrs. D. A. Lincoln, compiler of "The Boston Cook-Book." A welcome piece of news is the announcement of a new volume in the Popular Edition of George Meredith's novels, entitled "One of Our Conquerors," and a most important publication will be the third and concluding volume of Rénan's great work, "History of the People of Israel." There will also be new editions of "Epics of Mediæval Germany," by George Theodore Dippold, and of the "Life and Letters of John Brown," edited by Frank B. Sanborn.

SABISTON & MURRAY, New York, have under way several books for veterinary surgeons, which will be found in the classified list, under Medical Science.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' list of announcements includes a large number of important books. Among these is "A Publisher and His Friends: memoir and correspondence of the late John Murray, with an account of the origin and progress of the house, 1768–1843," by Dr. Samuel Smiles. The subject of this work was the son of the founder of the great English publishing house, who numbered among his friends and correspondents many of the most celebrated literary men and women of the present century—Scott, Byron, Southey, William Blackwood, James Hogg, Mrs. Hemans, Disraeli, Lockhart, Hallam, Irving, Moore, Mary Shelley, Carlyle, etc. "Spain and Morocco: studies in local color," will be the title of a new book by that untiring traveller and acute observer, Henry T. Finck, author of "The Pacific Coast Scenic Tour," "Romantic Love and Personal Beauty," etc. Another original and interesting book is in preparation by John B. Grant. Careful reproductions of the photographs of no fewer than sixty-four of the more familiar birds of North America will give the volume a unique value. The descriptive text accompanying each illustration, giving the varieties of color, shape, habits, etc., of each bird, will enable the reader readily to identify his little feathered friends. A new volume of stories by that master of the art, Frank R. Stockton, is announced, with "The Water Devil" as the leading tale; and no more delightful collection of stories has appeared in a long time than will be published in H. C. Bunner's new book, "Zadoc Pine, and other stories," containing five stories besides that which gives the title to the book, all revealing a refined literary touch, deep and tender feeling, and a close study of some of the more rugged phases of human nature. Richard Harding Davis, whose magazine stories during the past year have given him wide popularity, has made a collection of them, with four or five others, under the title of "Gallegher, and other stories," which will contain all of his best work. "Original Charades" is the title of a dainty book by L. B. R. Briggs, of Cambridge, Mass., containing, in a charming dress that will take the eye of the bibliophile, a half a hundred and more of these baffling riddles in graceful verse. The tone of the verse is literary and artistic, and the book will appeal especially to persons of cultivated taste with a sense of humor. "A Manual of Wood-Carving," by Charles G. Leland ("Hans Breitman"), is a peculiarly timely book. Mr. Leland's mastery of the technique of the art is complete, and his instructions proceed step by step in the clearest manner, aided by an admirable series of illustrations, also by this gifted author. In addition to the last volume just issued in the Famous Women of the French Court, "Marie Louise and the Invasion of 1814," three other volumes from the French of Imbert de Saint-Amand are still in preparation, two dealing with the splendid but profligate court of Louis XVI., "Marie Antoinette at the Tuileries" and "Marie Antoinette and the Downfall of Royalty," and one, "Marie Louise, the Return from Elba and the Hundred Days," unfolding the final scenes in the Napoleonic drama. The Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington, rector of Grace Church, New York, delivered six lectures in Philadelphia, at the request of the trustees of the John Bohlen Lectureship. They will be published under the title of "The Peace of the Church." Jacob A. Riis' "How the Other Half Lives," a study of tenement-house life in New York, which has aroused the deepest interest both in the United States and in England, is to be brought out at half the original price, the publishers hoping thus to bring the startling facts embodied in the book to the attention of a much larger public. A new and cheaper edition is issued of Brander Matthews' "French Dramatists of the 19th Century." In this edition the author has incorporated a new chapter describing and commenting upon the work done and the plays presented during the past ten years, and thus bringing his review of the French drama down to the present time. A new and cheaper edition is also announced of General Francis A. Walker's "History of the Second Army Corps in the Army of the Potomac," with portraits and maps. In a new edition, the sixth, just issued, of Theodore Dwight Woolsey's "Introduction to the Study of International Law," the author's son, Theodore S. Woolsey, has brought the discussion of the subject down to the present time, in a form a little less scholastic than before. The last edition of this standard work appeared twelve years ago. Finally, in this partial list of the spring publications of this firm, it may be noted that in the Yellow Paper Cover Series Mr. Bunner's "Zadoc Pine, and other stories," Mr. Stockton's new volume of short stories, and his famous "Late Mrs. Null," Mr. Cable's "The Grandissimes," and Mr. Davis' "Gallegher, and other stories," with other books yet to be announced, will be included. Among the more important English importations of the house for the coming season will be "London—Past and Present," by Henry B. Wheatley, who, in three volumes, gives the history, associations and traditions of London, based on "Cunningham's Handbook," and describes the chief public buildings and other sights of the vast city; the 25th edition of Prof. Henry Drummond's "Tropical Africa," to be reduced in price; "Gypsy Sorcery and Fortune-Telling," by Charles G. Leland; "Zoölogical Articles," taken from the contributions to the "Encyclopædia Britannica," prepared by Prof. E. Ray Lankester, with kindred articles by Professors Sollas, Von Graff, Hubrecht, Bourne and Herdman; "Jenny Lind, the Artist, 1820 to 1850," a memoir of her art-life and dramatic career, in two volumes, prepared from original documents by Canon H. S. Holland and W. S. Rockstro, and giving many world-celebrated portraits; and two new volumes in the Schopenhauer Series, entitled "The Art of Literature" and "Social Essays."

F. J. SCHULTE & Co., 298 Dearborn Street, Chicago, have made a success with Ignatius Donnelly's socialistic novel, "Cæsar's Column," now in its seventh edition. Swedish and German translations of the book are under way, and it will also be issued in cheap paper binding in the Ariel Library Series. To this library will be added "Dr. Huguet," a semi-political novel, also by Ignatius Donnelly; "A Tramp in Society, or, the lords of creation," by Robert H. Cowdrey; "Washington Brown, Farmer," by Le Roy Armstrong; and a new, still unchristened novel by Opie P. Reed, author of "A Kentucky Colonel." Other volumes are already in preparation, among them "Thirty-five Years of Journalism," by Franc B. Wilkie; "Francis Bacon, and His Secret Society," by Mrs. Henry Pott; and "Poems of the Turf," by Richard Cary, with illustrations by Gean Smith.

W. J. SHUEY (United Brethren Publishing House) will have ready early in the season a new collection of songs for the Sunday-school, edited by Rev. E. S. Lorenz and Isaiah Baltzell, and entitled "The Master's Praise." The number of composers included insures variety of style, and the range of themes and subjects covers every topic of Sunday-school work, giving special attention to opening and closing exercises and to anthems and carols suitable for Christmas and Easter festivals, and also for "Children's Day" and other seasons of general and special interest. The book will be printed on extra calendered paper, and will be substantially bound.

E. & F. N. SPON have in preparation some valuable technical works, of which the full titles are given in the classified list in this issue, under the heading of Arts and Sciences.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY make several interesting announcements of old favorites in new styles of binding, and new books to be brought out in the dainty style synonymous with their imprint. Arthur Wentworth Eaton's "Acadian Lyrics and Legends" will be put into a new "orchid" binding, with back and half sides of white vellum cloth, entirely covered with tracery in gold, and with outer half sides in an illuminated design of pale purple orchids, with gold, heavily embossed; and "Bethlehem to Jerusalem," George Klingle's popular poem with Harry Fenn's illustrations, will be issued in covers of plastic cardboard in various tints, tied with silk and metal cord. Henrik Ibsen's "The Lady from the Sea," translated by Eleanor Marx-Aveling, with critical introduction by Edmund Gosse; "Iphigenia in Delphi," translated from the Greek by Richard Garnett; and "Wordsworth's Grave, and other poems," by William Wadsworth, will be added to The Cameo Series. "Famous Musical Composers," by Lydia T. Morris, will be an interesting series of biographies of eminent musicians; and "Legends and Popular Tales of the Basque People," by Mariana Monteiro, will be an important addition to the publishers' collection of folk-lore. In the Manuals of Games there will be three new volumes: "Round Games," including poker, loo, vingt-et-un, rouge-et-noir, speculation, etc., by "Berkeley;" "Solo Whist," by Robert F. Green; and "Two-Move Chess Problems," by B. G. Laws, a series of chess problems that must be solved in two moves, illustrated with numerous diagrams; and to the Manuals of Sports will be added "Gymnastics," by A. F. Jenkin, and "Tennis, Rackets and Fives," by Julian Marshall. Of hygienic value will be "Woman in Health and Sickness" and "Our Children," both by Dr. Robert Bell, whose books have had great success in London. "Bessie Bradford's Prize," by Joanna H. Mathews, will be the third volume in the series of sequels to the "Bessie Books."

STREET & SMITH will publish at once, in their Primrose Series, "A Social Mirror," a clever story of social life in Philadelphia, by Clement R. Marley; in their Sea and Shore Series, Alphonse Daudet's "Sappho;" and in their Secret Service Series, "Mabel Seymour," the story of a crime.

A. M. THAYER & Co., Boston, will be the publishers of the eagerly expected "Autobiography of General Butler," but cannot yet fix a date of publication, as General Butler is still working upon his book at least five hours a day. He is doing the entire work, with the assistance of his private secretary, Colonel Thomas E. Major. The book will contain no political arguments, but will give a graphic description of General Butler's eventful career, dwelling in detail upon the New Orleans administration, and giving prominence to the story of the Army of the James. The statement of General Butler's position on the finance question will be a valuable part of the contents. The volume will be profusely illustrated, and the frontispiece will be an engraving of the portrait of General Butler by Darius Cobb, which hangs in the Capitol at Concord, New Hampshire. Translations into French and German are under way, and the book will be published simultaneously in England, France and Germany. It will be sold by subscription.

E. B. TREAT, New York, will publish "The International Medical Annual, 1891," edited by Dr. P. W. Williams, uniform with his series of Medical Classics, to which he will add Dowse's "Massage and Electricity;" Saundby's "Diabetes" and "Bright's Disease;" and Beard and Rockwell's "Sexual Neurasthenia." This house will also bring out new editions of the books purchased at the Carter sale.

THE UNITED STATES BOOK COMPANY have just ready the first and second volumes of the "De Quincey Memorials," containing the letters and other records published for the first time, to be followed shortly by two more volumes, entitled "Posthumous Works of De Quincey," all four edited with introduction and notes by Alexander H. Japp, who has had this valuable material put into his hands by Mrs. Baird Smith and Miss De Quincey, and has made it a long labor of love to clear up obscure and doubtful points in the letters and other papers. Besides this work, which is a valuable contribution to English literature, the house announces a long list of novels, full titles of which, as far as given, will be found in the classified list elsewhere in this issue under the heading of Fiction.

WARD, LOCK & Co. will publish immediately "New Light upon Dark Africa," the story of the German Emin Pasha Expedition, by Dr. Carl Peters, translated by H. W. Dulcken, and profusely illustrated with original full-page and other engravings, by R. Hellgrewe and other artists, from sketches and photographs taken on the spot. The work will be a narrative of travel, peril and adventure in the steppes and forests of the Great Continent, of which the vast resources and possibilities for the future are now awakening the interest and engaging the earnest consideration of the rest of the world. Dr. Peters will throw a flood of light upon political situations, and will explain why Emin Pasha was compelled to quit the interior of Africa, offering official letters and documents to corroborate his statements. Early in April the publishers will add to their Minerva Library of Famous Books William Blackford's "History of the Caliph Vathek" and his "Letters from Italy, with Sketches of Spain and Portugal," both in one volume. The "Vathek," first published in French in 1784, has taken its place as one of the finest productions of richly luxuriant imagination, and the letters contain the impressions of a scholarly traveller possessed of unlimited means. Much of the matter in the earlier letters appeared only in the original edition, of which the only known copy is now in the British Museum, and the volume will contain an article by Dr. Garnett, explaining why the missing letters were suppressed, and an introduction by Dr. Bettany, giving a sketch of the author's romantic and eccentric life.

FREDERICK WARNE & CO. will publish immediately one of the most important books hitherto written, on the Continent of Africa. The title will be "Ten Years in Equatoria, and the Return with 'Emin Pasha,'" by Major Casati. The author, in 1889, resigned his commission in the Italian army, in order to proceed to the Soudan to assist Gessi Pasha, one of General Gordon's most earnest co-workers. His mission accomplished, Major Casati remained in the country, independently exploring Central Africa; and his long residence in those beautiful regions, his thorough knowledge of the languages and customs of the various tribes, his intimate relations with Dr. Junker, lend a special value to the scientific, geographical and political information given. At the end of each of the two volumes are elaborate appendices, containing valuable meteorological observations and also comparative tables of native languages. The Stanley-Emin controversy is especially dwelt upon, and much valuable information is given as to the adaptability of soil and climate for everything necessary for alimentation, without any dependence upon external produce. The translation has been made from the original Italian manuscript by the Hon. Mrs. Randolph Clay, assisted by Mr. I. Walter Savage Landor. The illustrations are specially prepared for the work by Mr. Edward Stanhope. The book will be issued at the same time in the various languages of Germany, France and Spain, and the publishers have secured their right to the English version, after the keenest competition.

JOHN WILEY & SONS make several important announcements, of which full titles will be found in the classified list in this issue, under the heading of Arts and Sciences.

THE WORTHINGTON CO. announce for immediate publication, "A Brave Woman," by E. Marlitt, translated by Margaret P. Waterman, and "Boris Lensky," by Ossip Schubin, translated by Elise L. Lathrop, a sequel to or rather continuation of "Asbein" by the same author.

THE YOUNG CHURCHMAN CO., Milwaukee, Wisconsin, announce a course of lectures by the Rt. Rev. John Franklin Spalding, Bishop of Colorado, to be entitled "Jesus Christ the Proof of Christianity," and said to be fully equal in merit to his former books, "The Church and the Apostolic Ministry," and "The Best Mode of Working a Parish." The new volume may be expected in April.

AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' COPYRIGHT LEAGUE.—ANNUAL MEETING.

THE Annual Meeting of the American Publishers' Copyright League was held on Wednesday, March 18, at the Aldine Club, New York.

In the absence of the President, Mr. W. H. Appleton, Mr. J. W. Harper, the Chairman of the Executive Committee, was called to the Chair, which he later, however, resigned to Mr. A. D. F. Randolph, who presided through the meeting.

The Secretary, Mr. G. H. Putnam, explained that the calling of the present meeting had been postponed from January, the month originally specified for it, until the present time, because during both January and February the members of the Executive Committee were actively occupied in campaign work in Washington and elsewhere, in behalf of the Copyright bill; and because, further, it was hoped it would be practicable, as has proved to be the case, to report formally to the League the fact already familiar to its members, of the final success of this work. Under the instructions of the Chair, the Secretary presented, on behalf of the Executive Committee, a brief report of the operations of that committee during the present year, reviewing in full the work done to bring about the presentation and passage of the Copyright bill in the House and Senate, the details of which were given from time to time in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. Especial mention was made of the valuable assistance rendered by Mr. R. U. Johnson, of New York, Mr. Dana Estes, as Secretary of the Boston Copyright League, and General A. C. McClurg and Hon. George E. Adams, of the Chicago Copyright League.

The Secretary concluded his report for the year by congratulating the League that the campaign in behalf of national honesty, to assure equity to authors without regard to their nationality, and to place literary property on a secure foundation, had now, after more than a half century of effort, finally proved successful.

He pointed out that the legislation now secured would hardly be accepted as a finality, but that is certainly met as fairly as was practicable all present requirements, and would doubtless be cordially accepted and supported by all concerned. The bill was most assuredly the best bill that under the circumstances it had been possible to secure, and under this bill the United States had at last, in its relations to literary property, been brought within the pale of civilization.

The Treasurer's report was submitted by Mr. Scribner, showing:

Balance brought forward during the present year.....	$110 41
Receipts from dues for 1890.....	965 00
Receipts from special subscriptions including contributions through the Boston League and contributions from certain individuals who were not connected with any of the Leagues and whose names were specified in detail...	5,425 00
		$6,500 41
He reported disbursements for printing, postage, telegrams, distribution of documents, travelling expenses in Washington of the representatives of the Leagues, etc.....		$6,373 31
and brought forward a balance in hand of.....		$127 00

He explained further that these expenditures included payments for necessary expenses only, no payments having been made for personal services excepting one amount, $250 for usual who had been employed in Washington for a brief period.

The Treasurer's report was accepted and ordered on file.

Under motion of Mr. Harper, seconded by Mr. Appleton, the following vote of thanks was passed to the Secretary for his services during the three years' work of the Publishers' League:

Resolved, That the thanks of the American Publishers' Copyright League be and hereby are given to its Secretary, Mr. George Haven Putnam; that we cordially and gratefully appreciate his ability, fidelity, discretion and indomitable courage in the discharge of the arduous duties of his office, and that we heartily congratulate him upon the assured extension of United States Copyright to aliens, the movement for which, among American publishers, was begun nearly fifty years ago by his honored father, George P. Putnam.

Under motion of Mr. Merrill, seconded by Mr. Holt, a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Scribner and Mr. Appleton for their valuable "missionary" work in Washington.

Under motion of Mr. Holt, seconded by Mr. Dodd, a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. R. U. Johnson for his exceptionally capable and effective services as Secretary of the Conference Committee, and as representative as well of the publishers as of the authors, in the work done in Washington and elsewhere during the past year.

Under motion of Mr. Harper, seconded by Mr. Merrill, it was resolved that the organization of the American Publishers' Copyright League be continued, for the purpose of co-operating with American authors in maintaining copyright and of giving consideration to such future copyright questions and to such impending legislation as might be likely to affect the interests of American literature and American publishing.

On motion, it was resolved that the officers of the League should continue to be a President, a Vice-President, a Secretary and a Treasurer, and that membership should be limited to American publishers who favored International Copyright.

On motion, it was resolved that the admission fee of members should hereafter be $10, instead of $25, and that the annual dues should hereafter be $10, instead of $25.

On motion of Mr. Holt, it was resolved that the annual dues of Associate Members should be reduced from $10 to $5.

The Secretary explained that the original article providing for associate membership had been planned for the purpose of bringing into the League booksellers, printers and others who were interested more or less directly in the making and selling of books.

He further explained that the term "publishers" as used in the article on membership had been interpreted as standing for publishing firms, and that while it would of course always be desirable at any meetings of the League to secure the attendance, counsel and co-operation of as large a number as possible of the members of the trade (including, when practicable, several members of one firm) in all decisions affecting the policy or action of the League, each firm would be entitled to but one vote.

On motion, it was resolved that the regular annual meeting of the League should be held on the third Wednesday of March.

Members should be notified of the meeting by the Secretary. Nine members should constitute a quorum.

On motion, it was decided that special meetings might be called by the President or by the Secretary, and that such special meetings should be called by the President or Secretary at the request in writing of not less than seven members.

The following officers were re-elected for the ensuing year: President, Mr. W. H. Appleton; Vice-President, Gen. A. C. McClurg; Secretary, Mr. G. H. Putnam; Treasurer, Mr. Charles Scribner.

The Secretary explained that the Executive Committee, which had carried on on behalf of the League its active work during the preceding three years, had been a campaign committee appointed, under the instructions of the League, by the President.

Under motion of Mr. Holt, seconded by Mr. Scribner, it was resolved that the power should remain with the President to reappoint an Executive Committee whenever in his judgment the special work of the League should call for the services of such committee.

The Secretary read to the League the letter recently received from Senator Platt expressing the Senator's confidence that the prophecies made by himself and other Congressional supporters of the bill concerning its benefit for the reading public would be fully confirmed. It was, namely, the Senator's belief that the publishers would find it to their interest to make clear to the public that under an international copyright American editions of foreign books would not be increased in price, and that, taking its purchases of literature as a whole, the American buyers of books would secure as good value for their dollar, or better value for their dollar, than had been possible in the absence of international copyright.

The Senator pointed out that there was still a widespread public apprehension that in some way international copyright would be made use of by certain publishers for securing excessive prices from the American public.

The opinion was very general, as expressed in the informal discussion that resulted, that the Senator's confidence would be justified and that cheap editions of American books and cheap reprints of foreign books would continue to be the rule, not because publishers were philanthropists, but because experience had shown that the American public required cheap books and would not pay for dear books, and that only through cheap, popular editions could American publishers secure wide sales and remunerative returns.

The meeting then adjourned.

THE LONDON BOOKSELLERS' SOCIETY.

We are glad to learn that the efforts of this Society to deal with matters affecting the London trade have been largely successful, thanks, no doubt, to the moderate counsels which have governed its actions, and that it has resolved to invite provincial confrères to become members. A circular and report is shortly to be issued with the view of ascertaining whether the country trade is disposed to co-operate in the formation of a National Society of Booksellers. The Council fully recognize that the positions of the city, the suburban and the provincial bookseller are not identical, and the rules of the Society have been framed with an elasticity designed to meet the requirements of varying circumstances. Retrogression is acknowledged to be impossible. If a new start can be made, says the London Bookseller, from which we derive our information, "it must begin from the plane that has been reached by the present generation, and not pretend to spring from the level occupied by a former one. The ladder of time admits of no descent; we must mount or perish. The London Society has recognized this truth and has gathered strength and influence thereby. It has mostly sought to accomplish small ends, and it has mostly succeeded. Some day it may accomplish larger ones, but if it is well advised it will always be assured that it can walk before it attempts to run."

OBITUARY NOTES.

THÉODORE DE BANVILLE died in Paris on the 13th inst., aged sixty-eight years. He was probably the most artistic poet of France after Hugo.

WILLIAM H. MACY, the blind poet of Nantucket, died on the 13th inst. He was a native of Nantucket and spent his early life at sea, relinquishing it to join the Union army in 1862. In 1875 he became blind. Just previous to losing his sight Mr. Macy spun off "There She Blows," "Up North in the Gorgan," and many other serials and short stories that delighted the readers of periodicals of that day. While growing blind he invented a machine which enabled him to write, and for years his poems were read and copied everywhere. He was the author of the much-admired inscription on the soldiers' monument: "Eternal honor to the sons of Nantucket who by land and by sea gave their lives that their country might live."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THOMAS HARDY is collecting in a volume some short stories written for the London Graphic and other periodicals. The title of the volume will be "A Group of Noble Dames."

GUSTAV FREYTAG, the well-known German author, who is now about seventy-five years of age, was married at Vienna, on the 10th inst., to Mme. Strakosch, an Austro-German and an elocutionist. It is not known that she is related to the Strakosch family, well known in operatic matters.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—Recently the bookstore of Damrell & Upham was entered by burglars, and a small amount of money was stolen. Investigation led to the arrest of C. H. Campbell, H. B. Crawford and W. B. Dunn, the former two old employees of the firm.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Koelling & Klappenbach have bought the entire stock of periodicals and subscription-books of F. P. Kenkel & Co. Mr. Julius Valentin, of the old Kenkel firm, has been engaged by their successors.

NEW YORK CITY.—George Gross has opened a book and stationery store at 1693 Broadway, above 53d Street.

NORTHWOOD, IA.—George M. Emery succeeds Emery & Emery, booksellers and stationers.

ROANOKE, VA.—J. Payne Thompson, who was with Hunter & Co., of Richmond, eight or ten years, is about to open a book and stationery store at this place, with W. S. Gooch as partner, under the firm-name of Thompson & Co. Mr. Thompson is highly spoken of by his former employees as deserving of encouragement and success.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

ANDREW GEYER has in preparation a list of representative buyers of the stationery and fancy goods business.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS will publish at once the new edition of "Men of the Time," which will now be called "Men and Women of the Time." It has been long in preparation, but its appearance was unexpectedly delayed.

MR. GEORGE GANIARD, who has been the manager of Brentano's Washington establishment for the last two years, sailed for London on the 7th inst. to take charge of the firm's London branch. It is Brentano's purpose to pay especial attention to the extension of this branch of their business, which has already been largely successful in placing the works of contemporary American authors on the English market.

HEINEMANN & BALESTIER, Berlin, have formed an opposition to Tauchnitz to publish on the Continent English and American books. Brockhaus, of Leipsic, will be agent for the company. The company is said to have already secured rights to publish works of Sir Edwin Arnold, Rudyard Kipling, Hall Caine, Robert Louis Stevenson, George Meredith, the Rev. Sabine Baring-Gould, W. E. Norris, W. D. Howells, Rider Haggard, Ouida and Rhoda Broughton.

F. A. DAVIS, Philadelphia, has decided that on and after March 30, 1891, the price of the volume on "Materia Medica and Therapeutics, with special reference to the clinical application of drugs," by John V. Shoemaker, A.M., M.D., shall be $3.50 net in cloth, and $4.50 net in sheep. The intrinsic value of this volume, and its much larger proportions since the first issue (the number of pages having almost doubled), are considered sufficient reasons for this advance on its price. Orders already in the publisher's hands will, of course, be filled at the old price.

THE Paulist Fathers, of New York, are to be their own printers and publishers. The foundation has been laid of a printing house in Sixtieth Street, between the new Paulist Church and the old one. The building will have a frontage of 60 feet and a depth of 30, and will be three stories high. The material will be brick and stone, and the structure is to be completed in two months. The Catholic World, Monthly Calendar, the sermons of Father Hecker, Father De Shon and other Paulists, and, in addition, the many tracts which the Fathers are continually distributing are to be printed or reprinted in the new building.

JUDGE LACOMBE, of the U. S. Circuit Court of New York, last week granted a preliminary injunction against the Rogers Typograph Co. in the suit brought against them by the Mergenthaler Company. This now leaves the Mergenthaler as the sole representative of the type-bar machines in the market. The other type-setting machines, those setting type only, being the Thorne, the MacMillen, the Munson, the Corsa, the Typotheter, the A. A. Low, and perhaps a half a dozen others not yet perfected. The decision against the Rogers Typograph will probably delay the arrangements made by the combination of New York printers referred to in the WEEKLY last December.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers as a guarantee of good faith.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis, will find it to their advantage to put after their firm name the word [Cash].

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS'

New and Forthcoming Publications.

Marie Louise and the Invasion of 1814.

A New Volume on the "Famous Women of the French Court." Translated from the French of IMBERT DE SAINT-AMAND, by T. S. PERRY. 12mo, with portrait, $1.25.

This volume takes the reader from the beginning of 1814 to Napoleon's departure for Elba. The narrative of this campaign is most intensely interesting, the variations of fortune being so rapid and so momentous.

IN PRESS.

MARIE LOUISE, THE RETURN FROM ELBA AND THE HUNDRED DAYS.

MARIE ANTOINETTE AT THE TUILERIES. | MARIE ANTOINETTE AND THE DOWNFALL OF ROYALTY.

ALREADY ISSUED.

MARIE ANTOINETTE AND THE END OF THE OLD REGIME—CITIZENESS BONAPARTE—THE WIFE OF THE FIRST COSNUL—THE COURT OF THE EMPRESS JOSEPHINE—THE HAPPY DAYS OF MARIE LOUISE—MARIE LOUISE AND THE DECADENCE.

Each volume, 12mo, with portrait, $1.25.

"The author contrives to combine and arrange his material so as to make a great many very vivid and pleasing pictures. Nor is this all. The material he lays before us is of real value, and much, if not most of it, must be unknown save to the special students of the period. We can, therefore, cordially commend these books to the attention of our readers. They will find them attractive in their arrangement, never dull, with much variety of scene and incident, and admirably translated."—The Nation.

Essays in Little.

By ANDREW LANG. With portrait, 12mo, $1.00.

CONTENTS: Alexander Dumas—Mr. Stevenson's Works—Thomas Haynes Bayly—Theodore de Banville—Homer and the Study of Greek—The Last Fashionable Novel—Thackeray—Dickens—Adventures of Buccaneers—The Sagas—Kingsley—Lever—Poems of Sir Walter Scott—Bunyan—Letter to a Young Journalist—Kipling's Stories.

"One of the most entertaining and bracing of books. Full of bright and engaging discourse on man, woman and letters, these charming and recreative essays are the best of good reading. They ought to please every class of reader."—The Saturday Review.

Spain and Morocco:

Studies in Local Color. By HENRY T. FINCK. 12mo, $1.25.

Mr. Finck's new book is a piquant and crisp record of impressions left upon the mind of a peculiarly observant traveller among Spanish and Moorish people and things. The author's itinerary included not only the cities of Spain usually visited in an extended tour of that country, but trips to Tangier and Tetuan, his account of which is full of adventurous interest as well as of picturesque "Local Color."

A Publisher and His Friends.

Memoir and Correspondence of the late John Murray, with an Account of the Origin and Progress of the House, 1768–1843. By SAMUEL SMILES. 2 vols., 8vo. (In press.)

Mr. Murray, the son of the founder of the great English publishing house, numbered among his friends many of the most celebrated literary men and women of this century—Scott, Byron, Southey, Hallam, Disraeli, Irving, Carlyle and others, and their letters add materially to the interest of this exceptionally valuable and entertaining biography.

A NEW EDITION AT HALF THE FORMER PRICE.

How the Other Half Lives.

Studies Among the Tenements of New York. By JACOB A. RIIS. Illustrated from photographs taken by the author. New edition, 12mo, net, $1.25.

No book of the year has aroused a deeper interest or wider discussion than Mr. Riis' earnest study of the poor and outcast. So much attention has been recently directed to the problems it discusses, that the publishers issue this new and cheaper edition in order to bring the startling facts it embodies to the notice of a much wider public.

DR. A. SCHAUFFLER: "No book that has ever appeared in this land pours such light as Mr. Riis' book on 'the other half.' It is enormously more interesting than any novel that ever was written or that ever will be. Let all who are interested in the welfare of humanity buy and read it at once."

History of the 2d Army Corps.

In the Army of the Potomac. By General FRANCIS A. WALKER. With portraits and maps. Cheaper edition. 8vo, $2.00.

"We have no hesitation in saying that his history is one of the best that the war has produced. The work is more than the history of a single corps, for it practically describes at length most of the operations of the Army of the Potomac."—New York Sun.

Manual of Wood-Carving.

By CHARLES G. LELAND. Revised by J. T. Holtzapffel. With many illustrations. $1.75.

"It teaches the pupil how to use his tools and material by requiring a thorough acquaintance with both. Such patient, explicit, step-by-step teaching as Mr. Leland's is indeed the only road to excellence."—Saturday Review.

Talks with Athenian Youths.

Five Selected Dialogues translated from Plato. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"A delightful little volume. Irreproachable scholarship, subtle discrimination and a generous ardor for what is best in ancient learning are qualities displayed. Such a volume will do much to advance the cause of genuine culture."—Boston Beacon.

Previous Volumes: Socrates—Talks with Socrates about Life—A Day in Athens with Socrates. Each, 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

A Practical Guide to Whist.

By the Latest Scientific Methods. By FISHER AMES. 16mo, 75 cents.

"The arrangement of this little manual, which presents things in a beautifully logical and compact form, is the best we know."—Boston Courier.

Original Charades.

By L. B. R. BRIGGS. 12mo, $1.00.

Fifty or more ingenious charades, as clever and original in idea as they are graceful in expression, are set forth in this dainty volume in verse.

French Dramatists of the 19th Century.

By BRANDER MATTHEWS. New edition. 12mo, $1.50.

This new edition has an additional chapter, bringing Mr. Matthews' review of the French drama down to the present time. "There is no book from which the English reader can obtain so trustworthy a view of the contemporary French drama, and none surely in which a theme so complex is so pleasantly unfolded."—Boston Traveller."

Zadoc Pine,

And Other Stories. By H. C. BUNNER. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

The volume consists of six stories which rank with the best that Mr. Bunner has written. They reveal a refined literary touch, a close study of human nature, a fine dramatic sense, a delicate humor, and deep and tender feeling.

Gallegher,

And Other Stories. By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

The ten stories comprising this volume attest the appearance of a new and strong writer. They are of wide range and amply account for the great popularity which Mr. Davis has already won.

TWO FORTHCOMING PUBLICATIONS.

The Peace of the Church. By Rev. W. R. HUNTINGTON, D.D. 12mo. (In press.)

A New Collection of Stories. By FRANK R. STOCKTON. (In press.)

 In addition to Mr. Bunner's "Zadoc Pine," and Mr. Davis' "Gallegher," above mentioned, Mr. Cable's "Grandissimes" and a number of other well-known books by favorite authors will be issued SCRIBNER'S POPULAR YELLOW PAPER SERIES.

NEW IMPORTATIONS.

London—Past and Present.

ITS HISTORY, ASSOCIATIONS AND TRADITIONS. By HENRY B. WHEATLEY, F.S.A. Based on Cunningham's Handbook. Laid paper, 3 vols., medium 8vo, $20.00.

No such exhaustive and painstaking account of the public buildings and institutions of London—churches, clubs, hospitals, museums, inns, theatres, and other places of amusement, monuments, prisons, market-places, streets, squares, bridges, and what-not—has ever been compiled, and none is likely ever to supplant this great work.

Tropical Africa.

By Professor HENRY DRUMMOND. With maps and illustrations. New and cheaper edition, with introduction replying to Mr. Stanley. 12mo, $1.00.

"Nothing that we have read is so full of really valuable information concerning Central Africa."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Gypsy Sorcery and Fortune-Telling.

Illustrated by numerous Incantations, Specimens of Medical Magic, Anecdotes and Tales, by CHARLES GODFREY LELAND ("Hans Breitman"), President of the Gypsy-Lore Society, etc. With numerous illustrations and initial letters drawn by the author. Small 4to, $4.00.

This volume is one of the most important contributions of late years to the study of Folk-Lore, and is drawn from the most interesting and curious sources, setting forth the magical practices of the Romany in different countries, and their strange beliefs. It deals with the many problems of Occultism and the Origin of Supernatural Belief.

Messianic Prophecies

IN HISTORICAL SUCCESSION. By FRANZ DELITZSCH. Translated by Samuel Ives Curtiss. 12mo, $1.75.

In this, the crowning work of his life of exegetical study, Dr Delitzsch has presented the results of his long scientific investigations into as brief, attractive, and suggestive a form as possible.

Robert Bonner's Sons' New Novels.

THE NORTHERN LIGHT.

Translated from the German of E. WERNER by Mrs. D. M. LOWREY. 12mo, 373 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, $1; paper cover, 50 cents.

Since the death of the author of "Old Ma'mselle's Secret" Werner is the most popular of living German writers. Her novels are written with great literary ability, and possess the charm of varied character, incident and scenery. "The Northern Light" is one of her most characteristic stories. The heroine is a woman of great beauty and strength of individuality. No less interesting is the young poet who, from beginning to end, constantly piques the curiosity of the reader.

THE FORSAKEN INN.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN. Illustrated by Victor Perard. Bound in cloth, $1.50; paper cover, 50 cents.

A MATTER OF MILLIONS.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN. Magnificently illustrated by Victor Perard. 12mo, 482 pages, handsomely bound in English cloth, gold stamping on cover, $1.50.

MRS. HAROLD STAGG.

A Novel. By ROBERT GRANT, author of "Jack Hall," etc. Beautifully illustrated by Harry C. Edwards. Paper cover, 50 cents; bound in cloth, $1.

THE UNLOVED WIFE.

By Mrs. SOUTHWORTH. With eight choice illustrations. Elegantly bound in cloth, $1; paper cover, 50 cents.

We have in this novel of American life a pure and lovely creation of girlhood and wifehood that will bear comparison with any character in the native fiction of our day. The story of the life of this Washington politician's girl-wife is one of the most interesting and pathetic histories ever recorded under the guise of a novel.

LILITH:

A Sequel to "The Unloved Wife." By Mrs. E. D. E. N. SOUTHWORTH. With illustrations by O. W. Simons. Paper cover, 50 cents; bound in cloth, $1.

In "Lilith" Mrs. Southworth has taken up the fortunes of her heroine from the date of her disappearance in "The Unloved Wife," and created a new and lovely history for her. Each of the novels is perfectly complete in itself, and neither is necessary to the perfection of the other, but they may be read together, and thus they form a more extended and more beautiful development of life and character than either constitutes alone.

"The Fall of the Christians" in Book Form under the Title of PAOLI,

The Last of the Missionaries. A Picture of the Overthrow of the Christians in Japan in the Seventeenth Century. By W. C. KITCHIN. Superbly illustrated with large and small engravings from designs by G. A. Traver and Henry Bouche. 12mo, 500 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, $1.

By Mrs. AMELIA E. BARR, author of "Jan Vedder's Wife," etc. Beautifully illustrated by Victor Perard. 12mo, 395 pages, bound in English cloth, $1.25.

THE BREACH OF CUSTOM.

Translated from the German by Mrs. D. M. LOWREY. With choice illustrations by O. W. Simons. Paper cover, 50 cents; bound volume, $1.

This is a translation of an interesting and beautiful German novel, introducing an artist and his family, and dealing with the most pathetic circumstances and situations.

UNDER OATH.

An Adirondack Story. By JEAN KATE LUDLUM. Handsomely bound in cloth, $1; paper cover, 50 cents.

THE ALCHEMIST.

Translated from the French of HONORÉ DE BALZAC. With illustrations by F. A. Carter. Elegantly bound in cloth, $1; paper cover, 50 cents.

COUSIN PONS.

Translated from the French of HONORÉ DE BALZAC. With twelve beautiful and characteristic illustrations by Whitney. 12mo, 439 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, $1; paper cover, 50 cents.

CESAR BIROTTEAU.

From the French of HONORÉ DE BALZAC. With fourteen choice illustrations by Harry C. Edwards. Paper cover, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

REUNITED.

A Story of the Civil War. By a Popular Southern Author. Illustrated by F. A. Carter. Handsomely decorated paper cover, 50 cents; bound in cloth, $1.

This is a splendid novel of the late war. It deals with the armies and their operations on both sides, and shows the feelings of brothers who crossed swords in the conflict.

A National Book.

THE NEW SOUTH.

By HENRY W. GRADY. With a character sketch of Henry W. Grady by Oliver Dyer, author of "Great Senators." With portrait. 16mo, bound in cloth, uniform with "Great Senators," $1.

GREAT SENATORS.

By OLIVER DYER. 12mo, bound in cloth, $1.

Mr. Dyer's reminiscences and character delineations of Calhoun, Benton, Clay and Webster, and Sam Houston, Jefferson Davis and other United States Senators, have been a great success. His book is written in a brilliant and charming style, and deals with persons and a period of great interest to all Americans.

FORDS, HOWARD & HULBERT, 30 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

D. Lothrop Company's New Books.

The New Senior at Andover. By HERBERT D. WARD. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.00.

The "New Senior at Andover" is a realistic story of life at that famous old Phillips Academy at Andover ("the American Rugby"), in which persons and places are drawn with a master-hand, and the trials and experiences of boarding-school life are made the centre of continued and dramatic action, spiced with humor and touched with pathos.

Anne Bradstreet and Her Time. By HELEN CAMPBELL. 12mo, $1.50.

A charming biographical sketch and study of the earliest of America's female writers, "the grandmother of American literature." Anne Bradstreet's descendants number some of America's most distinguished men of letters—the Danas, the Channings, the Buckminsters, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Wendell Phillips and others of lesser note.

The Story of Kentucky. By EMMA M. CONNELLY. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.50.

The latest volume in the "Story of the States" series is full of vivid interest. Kentucky is one of the most picturesque and dramatic States of the Union, and the talented author of "Tilting at Windmills" has done justice to its peculiar and romantic history in her brilliant and vigorous story.

The Story of Wisconsin. By REUBEN G. THWAITES. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.50.

The development of this rich Northwestern Commonwealth, the growth of its industries, its exciting political complications, its noble record in the war, and its late rapid advance, are all sketched with vigor by Mr. Thwaites, whose position as Secretary of the State Historical Society has given him ample facilities.

Helps in Teaching Reading. By MARTHA S. HUSSEY, Teacher of Reading in the Girls' Latin School, Boston, and author of "Helps by the Way." 12mo, 75 cents.

An almost invaluable book, not only for teachers, but for all interested in producing that rare excellence, good, clear, intelligent reading by young people. It has the highest testimonials from head-masters, teachers and supervisors.

Gid Granger. By W. O. STODDARD. 12mo, $1.25.

This popular boys' writer never fails to magnetize any subject he undertakes. His present story consists of vivid pictures of life on a farm, the sturdy, hard-working boy, the ambitious sister, the faithful father and mother, and the different village folks, all strongly individualized, and will be found delightful reading for young and old.

The Fidalgos of Casa Mourisca. Translated from the Portuguese by Roxana L. Dabney. 12mo, $1.50

Our knowledge of Portuguese life through the writings of native authors has been somewhat limited. This story, by one of the most popular of Portuguese writers, shows us the home life, customs and characteristics of the people in an attractive light, while there is much of charm in the romantic incidents and the fine nobility of character gradually developed.

Rob: A Story for Boys. By MARGARET SIDNEY. 12mo, $1.00.

This is one of those delightful studies of boy-nature in which Margaret Sidney is so thoroughly at home. Not only the young hero but all the different characters are portrayed with that brightness and sympathetic touch so peculiar to her, that make them seem like actual people. The story is generally healthful and interesting, and will be read not only with pleasure but with profit.

Go Right On, Girls. By ANNIE H. RYDER. 12mo, $1.00.

Miss Ryder's love for girls, her intuitive understanding of their needs and tastes, enable her to reach the average girl, and influence her for good as few writers for young people can do. Her "Hold Up Your Heads, Girls," had a large and popular audience. This new book should appeal to an even larger class, who cannot fail to be interested and impressed in an unusual degree.

Christ Himself. By Rev. ALEXANDER MCKENZIE, D.D. 12mo, $1.00.

The beautiful sermons in this volume have an especial fitness for Easter, though they are suitable reading for all seasons. They are marked by the deep thought and fervid imagery that characterize Dr. McKenzie's writings, and will be most acceptable to his large circle of readers.

The Gospels are True Histories. By Rev. JOHN HENRY BARROWS. With introduction by Rev. F. E. Clark, D.D. 12mo, 75 cents.

"No candid reader can lay it aside without being convinced that the fundamental facts on which Christianity rests its claims have not been shaken by all the skeptical artillery of the ages."—Rev. F. E. Clark.

Ways and Means. By Rev. F. E. CLARK, D.D. 12mo, $1.25.

A history of the Christian Endeavor movement from its beginning to the present time: with valuable suggestions as to forming new societies, and the successful management of the same.

"The fullest presentation of Christian Endeavor history, purpose, spirit, methods, etc., in existence."—Religious Telescope.

A Modern Exodus. By FAYE HUNTINGTON. 12mo, $1.50.

"A powerful exemplification of the good that can be wrought in an irreligious community by a few strong, earnest natures. It contains the noblest lessons which incite to a manly, Christian life."—Golden Rule.

Aunt Hannah, and Martha, and John. By PANSY and Mrs. C. M. LIVINGSTON. 12mo, $1.50.

The trials, joys and perplexities of a minister's life are told with rare appreciation and sympathetic touch.

"No writer of our day, probably, is affecting for good more minds than Mrs. Alden."—Herald and Presbyter.

Sunday Album for Boys and Girls. Arranged by Rev. J. R. SIMMONS. $1.25.

The compiler says in a prefatory note: "Many conscientious parents are troubled to find suitable and yet congenial occupation for their boys and girls on Sunday afternoons. This book has been prepared with the earnest desire that it might provide the children with the means of spending a profitable and pleasant Sabbath hour." The plan of the book embraces an interesting search in the Bible for certain words pictorially represented.

Miss Dee Dunmore Bryant. By PANSY. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.50.

"The purity and beauty of well-instructed childhood, united with the highest teachings of Christian benevolence, form a charming series of pictures."—Rev. S. F. SMITH, D.D.

Brotherhood. By MARY CRUGER. 12mo, $1.25.

A strong, intense, thoughtful story, in which the difficult problems of man's relation to man in various phases of social and business life are forcibly presented. It is a book full of earnest convictions, of sound reasoning, which in no way detract from its interest as a bright, realistic story of dramatic character and incident.

WILL PUBLISH IMMEDIATELY:

MAJOR CASATI'S IMPORTANT WORK ON CENTRAL AFRICA.

In 2 vols., medium 8vo, cloth, price, $10.00.

Ten Years in Equatoria,

AND THE RETURN WITH EMIN PASHA.

By Major GAETANO CASATI.

Translated from the original MSS. by the Hon. Mrs. RANDOLPH CLAY.

The volumes will contain upwards of 180 Illustrations, mostly from Original Sketches and Photographs; of these eighty are Full-page Plates, artistically printed in color and tint, the execution of which has been entrusted to eminent artists.

Four important Maps have been specially prepared for the work by Mr. EDWARD STANFORD, from the Author's Original Drawings.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS OF THE WORK.

The very general desire, which recent issues have stimulated, for an authoritative account, from an absolutely independent source, of the interesting events which have happened during the last ten years in Equatorial Africa, leads to the publication by Major Casati of the above work.

No man could be more favorably situated than the author to give this; for he was exploring the country at a date prior to General Gordon's appointment as Governor-General of the Soudan, successively residing in various parts of this region, frequently with Emin, and finally returning with the Relief Expedition. Major Casati is thus enabled to increase our knowledge as to the causes which led to the loss of the Soudan, the rising of the native populations, and the dissensions and mysteries attending the abandonment of Equatoria, thereby lifting the veil from many much discussed questions, and throwing vivid sidelights on to the story of the Vanguard of Stanley's Expedition.

The author fully describes the various systems of government existent in Central Africa among the natives, and gives extremely interesting and minute descriptions of the habits, customs, traditions legends and folk-tales of the various tribes dwelling there, including the pigmy races.

The author's graphic description of his adventures and hairbreadth escapes while he was resident in Unyoro, at the savage Kabba Rega's capital, are extremely interesting.

Major Casati deals fully with the scientific geography of the Country, and adds considerably to to our information about the wonderful hydrographic system of Inner Africa, for there is scarcely any European, not excepting Dr. Junker, who could say that he knew the region within which the Nile and Congo intertwine as well as Casati.

He gives the result of his thorough investigations of the region at the source of the White Nile, as well as the countries of its twin river the Bahr-el-Ghazal, and a detailed description of the regions in which the Welle and other large rivers have their origin.

Just now that more than one European nation is occupying itself with the probable commercial value of the regions in which Casati so long lived, the valuable information which he gives as to the adaptability of the soil and climate for the cultivation of cotton, sugar-cane, maize, coffee, vegetables, fruit, and, in fact, everything necessary for alimentation, and his notes on the value of the various and beautiful woods, will be read with special interest. Added to this is a list of the products suitable for exportation.

At the end of each volume are some very elaborate Appendices, containing many valuable meteorological observations and comparative Tables of Native Languages, Indexes, etc.

A NEW PHILOSOPHY.

APPLETONS' SCHOOL PHYSICS. An Entirely New Book. By a Corps of Distinguished Scientists and Teachers. Just Ready. The contributors to the different sections into which the subject is divided are Prof. Silas W. Holman, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Prof. Francis E. Nipher, Washington University, St. Louis, Mo.; Prof. Alfred M. Mayer, Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, N. J., and Prof. Francis B. Crocker, Columbia College School of Mines. The work is ably edited by Prof. John D. Quackenbos, Columbia College.

The names of these scientists and educators are a guarantee of the quality and reliability of the work. It is singularly simple, practical, and at the same time authoritative and should be carefully examined by all who are looking for an accurate, comprehensive, judiciously condensed, entertaining text-book in Natural Philosophy.

Correspondence cordially invited.

6 NEW BOOKS OF UNUSUAL MERIT

Recently Published by

S. C. GRIGGS & CO.

Civilization: An Historical Review of Its Elements.

By Charles Morris, author of the "Aryan Race: Its Origin and Achievements." 2 vols., 12mo, over 1000 pages, $4.00.

"A whole historical library bearing upon the elements of civilization is condensed into this work, and with such wonderful skill as to enable those who lack time or opportunity to peruse separate works on the several topics here treated to gain a general conception of what man has thought and done in his long march down the ages. A more valuable and interesting work than this has not been given to the world in the past year."—Boston Home Journal.

Hindu Literature; or, The Ancient Books of India.

By Elizabeth A. Reed, Member of the Philosophical Society of Great Britain. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, $2.00.

"An unpretentious but valuable work. The author, who is a member of the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, gives a great deal of information not obtainable from any other volume. A good introduction to Hindu literature."—New York Herald.

A Digest of English and American Literature.

By Prof. Alfred H. Welsh, A.M. Large 12mo, 384 pages, $1.50.

"We do not know of any other volume from which an intelligent reader can so quickly get a combined and comprehensive view of English literature and history from the time of the Roman invasion down to the present half-century."—New York Herald.

The World Energy and Its Self-Conservation.

By William M. Bryant, author of "Philosophy of Art," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"It will be generally conceded that this work is one of the most able contributions to mental philosophy. No deep thinker can read it without great profit, and it ought to have a wide circulation in intelligent quarters."—The Independent, New York.

Semitic Philosophy:

Showing the ultimate social and scientific outcome of original Christianity in its conflict with surviving ancient heathenism. By Philip C. Friese. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"The author has gone into his task with commendable minuteness, and has presented a work full of sound information. It has an important bearing upon several of our current problems, and from this point of view it unquestionably possesses a wide interest. It is written in a clear and vigorous style."—The Publishers' Circular, London, England.

Vitus Bering, the Discoverer of Bering Strait.

By Peter Lauridsen, of the Royal Danish Geographical Society. Translated by Prof. J. E. Olson, of the University of Wisconsin, with an introduction by Lieut. Frederick Schwatka. 12mo, 240 pages, with four maps, $1.25.

"A trustworthy account of a celebrated explorer of whom the world has had but scant knowledge. The volume is one of marked interest, and especially so as attention is now so largely directed to the portion of the country with which his name is connected."—The Central Christian Advocate.

A LITERARY MANUAL OF FOREIGN QUOTATIONS. By JOHN DEVOE BELTON 8vo, half leather, gilt top, $1.50.

The distinctive feature of this compilation is the presentation of the English equivalents of the originals, together with extracts from the writings of noted authors in which the quotations have been used.

"Mr. Belton has confined himself to really literary quotations, and he has used the space thus gained in illustrating his excerpts by apt citations from good authors, at much greater length than is usually possible in such collections. . . . The merit of the book is, in short, distinct, and it must be admitted to be a good piece of work."—Tribune.

VOL. XXXIX., No. 13. NEW YORK, March 28, 1891. WHOLE No. 1000.

DRIVEN FROM SEA TO SEA;

Or, "JUST A CAMPIN'."

By C. C. POST.

This powerful book has heretofore been sold by subscription, and although the price has been $2.00, it has reached a sale of nearly fifty thousand copies. We now issue it in an attractive style and at a low price. The rise and growth of that great anti-monopoly party, the Farmers' Alliance, renders most opportune the publication at a popular price of

THIS GREAT ANTI-MONOPOLY BOOK.

It has been reviewed by the press of the country, examined by our most eminent clergy and others, and all are unanimous in pronouncing it a wonderful production.

The Hon. GEO. W. JULIAN, many years a member of Congress, and Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, says:

"I have read 'Driven from Sea to Sea' with an interest which never flagged for a moment. It is a graphic picture of the trials and sufferings of a pioneer settler in his weary conflict with land-grabbers and railway corporations in California, and will be keenly appreciated by thousands who have had a kindred experience. As a contribution to the 'simple annals of the poor,' it deserves a place by the side of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and it cannot fail to bear fruit in the coming struggle between the organized rapacity of capital and the rights of humanity. It embodies suggestions in political economy, and hints at reforms, which will help wake up the people while appealing to their sense of justice and their sensibility to suffering. I have long felt the need of such a story, and am glad to find it so true to life, and so well written."

Gen. B. F. BUTLER in a letter to the President says:

"I think it will do the same service to the country in regard to the misuse of our land system that 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' did with regard to slavery."

Hon. B. F. SHIVELY says:

"It is impossible to sufficiently commend your book. It comes like a revelation and should, and doubtless will, cause a sensation deeper and more profound than that produced by 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' years ago. The latter dealt with a system involving a clear and open usurpation of human rights. You have exposed the iniquities of a system involving a cunning and insidious, but still more fatal usurpation of the rights of humanity.

"Your book should have been entitled 'The True Story of the Bread-Winners,' for indeed such it is. You merit and will receive the thanks of the millions, who earn their bread by honest toil, for having with such consummate grace and tact mirrored their own experiences, and with such clearness and force placed their cause properly before the country and the world.

"Your work deserves and I believe will receive a larger circulation than any book of history or fiction published within the present century."

WALTER H. SHUPE, formerly editor of the New York Advocate, writes:

"NEW YORK.

"It is 11:10 P.M. My wife has just finished reading aloud to myself and our whole family 'Driven from Sea to Sea,' and I will not retire to sleep till I have written this missive to express to you the delighted appreciation I realized of the merits of your really meritorious work. It ought to be in the hands of every honest voter in the land. Its style equals that of Dickens; its logic overwhelms, and its points are convincing."

NOTES IN SEASON.

TICKNOR & COMPANY have just published the first part of "Architecture of the Renaissance in England," by J. Alfred Gotch, assisted by W. Talbot Brown. The work will be completed in six parts in folio, each to contain about twenty plates. They have also just ready the fifth edition of "Artistic Homes in City and Country," by Albert W. Fuller and Wm. Arthur Wheeler, revised, with seven full-page illustrations.

HARPER & BROTHERS are about to bring out in attractive form, in the Franklin Square Library, new editions of Mr. Howells' two latest novels, "Annie Kilburn" and "A Hazard of New Fortunes." This publication is in response to a popular demand for these remarkable stories in a household issue which shall be cheaper than the library edition, but worthy a place on reading-table and book-shelf. The latest addition to the Franklin Square Library is "The Lost Heiress: a tale of love, battle, and adventure," by Ernest Glanville.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS publish to-day "Zadoc Pine, and other stories," by H. C. Bunner, a collection of some of the most careful work of this gifted writer, showing a close study of the more rugged phases of human nature; and cheaper editions of the "History of the Second Army Corps," by Gen. Francis A. Walker, which is practically a detailed description of most of the operations of the Army of the Potomac; and of "How the Other Half Lives," by James A. Riis, which has been exciting profound interest among the most thoughtful people who make the welfare of humanity their study.

PROF. KNOFLACH publishes through G. E. Stechert his "Sound-English Primer," in which he applies the methods of his former book, "Sound-English: the language of the world," although he has much simplified his system of types and turned letters, and now uses only the accepted English lettering. The little stories of which the primer consists are first printed in phonetic spelling and are then given in regular spelling, that the child may learn to reason and understand the different combinations of sound made by the different combinations of letters. The author thinks children will learn to read by this new method in less than half the time now required.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have just ready "James Freeman Clarke," including an autobiography, extracts from his diary and correspondence, edited by Edward Everett Hale, and including a steel portrait; "Life of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, with extracts from his journals and correspondence," by Samuel Longfellow, fully described in our Spring Announcement number; "The Odyssey of Homer," translated into English rhythmic prose by Prof. George H. Palmer; "Pepero, the Boy Artist," a brief memoir of James Jackson Jarves, Jr., a marvellous boy who died in his sixteenth year, written by his father, who gives reproductions of many of his drawings, including portrait of himself; and a new edition of Clara Erskine Clement's useful "Handbook of Christian Symbols and Stories of the Saints as Illustrated in Art," edited by Katherine E. Conway.

FLOOD & VINCENT (The Chautauqua-Century Press), Meadville, Pa., have in preparation, "Callias: a tale of the fall of Athens," by Rev. Alfred J. Church, of London, author of "To the Lions," etc. (ready April 15), a most valuable contribution not only to fiction, but to historical literature; "Book, Teacher and School," by Dr. William R. Harper, Dr. William T. Harris and Bishop John H. Vincent, a treatise on Sunday-school teachers, prepared by specialists in the three departments which are mentioned in the title; a new novel by John Habberton, which is to be published before July 1, and will deal with the influence of Chautauqua in an American home; and "A Japanese Poet's Diary," translated by Mrs. Flora Best Harris from a Japanese classic more than four centuries old, which will be produced in novel and attractive form with original illustrations by a native Japanese artist.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); (Q. 4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Abbott, Austin. A digest of New York statutes and reports, from July, 1882, to Jan. 1, 1890; comprising the adjudications of all the courts of the State, [etc..] together with the statutes of general application contained in the laws from 1883 to 1889, incl., with notes and ref., [etc.,] being the 2d suppl. (in 2 v.) to the rev. ed. of Abbott's N. Y. digest. V. 2 of 2d suppl., v. 10 of the set. N. Y., Baker, Voorhis & Co., 1891. c. 1319 p. O. shp., net, $7.50.

American (The) and English railroad cases; a coll. of all the railroad cases in the courts of last resort in America and England; ed. by W: M. McKinney. V. 44. Northport, N. Y., E: Thompson Co., [1891.] c. 9+736 p. O. shp., $4.50.

Arnold, Sir Edwin. The light of the world: or, the great consummation. San Francisco, Cal., S. Carson Co., 1891. 287 p. D. pap., 50 c.

Bacon, Alice Mabel. Japanese girls and women. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. c. 9+333 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Describes the domestic and social life of Japanese women of various classes from childhood to old age, in the country and the town. The author has enjoyed intimate friendship with a number of Japanese women, and has had opportunities to learn the details of their life and thought that few other writers on Japan have had. She acknowledges special assistance in the preparation of the work from Umé Tsuda, a Japanese student at Bryn Mawr, and from Rev. W: E. Griffis.

Ballou, Maturin M. The new Eldorado: a summer journey to Alaska; tourists' ed., with maps. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. c. 21+355 p. S. cl., $1.

Many travellers have used "The new Eldorado" as a guide-book, and the author has received many requests for specific information as to the means and mode of making a journey to Alaska. To meet these inquiries, an itinerary of the route followed by excursionists, maps and the usual guide-book information has been added, and the whole issued in a cheap and handy form of "Baedeker" aspect. See also, notice, P. W., "Weekly Record," Oct. 19, 1889. [925.]

Balzac, Honoré de. The lily of the valley; tr. by Katharine Prescott Wormeley. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1891. c. 8+344 p. D. hf. mor., $1.50.

Felix de Vandenesse tells the story of his life to Natalie de Manerville, whose hand he seeks in marriage. It is a record of the narrator's relations with Madame de Mortsauf, whose tragic death it commemorates. It is a study of man's selfishness and of the beauty of a noble womanly spirit. The story is almost devoid of action, a study in morbid psychology of a remarkable kind. Felix de Vandenesse is the embodiment of a form of masculine egotism and covert brutality often represented in what are called highly cultivated circles. The translation is almost as nervous and expressive as the original.

Barrie, J. M. My Lady Nicotine. N. Y. Cassell Pub. Co., [1891.] 265 p. D. cl. $1.50.

A benedict, who has been compelled to renounce smoking, perceives the error of his former way, and wishes all men to consider that every cigar they smoke would buy part of a new piano stool in terra-cotta plush; yet he indulges in fond and rhapsodical memories of the "Arcadia mixture," his briarwood pipe, tobacco pouch and the friends of smoking days. Sketchy chapters illustrative of the special bliss of smokers.

Barrie, J. M. A window in Thrums. N. Y. Cassell Pub. Co., [1891.] 8+217 p. D. cl. $1.50.

Depicts the daily life of simple Scottish folk. Their good-natured inquisitiveness, gossip, vanity and determination to make a presentable appearance "before folks" at any cost, lend a comic touch to a story of considerable pathos, dealing with tender family ties and the generous forgiving nature of a mother's and sister's love.

Beet, Rev. J. Agar. A commentary on St Paul's Epistles to Philippians, Ephesians, Colossians, and to Philemon. N. Y., T. Whittaker, 1891. 418 p. 12°, cl., $2.

Bible. The Holy Bible: cont. the Old and New Testaments: [King James' version; lithographed in the easy reporting style of [Pitman's] phonography. Authorized version. N. Y., I: Pitman & Sons, 1890 [1891.] 2+808 p. O. cl., $3; mor., $4.50.

Brazil. Constitution of the United States of Brazil; tr. into English. Trinity College, N. C., School of Political and Social Science, 1891. 28 p. O. (Trinity College pub., no. 5.) pap., 20 c.

The projected constitution signed June 22, 1890, for presentation to the National Congress of November 15, 1890. Gives the names of the officers of the provisional government.

Brewster, F. Carroll. A treatise on practice in the courts of Pennsylania. Phil., G: T. Bisel, 1891. c. 2 v, 808; 809–1014 p. O. shp., $8.

Briggs, L. B. R. Original charades. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1891. c. 4+72 p. S. cl., $1.

Charades set forth in clever verse which have appeared in Scribner's Magazine. There is an index of answers.

British (The) and European patent agency. Epitome of the world's patent laws and statistics. N. Y., The British and European Patent Agency, 1891. c. 40+1 p. D. pap. gratis.

Shows under every country the cost of taking out letters-patent, the maximum period for which they are granted and other legal information needed by a patentee, and gives statistics of industries, productions, etc., as a guide to the choice of desirable fields for the introduction of inventions.

Brooke, Magdalen, (pseud.) The story of Eleanor Lambert. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co.

 In this list, the titles generally are verbatim transcriptions (according to the rule of the American Library Association) from books received.* Books not received are indicated by a prefixed asterisk, and this office cannot be held responsible for the correctness of their record.*

[1891.] 4+165 p. D. (The "Unknown" lib., no. 2.) cl., 50 c.

An artistically told story of a good woman disappointed in the man of her choice, who devotes her middle life and old age to taking care of his young wife, and later his orphan child, Eleanor Lambert. Eleanor's love-story is also not a happy one, but reveals a truly refined, noble woman's power for good to herself and others.

Brooksmith, J. Key to arithmetic in theory and practice. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 739 p. 12°, cl., $2.60.

Buckeye-Hawkeye schoolmaster; or, the life of Carl Mackenzie, dedicated to the school-teachers of America, by one of the teachers. Chic., W. W. Knowles, 1891. c. 176 p. D. pap., 50 c.

A tale of an Ohio district-school of the log-cabin era, combining a love-story with pedagogy. "Many would-be teachers come to their work with little reading to stimulate thought, and less experience." The author endeavors to impart, by means of an attractive story pedagogical knowledge acquired in an experience of twenty years of school work.

Chaffee, Frank. Songs of spring: verses; il. by T: McIlvaine. N. Y., G: M. Allen & Co., 94 5th Ave., 1891. c. no paging, F. cl., $2.

Gay little verses illustrating the sketches, which are from nature, or idealistic and imaginative. Large paper, the binding white and gold.

Children (The) of India; written by one of their friends. N. Y., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1891. 174 p. il. map, sm. 4°, cl., $1.40.

Clark, J. Scott. A briefer practical rhetoric. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1891. c. 11+307 p. D. cl., 90 c.

The author, who is Professor of Rhetoric in Syracuse University, believes "that the only practical rhetorical training must be largely negative; that the ability to detect readily and to remove quickly any blemish from what has already been written is the first requisite;" and that "invention" cannot be taught in the class-room. The book is designed for high-school and seminary use, and the exercises for correction have been selected from some 700 undergraduate essays.

Coelho, Joaquim Guilherme Gomes, ["Julio Diniz," pseud.] The fidalgos of Casa Mourisca; from the Portuguese, by Roxana L. Dabney. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1891.] c. 399 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The author's last work, written in 1871. Represents the struggle between aristocratic and democratic ideas in Portugal. A romance in which the central thought is the love of the son of an aristocrat of the old school for the daughter of a former retainer of their house. The scene is laid in the provinces, the Baroness Gabriella bringing a whiff of the modern spirit of equality from the metropolis.

Comegys, B: B., ed. A primer of ethics. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1891. c. '90. 11+127 p. S. cl., 50 c.

A new edition of "The Rollo code of morals," by Jacob Abbott, prepared with the consent of his family and publishers. Phraseology has been modernized and condensed. Some chapters have been omitted, and others added. Intended as a text-book to aid in inculcating true ethical ideas in the minds of children. Anecdotes, illustrations and questions follow the statement of a general principle of duty.

Cooley, Alice Kingsbury. Asaph: an historical romance. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] c. '90. 229 p. D. (American authors' ser., no. 33.) pap., 50 c.

The scene is Jerusalem in the reign of Jehoiakim. This king is about to sacrifice a widow's only son to Moloch, the Sun-God, when Helah hits upon a plan which delivers Asaph from the fires of Moloch. Much is told of the splendor of Jerusalem in the time of Nebuchadnezzar, and his career and that of many famous Israelites is effectively introduced.

Delpit, Albert. Such is life; (Comme dans la vie;) from the French, by Alexina Loranger. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1891. c. '90. 3-335 p. D. (Library of choice fiction, no. 16.) pap., 50 c.

Same as "As 'tis in life," published by the Welch, Fracker Co. See notice, P. W., "Weekly Record," June 7, 1890, [958.]

Dunbar, C: F. Chapters on the theory and history of banking. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. c. 6+198 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author is Professor of Political Economy in Harvard University. Eight of the eleven chapters were printed in 1885 for the use of the students of Harvard. The whole has been revised, and notices of current history brought down to present date. The text is freely annotated with notes referring to his sources of information. The new chapters deal with the system of Clearing-House loan certificates, and a description of the Bank of Amsterdam.

Duncan, Sara Jeannette. An American girl in London; il. by F. H. Townsend. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. c. 10+321 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Mamie Wick, the American girl, leaves her "Momma" and her "Poppa," who has made a fortune in baking-powder, to attend to politics in Chicago, while she goes off to see the sights of London. Her impressions of the rule-bound English, the servile adherence of the women to conventionality, etc., are brightly told. Primarily it was written for English people, and the criticisms of their institutions are specially addressed to them. Illustrated by the artist who did so much for its clever predecessor, "A social departure."

Fénelon, François de S. de la M. The education of girls; from the French, by Kate Lupton. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1890. c. '90. 8+120 p. D. hf. cl., 55 c.

The translator has endeavored to adhere as closely to the original as the difference between the genius of the two languages will allow. Nothing has been omitted, "and even the quotations from Scripture have been left in the form in which Fénelon gives them—that of more or less free renderings from the Vulgate."

Feydeau, Ernest Aimé. Barberine; or, the ballet dancer's husband; adapted by Mary Neal Sherwood. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1891. 8-365 p. D. (Globe lib., v. 1, no. 143.) pap., 25 c. (Corr. title.)

Published in Chicago by H. A. Sumner & Co., in 1880, under the title of "Barberine; or, a woman's devotion;" in the same year, by the same publisher, as "Ballet-dancer's husband" (see P. W., Weekly Record, July 3, 1880, No. 442). Original title is "Le mari de la danseuse."

Findlay, Jessie Patrick. Norman Reid. Cin., O., Cranston & Stowe, [1891.] il. D. cl., 90 c.

The scene alternates between Glasgow, Edinburgh and Otterton. The hero is a clergyman, the heroine an artist; these two are plighted lovers. The story deals with the troubles that assail them in their separate spheres of action, and with the obstacles that for a time prevent their marriage.

Fleming, Mrs. May Agnes. Married for money; and other stories. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, [1891.] c. 2+246 p. D. (Sunnyside ser., no. 18.) pap., 25 c.

Contents: Married for money; The old story; How I won a husband; A merry bridal eve; A modern Hebe.

Fleming, Mrs. May Agnes. A pretty governess. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, 1891. 244 p. 12°, (Peerless ser., no. 32.) pap., 25 c.

Glanville, Ernest. The lost heiress: a tale of love, battle and adventure. N. Y., Harper, 1891. 4+273 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new series, no. 682.) pap., 40 c.

Captain Sidney Blaine, in Zululand, is left heir to a fortune if he marries Kate Dalston; if not, the property goes to Kate and a cousin, Drummond Dalston. The father of the latter sends an emissary to Zululand to get Captain Blaine out of the way. Adventures in Zululand occupy a large part of the story. Introduces the campaign in which the French Prince Imperial was killed.

Gordon, A. J., D.D. The first thing in the world; or, the primacy of faith. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1891.] c. 32 p. S. pap., 20 c.

"In the repeated groupings of the Christian graces found in Scripture, faith is invariably assigned the first place." In delicate white cover, with lettering in red-brown ink

Harrington, Rev. C. E., D.D. The drift of the young men; with relation to the churches. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1891.] 79 p. S. pap., 75 c.

Gives statistics of increase of Protestant communicants as relatively three times as great as increase of population; describes the work of the Young Men's Christian Association, and Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, etc. The treatise is based on an address before the Monadnock Association, Keene, N. H., and a paper read before the Evangelical Alliance of Boston.

Henty, G. A. A hidden foe. N. Y., United States Book Co., 1891. 313 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 142.) pap., 50 c.

Algernon Corbyn concealed the facts relative to an early marriage and the birth of a child. Later, on a sudden impulse, he revealed his secret to his sister, and declared his intention to acknowledge his daughter. Before this is done, Corbyn, of Corbyn Court, is suddenly killed, and Mrs. Clitheroe, the sister, then becomes "a hidden foe" to Constance Corbyn.

Herodotus. Book 7; with notes by Agnata F. Butler. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 16+302 p. 16°, cl., 50 c.

Johnston, R: Malcolm. The Primes and their neighbors; ten tales of middle Georgia; il. by E. W. Kemble, A. B. Frost and others. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. c. 4+310 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Ten of the author's characteristic dialect tales of middle Georgia. The durance of Mr. Dickerson Prime is here published for the first time, the rest of the stories have already appeared in the Harper periodicals, The Century or The Cosmopolitan. The other titles are: The combustion of Jim Rakestraw; The self-protection of Mr. Littleberry Roach; The humors of Jacky Bundle; The experiment of Mrs. Sally Cash; Travis and Major Jonathan Wilby; New discipline at Rock Spring; Mr. Joseph Pate and his people; Mr. Gibble Colt's ducks; and The pursuit of the Martyns.

Kaufmann, R: Paris of to-day: from the Danish, by Miss Olga Flinch. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1891.] c. 20+298 p. il. O. cl., $3.

The general and particular aspects of Paris; the social and intellectual life of Parisians, with special descriptions of the Exposition of 1889 and the Eiffel tower. The life of the streets, the students, the savants, the babies, the peddlers, the newsmen, the reporters, dinners, soirees, marriages and funerals are commented on in a chatty, gossipy style. Many expressive sketches illustrate the text.

Keltie, J. Scott, ed. Statesman's Year-Book (The): statistical and historical annual of the states of the world for the year 1891: 28th annual publication; rev. after official returns. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 23+1132 p. 12°, cl., $3.

Kluge, Friedrich. An etymological dictionary of the German language; tr. from the 4th German ed. by J: Francis Davis. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 16+446 p. 4°, cl., $3.

Knoflach, A: A sound-English primer. N. Y., G: E. Stechert, [1891.] c. '90. 4+68 p. D. bds., 25 c.

The author holds that the irregularity of English orthography makes learning to read the most arduous task in the child's educational career, and that the present methods have an injurious effect on the child's mental faculties, leading him to guess instead of reason. Prof. Knoflach teaches the sounds of the English language through a phonetic system of spelling, based upon his former book, "Sound-English: a language for the world," which he has simplified since its issue a year ago. This primer is made up of short stories, first printed phonetically and afterwards repeated in the accepted spelling of school-readers. The author thinks a child of fair average intelligence may be taught to read fluently in six weeks by his method. The book throughout is printed in plain English type, no new characters being now needed.

Kobbé, Gustav. New York and its environs. N. Y., Harper, 1891. c. 8–282 p. maps, il. S. cl., $1.

A guide-book of New York, describing the city in sections, from Liberty Island to Riverside Park. A full description of Central Park, with a clearly marked map, is given, the collections of the Art Museum, the Museum of Natural History, the Menagerie, the Lenox Library, and other places of public interest, are completely set forth. Lists of churches, libraries, theatres, newspapers, routes of travel, hotel, restaurant, ship, postal and telegraph facilities, and the historic growth of the town are included.

Leland, C: G. A manual of wood-carving; rev. by J: J. Holtzapffel. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1891. c. 10+162 p. il. sq. O. bds., $1.75.

Similar in plan to the author's "Manual of drawing and designing." The introduction concerns woods, tools and sharpening; the appendix suggests a great variety of objects to which carving is applicable. The instruction is imparted in twenty "Lessons," each of which concerns some distinct process of the art and is complete in itself, so that from the first the pupil is taught how to produce some satisfactory work of its kind. The sweep-cut is carefully taught, and the illustrations furnish many suggestions for wood-carvers. The author's art and folk-lore studies are well known.

Lenten thoughts upon the collects, epistles and gospels for the season of Lent. New cheap ed. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1891. 217 p. 12°, pap., 25 c.

Lillie, Lucy C. Phil and the baby; [also] False witness: two stories. N. Y., Harper, 1891. c. '86, '90. 8+219 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Both stories were first issued in Harper's Young People. Phil and the baby are attached to a travelling show, separated by accident, and afterwards brought together under fortunate circumstances. The "False witness" will also keep young people up to the mark of excitement, and teach them some practical lessons at the same time.

Patten, Simon N. The educational value of political economy. Baltimore, Md., American Economic Assoc., 1890 [1891.] 36+4 p. O. (Publications of the American Economic Assoc., v. 5, no. 6.) pap., 75 c.

A science is of greatest educational value when in a transition state from the inductive to the deductive form. Political economy is in many respects a model science for teaching, as its different parts are in different stages of development, and its reasoning is similar to that of every-day life. There is a careful consideration of the different educational uses of the study, and attention is called to five prevalent errors to which teachers are liable. Dr. Patten is a professor in the Wharton School of Finance and Economy, University of Pa.

Peabody, Andrew. D.D. King's chapel sermons. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. c. 6+340 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Contains twenty-eight discourses by Dr. Andrew P. Peabody in King's Chapel, Boston, within the past few years. The subjects of the discourses are such as appeal to all thoughtful minds, and their treatment is so catholic, so free from any narrow or exclusive character, so noble in their summons to right living and personal excellence, that they may be read with profit by all denominations.

Sherman, Porter. A tariff primer: the effects of protection upon the farmer and laborer. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. c. 6+54 p. D. (Questions of the day, no. 65.) pap., 25 c.

A tract written "to refute the pretended arguments of those who hold that the better condition of the workingman in this country is to be attributed to protection. It shows not only negatively that wages do not come out of protection, but positively where they do come from. . . . Protection is an impoverisher and not a wealth-producer."—Preface.

Shoup, Francis A., D.D. Mechanism and personality: an outline of philosophy in the light of the latest scientific research. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1891. c. 14+343 p. D. cl., $1.30.

Aims to give the present attitude of philosophy in the light of latest scientific research in a way to be understood by the ordinary reader. When purely technical terms are employed their meaning is also given in common speech. "The metaphysic is, in the main, that of Lotze, or perhaps better, the Lotzian phase of Kant."—Pref. Experimental or physiological psychology receives considerable attention. The author is Professor of Analytical Physics in the University of the South.

Solomonsen, C. J., M.D. Bacteriological technology for physicians; tr. from the 2d rev. Danish ed. N. Y., W: Wood & Co., 1891. 162 p. 8°, cl., $1.25.

Stevenson, E: Irenæus. Left to themselves: being the ordeal of Philip and Gerald. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1891. c. 323 p. D. cl., $1.

Philip Touchstone, a self-educated, energetic lad of seventeen, rescues Gerald Saxton from the attack of a tramp, and "left to themselves" they become fast friends. On a voyage to Nova Scotia they are wrecked, and among the rescued is a man who clears up a mystery which had brought disgrace upon the father of young Touchstone.

Storm, Theodor. Immensee; with English notes and a German-English vocabulary, by Dr. Wilhelm Bernhardt. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1891. c. 6+113 p. D. (Heath's modern language ser.) bds., 30 c.

A charming idyl of Northern Germany edited for beginners in German. The text is that of the German edition de luxe of 1887. Notes are full, and the vocabulary gives irregular and separable compound verbs in the form in which they occur in the text. The editor is connected with the Washington (D. C.) High School.

Swan, Annie S., [Mrs. Burnett-Smith.] Hazell & Sons, brewers. New ed. Cin., O., Cranston & Stowe, [1891.] 250+3 p. por. D. cl., 75 c.

The members of the firm were Herbert Hazell and his sons Robert and Herbert Hazell, Jr. The story tells of Herbert's dissolute habits, Robert's convictions, the return of Mary Hazell, the visit of Lena Rayne, and the financial collapse of "Hazell & Sons," with its effect on the family at Hazlewood.

Tacitus, Caius Corn. The histories of Tacitus; with introd., notes and an index by the Rev. W. A. Spooner. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 7+513 p. 8°, cl., $3.50.

Talleyrand-Perigord, C: M. de, (Prince.) Memoirs; ed. with preface and notes by the Duc de Broglie; tr. by Raphael Ledos de Beaufort; with introd. by Whitelaw Reid. In 5 v. V. 1. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. c. 6+342 p. fac-simile letters, por. O. cl., $2.50.

What the world has for fifty years been anticipating in these long-withheld papers is very different from the reality. The distinguishing note is impersonality. There is little concerning Talleyrand's private life, and the attitude of observer, rather than actor, is for the most part maintained. Upon the discreditable side of his life he keeps silence; he makes no attempt to refute many of the charges against him, and ignores completely the notorious scandals in regard to bribe-taking. Attention is concentrated upon those public questions and services which brought him to the front in European diplomacy; he endeavors to furnish adequate justification of his conduct towards the governments he served and betrayed, and has presented the strongest and most plausible arguments that the circumstances will allow. The present volume deals with the period from 1754–1808. The introduction by Whitelaw Reid sets forth convincingly Talleyrand's place in the world's history.

Taylor, Belle Gray. The sardonyx seal: a romance of Normandy. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. c. 8+316 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The sardonyx seal-ring is the possession of a young man saved from the wreck of a yacht on the romantic coast of Normandy. It denotes the heir of large English possessions. He is cared for by Mrs. Genell and her niece, Angela, a dreamy maiden devoted to music. Many conversations on art and literature brighten the pages. An old professor bent on improving the mind of a delightful niece is full of originality.

Tiedeman, Christopher G. A treatise on the law of sales of personal property, including the sales of chattel mortgages. St. Louis, The F. H. Thomas Law-Book Co., 1891. c. 16+769 p. O. shp., $6.

Warner, C: Dudley. Our Italy. N. Y., Harper, 1891. c. 6+226 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

The sensation of first beholding Italy from the northern Alpine heights may be repeated, says the author, by whoever will cross the burning desert of Colorado and come suddenly into the bloom of Southern California. The book comprises the articles bearing the same title which have just been concluded in Harper's Magazine, describing the climate, resources, industries, physical conditions and inhabitants of Southern California. There is much material of an economic character. An appendix give additional matter in regard to climate and crops.

Wright, A. Minott. Three months with the New York Herald; or, old news on board of a homeward-bounder. N. Y., W: Beverley Harrison, 1891. c. 2+222 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The writer, a sailor from his earliest years, while sailing around the world takes the N. Y. Herald for three months, and comments upon the news in its columns, endeavoring to prove that America is the greatest country of the world. America had been run down by a column in the New Zealand Herald, which the author hotly refutes.

Xenophon. Anabasis: book 3; ed. for the use of schools, with notes, introd., vocabulary, il. and maps by the Rev. G. H. Hall. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 74+162 p. maps, 18°, (Elementary classics.) cl., 40 c.

Chosen from the writings of Maria Edgeworth and Michael Banim, W: Carleton, Lover, W: Maginn, T. Crofton Croker, Gerald Griffin, C: Lever, C: Kickham, Rosa Mulholland. Brief biographical sketches precede the selections from each author.

Young, Jos. Hudson. Lyrics, Fjelda, The great bridge, In the happy summer time. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1889 [1891.] c. '89. 4+131 p. D. cl., $1.

"Fjelda" is a maiden unhappy in love, who, with a prayer to Odin, drowns herself in a northern lake; "The Great Bridge" was written for the opening day of the Brooklyn Bridge.

Zola, Emile. Money; from the French, by Kendall Warren. Chic., Nile Pub. Co., [1891.] c. 278 p. D. (Nile ser., v. 1, no. 4.) pap., 25 c.

In this latest volume of Zola's series of novels of gigantic scope, money is the source and explanation of all things, as the earth was in "La terre," the great dry-goods house in "Au bon heur des dames," and the mines in "Germinal." One more volume on war will finish the great Rougon-Macquart series.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

THE PROFESSION OF BOOKSELLING. III.

IN THE STORE.

THE apprentice, having entered into his occupation, finds himself in the midst of the surroundings among which he is to spend, let us assume, the remainder of his life. In most large establishments the work is or should be divided into departments, such as the Mail Delivery, Correspondence Dept., Order Dept., Stock Dept., and Salesmen. As a rule the beginner is started in the lowest grade, from which he is expected to work himself up to the highest. It is not necessary to dwell on the lower offices in which the bookseller's assistant must serve his time, as they call for mere routine work such as any bright boy can master in a short time. When he has reached the stock department the apprentice first becomes of importance, because at this stage his book education actually begins, and here must be decided whether he is really fit to take the next step and rank among the journeymen—the salesmen. The more firmly he grounds himself in this department the better will he fit himself in a few years ahead to serve in the higher office of salesman.

He will find the books arranged either by publishers or by subjects. The merits of both systems will be touched upon later on. The care of the stock, putting away the new books that have just come in, or those that have been taken down to be shown to customers, gives him the advantage of handling the books, of noting publishers' names, differences of editions, etc., and of learning the prices. This will require close attention and hard work. It will be difficult work at first and cause much vexation and physical distress; but if conscientiously persisted in, will bring about good results. Method must be cultivated in putting the books into their proper places, and in memorizing them when put on the shelf. It will be a great help to associate in the mind something that is striking in the exterior of the book, its title, possibly the queer name of the author, its peculiar binding, or else to bear in mind that it has been placed near some familiar book. In putting away a book he should repeat the title of the one previously put on the shelves also, and so on with every book handled, that their titles and relative positions may be impressed on the memory. In the course of time the apprentice will note that he has become familiar with quite a number of books merely by comparison, the peculiarity of position, or some other fact, as well as sometimes by the distinctive bindings used by different publishers. For instance, "St. Elmo" is asked for; that may be associated with the Carleton-Dillingham peculiar shape and binding and cabalistic trade-mark, and the eye will at once find the section of the store in which that line is stocked; Darwin's "Descent of Man," brown cloth, like most of Appletons' scientific books, etc. Nearly every American publisher has some distinctive covering for his books, as the Harpers' green cloth novels, and other marks which, slight as they may seem, are valuable aids in memorizing, and ought not to be despised. The greatest difficulty will be in keeping track of the books of minor publishers, whose lists are small. A good plan is to have them all in one place, so that when their books are called for they may be found readily. In fact it would be a better plan to put the stock of these minor publishers under the special charge of the apprentice, for it is in this direction that he can render practical assistance, because, as this section of the trade has unfortunately not yet recognized the importance of keeping their lists permanently before the trade, the salesman often loses much valuable time in hunting up their books, which might be saved by this plan.

The beginner should early compare the editions of different publishers, and ask of others why one is better than the other. He will learn that it is on account of the editor's notes, the text, or the make-up—the type, paper, impression, illustrations or other mechanical feature. This information may soon be committed to memory if the points are mentally repeated every time the occasion presents itself for handling the books.

A practice should be made, when handling new books especially, of looking over every book carefully. Read the title on the back and note any external peculiarity of the book. Scan the title-page, the preface or introduction, and turn over the pages, reading here and there a paragraph or page as time permits. In this way one becomes accustomed to gain rapidly a slight idea of the work and its scope, which will be of considerable assistance until one has had time to examine the work more thoroughly, or has become posted on its merits by reading critical reviews, etc.

The apprentice should be expected to go over the stock every day, that he may keep it arranged in perfect order, and keep himself thoroughly posted as to the location of every book. He should also be ready at all times to give assistance to others in looking for books, laying out orders and helping the salesman, as every detail will help to equip him more fully for the place he expects finally to fill.

TO-DAY'S issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the one thousandth since its beginning, nearly twenty years ago. Many changes in the book trade have taken place since this journal was first launched by its founder in 1872, and its pages bear the record of many stormy periods, as well as of bright and hopeful ones. Many of the issues fought for are dead, others have been successfully settled, some still remain to be realized. Many of the older members of the trade have passed away, leaving in the hands of a new generation the responsibility of supporting the dignity and principles of their profession. But a brighter future is before us than was hoped for by our predecessors, and with better organization and intelligent co-operation the book trade may yet raise itself to the position it may justly contend is its right. To help on the consummation of this event the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY modestly hopes to do its share. We embrace this opportunity of extending to all our friends heartfelt thanks for their consideration and support, and the assurance that, as ever, we shall remain true to our motto: "Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."

WE have received a number of letters from the trade commenting in a friendly spirit on the series of articles which are appearing in the WEEKLY under the heading of "The Profession of Bookselling." We again call on the trade for any assistance it may feel inclined to render to make this series as practical and useful as possible.

THE BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION.

1500—1205—195.

THE above figures show, first, the limit of membership of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association of the United States, the second figure shows its present membership, and the third the number of members now required to complete the full limit of membership.

The Board of Trustees, by earnest work, are fast reaching the limit. At the regular business meeting, held on Wednesday, March 18, the following members were elected:

Russell Freeman, St. Paul, Minn.
Harry I. Clarke, N. Y. City.
Nat'l Tuttle, "
Halsey Whitney, Astoria, N. Y.
James F. Crafts, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Thos. O'Kuffe, N. Y. City.
Wm. Fanshawe, "
E. Storer, "
Thos. E. Gleason, " Norman Henley, " Clarence H. Clayton, "
Edgar E. Moore, "
John W. Krull, "
Sam'l J. Black, Brooklyn, E. D., N. Y.
J. B. Watkins, N. Y. City.
Horace Granfield, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.
Wm. Doxey, San Francisco, Cal.
R. M. Linke, Hoboken, N. J.
A. B. Pierson, San Francisco, Cal.
P. B. Lynch, Woburn, Mass.

The new Constitution and By-laws, together with list of members of the Association, is nearly ready, and will be sent to any address by applying to WILBUR B. KETCHAM, Secretary, NEWSPAPERS IN SOUTH AMERICA.

AT the fifth annual meeting of the Boston Paper Trade Association, held at the Brunswick, Boston, March 18, the Hon. W. E. Curtis presented a statistical report of the paper trade with South America, in the course of which he said that Uruguay has more newspapers in proportion to its people than any country on the globe. Montevideo has more dailies than London, and three times as many as New York. Buenos Ayres has fifteen dailies, a large number of weeklies and several monthly periodicals of high literary character and large circulation. Hardly a town of size in Brazil, Chile, the Argentine Republic and Central America is without its daily paper. Very little printing and wrapping paper is manufactured in the Latin-American States, but most of the supply is imported from Europe, and through high duties and cost of transportation it is very expensive when it reaches the consumer. Through adapting themselves to the peculiarities of their patrons, the European manufacturers have secured a trade that should have been ours.

A committee of five, consisting of E. H. Haskell, William A. Russell, William Whiting, J. P. Jordan and C. A. Dean, was appointed to communicate with the State Department with a view to putting the paper trade in a good position as regards any reciprocity treaty made in the future.

At the business meeting five new members were elected to the club, and the routine reports were presented, that of the Treasurer show ing a balance of $711 in the treasury. The following named officers were elected to serve for the coming year: President, Edward H. Haskell; First Vice-President, George W. Wheelwright; Second Vice-President, J. Richard Carter; Treasurer, William T. Baker; Secretary, James B. Forsyth; Executive Committee, Samuel P. Train, C. D. Brown, George W. Russell, F. A. Smith.

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM H. GROSS.

We hear with regret of the death, on March 17, of William H. Gross, member of the firm of Brown & Gross, Hartford, Conn., aged fifty-six years. Mr. Gross was a most estimable man and citizen. He was respected and esteemed by everybody. He had been a partner in the book firm of Brown & Gross ever since February 1, 1858. For the last two years his health had been increasingly affected by an internal cancer, for which the doctors could do nothing that would effectually arrest its progress. Last May he went to Paris for treatment. It was hoped for awhile that the physicians there had helped him a little; but in a month or two after his return home—where he arrived about the 1st of last August—he began to feel worse. In the early winter he was practically confined to the house, and, though keeping up good hope to the last, grew slowly worse until the end came. Mr. Gross never married. He lived in the house on Elm Street (overlooking Bushnell Park) where his father, Mason Gross, had lived. There are two remaining brothers—Mr. Charles E. Gross, a lawyer, and John M., who lives in Providence. A sister, Mrs. Seth E. Thomas, lives in New York.

The establishment of Brown & Gross has probably been as large and varied as any other book concern in Connecticut. It has long been the resort of lovers of books. As publishers, the firm has a wide and well-earned reputation, especially in school and college text-books. Among these have been editions of Euripides, Sophocles, Plato and Æschylus, all annotated by President Woolsey, of Yale College; as well as historical works, the "Connecticut State Register," "Connecticut Civil Officer," and "Hollister's History of Connecticut."

The firm of Brown & Gross, according to the Hartford Times, was formed February 1, 1858, and it has outlived both partners. The senior partner, Mr. Flavius A. Brown, died February 13, 1880; but the firm-name has been continued.

This old and prominent Hartford bookstore dates back, in its earlier days and with other names, to a time far back—as long ago as about 1830—when the firm of H. F. Sumner & Co. (the Co. being D. F. Robinson, afterwards Mayor) did business as booksellers at No. 20 State Street, between the United States Hotel and Fessenden's old Eagle Tavern. Flavius A. Brown was then a teacher of penmanship in the old "Stone" (now the Brown) School, and did jobs of penmanship in the evening; he wrote up the books of Sumner & Co., little thinking then that he would become the head of that house.

In 1834 Caleb M. Packard, the father of Chief of Police Packard, left his place as bookkeeper in the old Pratt Street Savings Bank, and he and F. A. Brown bought out Sumner & Co., and formed a partnership that lasted for three years by contract, as Packard & Brown. In 1837 Mr. E. W. Parsons became a member of the firm, Mr. Packard retiring. The new firm continued at 20 State Street for several years. In December, 1844, it bought out John Paine, the successor of Daniel Burgess and of Spaulding & Storrs, who had kept a bookstore where the Hills block now is, and moved into the quarters of the retiring firm.

April 1, 1846, they removed to the corner of Main and Asylum Streets, where Schall's jewelry store now is. There they put in the first real show-window ever seen in Hartford.

In January, 1852, the firm dissolved, Mr. Parsons retiring, and for six years Mr. Brown carried on the business. Having taken Mr. Gross as a partner early in '58, the firm soon became more widely known. The removal to No. 77 Asylum Street took place some five years before the tearing down of the brick buildings on the Main and Asylum Street corner and south of that, to make room for the greater and finer structures now standing, which were built in 1874 and '75.

Here is an old business card that dates back to the State Street days:

> BROWN & PARSONS,
> Publishers,
> Booksellers and Stationers,
> 20 State st., Hartford.
> F. A. Brown,
> E. W. Parsons.

April 1, 1880, Mr. L. Belknap was admitted to the firm, and survives his old partner. On the 1st of April, 1888, Mr. Jewett E. Hutchinson became a member of the firm. His death at Block Island in August, the same year, is remembered by all. A year ago the first of the coming month Mr. George F. Warfield was admitted to the partnership.

Mr. Gross had been a clerk in the book and publishing house of Belknap & Hamersley, and from that establishment he went to New York to take a place in the publishing house of Alfred S. Barnes. He afterwards went to the West, going to Leavenworth, and looking over that region as a quarter to settle down in; but it was during the business depression of 1857, and failing to find a good position he returned to Hartford, where he was asked by Mr. Brown to assist him in his business during the holidays. That little experience was favorable, and led to his becoming a partner in the firm. Mr. Gross was one of the original members of the Hartford City Guard, having been mustered in January 8, 1861, and discharged September 19, 1865, with rank of sergeant. He then joined the veteran association of that Company.

Alexander Young, the well-known Boston journalist, died March 19, aged fifty-five years. He wrote for the Boston Post under the pseudonym of "Traverner," and contributed weekly literary letters to the New York Critic, besides writing for the Century, Harper's, Independent and other journals.

Among his published works are "A Concise History of the Netherlands," "Chronicles of First Planters of Massachusetts Bay," "Chronicles of Plymouth," and minor contributions to New England history. Just before his death he was engaged in a work on "Old Boston," "with which subject," says George M. Towle, "no man was better fitted to deal." He was very well known in literary circles and highly esteemed. He was the son of Alexander Young, a prominent Unitarian clergyman of Boston. He married the daughter of the late George B. Upton, a well-known Boston merchant. She died many years ago, leaving him one son.

A. MINOR GRISWOLD died suddenly of apoplexy, March 14, at Sheboygan Falls, Mich., aged about 56 years. He made quite a reputation years ago as a humorist, under the pseudonym of "The Fat Contributor," and of late years has increased it as the editor of Texas Siftings. He has been a successful lecturer for many years also, and it was on a lecturing tour that the end came.

WILLIAM H. HERNDON, Abraham Lincoln's law partner and author of a "Life of Lincoln," died at his home near Springfield, Ill., March 18, of the grippe. He was seventy-two years old. His youngest son, William, died six hours before him from the same disease.

SIR PATRICK (MacChombaich de) COLQUHOUN, author of "Summary of Roman Civil Law" and "Mediæval Roman Law," died in London, March 23. He was born April 13, 1815, and was the son of Patrick Colquhoun, the Scottish political economist and reformer.

ANNE CHARLOTTE LYNCH BOTTA, the poet and author of "Handbook of Universal Literature," etc., died at her home in New York, March 23, aged seventy-one years.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

E. W. HOWE, the author of "The Story of a Country Town," has written a new tale, entitled "An Ante-Mortem Statement."

W. S. NEVINS, of Salem, Mass., has written a history of Salem's witchcraft delusion. Mr. C. W. Upham's book on this subject is now very hard to procure.

THE statement that Graham R. Tomson is the pseudonym of Miss Frances Wynne, has been questioned. We made the announcement on the information of an authority whose accuracy we had no reason to question. "M. E." writes that the wife of Arthur Tomson, a well-known English artist, is the author of the dainty lyric work with which the name of "Graham R. Tomson" has become identified. Her name in full, he claims, is Mrs. Arthur Graham Tomson, but that for some reason she prefers to be known as Graham R. Tomson. Her maiden name, on the authority of a letter written to Mr. Griswold, is said to have been Graham Rosamond Ball.

"A FEW evenings ago a prominent publisher walked into the Players' Club, and seeing Edwin Booth, sought an introduction. After a few moments' talk the man of books got down to business, and in my hearing offered the actor the sum of $25,000 cash and a generous royalty if he would consent to write the story of his life, tell something about the people he has met, his views of players, male and female, and something about the stage of to-morrow and the qualifications necessary for actors thereon. Mr. Booth, always taciturn, stiffly replied: .' No: nor five times that sum would not induce me to write a line of it. I shall never write a book. I detest writing. Sometimes I think I don't even like to act.'"—Philadelphia Times.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

MR. JAMES PAYN has joined the staff of Punch.

GEORGE DU MAURIER'S novel, "Peter Ibbetson," will begin in the June number of Harper's Magazine. It will run through six numbers of the magazine, and is to be fully illustrated by its author.

THE announcement comes from Chicago that the first number of the Western Bookseller, a journal devoted to the interests of booksellers, stationers, newsdealers and publishers, will be issued in April. It is not stated who will be the publisher or editor.

MR. LORETTUS S. METCALF has resigned the editorship of The Forum, after fifteen years of close confinement to review work. He is to be succeeded by Mr. Walter H. Page, an experienced newspaper man, who has been The Forum's business manager.

FERDINAND LASSALLE'S hitherto unpublished "Tagebuch," which was expected to appear in Nord und Süd last October, is now again promised for next month. The diary will be accompanied by remarks from Herr Paul Lindau, the editor of Nord und Süd.

The New England Magazine for March contains an interesting article on "Harvard College during the War of the Rebellion," by Capt. Nathan Appleton. The article is illustrated with views of old and new college buildings, and with portraits of Harvard men who distinguished themselves in the field and at home during the war.

A NEW quarterly journal is announced for publication by Macmillan & Co., under the title of The Economic Journal. It will be issued under the auspices of the British Economic Association, a society which numbers among its members Professor R. M. Smith, of Columbia College; Professor Taussig, of Harvard University; Professor Alfred Marshall, Professor Henry Sidgwick, and many other names equally well known.

The Printers' Circular, the old established Philadelphia journal for printers, has begun its twenty-sixth volume in a larger quarto shape and under a new régime. Through the failure of W. C. Bleloch (who succeeded Robert S. Mennamin, its founder), Ogden Armstrong has acquired the right, title and interest in its business. Wm. A. Bobb is the editor, and has already introduced new features, and promises to further enlarge it so that the Circular may in every respect become worthy of the patronage of printers and kindred craftsmen. The Circular has long been a welcome visitor, and we trust will long continue so.

PERSONAL NOTES.

MR. FRANK A. DOUBLEDAY, the enterprising business manager of Scribner's Magazine, sailed for Europe a week ago.

MR. FLEMING H. REVELL sailed for Europe on the 25th inst. per steamship Majestic, in the interests of the Fleming H. Revell Company, of which corporation he is the President.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

CAN any one give us the address of the publisher of a "Directory of the Dressmakers of the U. S."? It is supposed to be published either in Boston or Philadelphia.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

BENJ. R. TUCKER, of Boston, has just ready Emile Zola's new novel, "Money."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish early in July Mrs. Humphry Ward's new novel entitled "David."

FOWLER & WELLS will publish at once a new edition of Dio Lewis' book, "Weak Lungs, and how to make them strong."

THE NILE PUBLISHING CO. claims to have been able to place Zola's new novel, "Money," on the market ten days in advance of any competing edition, because they had the last instalments of the story as they appeared in Gil Blas cabled to them.

ROBERTS BROTHERS have in preparation, in addition to the books already announced, "More Happy Thoughts," by F. C. Burnand; the second series of "Hours of Thought on Sacred Things," by Rev. James Martineau; and a cheaper edition of E. E. Hale's "The Man without a Country," including all the illustrations of the large holiday edition.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY, of New York and Chicago, will publish shortly, by arrangement, authors' editions of the following: "The Blessed Life: how to find and live it," by N. J. Hofmeyr, Senior Professor of the Theological College of the Dutch Reformed Church, Stellenbosch, Cape Colony; and "How to Mark Your Bible," by Mrs. Stephen Menzies, with prefatory note by D. L. Moody.

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY CO. has just published "Acts of the English Martyrs," by Rev. J. H. Pollen, S.J. "Acts" is the name applied to the records of all that concerned the last days on earth, the sayings and doings, sufferings and death, of the martyrs. Father Pollen's record of the Catholics, laymen as well as priests, who suffered death under Elizabeth and her successors, has been compiled from manuscripts and state papers which were unknown or inaccessible to the authors of previous books on this subject.

J. W. BOUTON is prepared to take orders for "Engravings and Woodcuts by Old Masters," (Sec. xv-xix), selected by Dr. Friedrich Lippmann. These fac-similies represent some of the finest and rarest works of engraving, both on metal and wood. The reproduction is so perfect that, by the Prussian Government's orders, the word "fac-simile" is stamped on the back of each plate, in order to preclude the possibility of fraudulent manipulation. With Dr. Lippmann's facsimiles, the student may be said absolutely to possess all the advantages of a dozen great public Museums or Print-rooms, no single collection, public or private, being rich and fortunate enough to have anything like a complete series of the chefs-d'œuvre dealt with in these two portfolios. The Lists of Contents, in English, are not of the ordinary kind, but afford biographical and critical particulars which will put the reader in possession of some extremely useful and even necessary information.

THE total number of new books and new editions published in France last year is 13,365.

THE new volume of poems by Mathilde Blind, to be published next month, will be entitled "Dreams in Miniature."

DAVID DOUGLAS, Edinburgh, will publish next month, in his American Authors Series, William Winter's "Gray Days and Gold," a companion book to his "Shakespeare's England."

ACCORDING to report the Belgian Government threatens to renounce the copyright convention with France, which expires next February, if France persists in her protective policy. This will be a hard blow to the French printing and publishing trades.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS will publish shortly a volume of short stories entitled "The Shrine of Love," by Lady Dilke. Some of these are reprinted from the pages of the Universal Review, but others will now appear for the first time. Among them are "The Weaver of Lyons," which is the history of a Huguenot workman whom Lady Dilke came across some years ago in her weekly visits to the city hospital of Nice.

A BOOKSELLERS' school has just been opened in Prague under the auspices of the booksellers' union in that town. Every member of the union binds himself to let his apprentices and assistants attend the school, which is held twice a week from 7 to 9 in the evening. The course of instruction lasts 3 months and includes arithmetic, correspondence, bookkeeping, the law of bills of exchange and the law relating to the book trade. The instruction is given alternately in Czech and German. At the conclusion of the course certificates will be awarded.—Hedeler's Export Journal.

A CABLE dispatch, dated Paris, March 24, says: "M. Aulard, Professor of History at the Sorbonne, impeaches the authenticity of the Talleyrand Memoirs. He argues that, from internal evidence, parts of the papers have been suppressed and that the gaps have been clumsily concealed. He suggests that the work was done by Bacourt to screen the reputation of Talleyrand or of royal personages, as the published version of the Memoirs does not account for the prohibition of their publication for so many years. The Duc de Broglie gives an evasive reply to M. Aulard's challenge to produce the original manuscript."

THE firm which proposes to compete with Tauchnitz, mentioned in our last issue, is made up by Mr. William Heinemann, the London publisher (the present business being entirely independent of his London establishment), Mr. Wolcott Balestier, well known among English authors as the resident member of the New York firm of John W. Lovell, and Mr. Bram Stoker, Mr. Irving's business manager at the Lyceum. The firm of F. A. Brockhaus, of Leipzig, is retained to direct the distribution and sale of books on the continent; and besides Herr Brockhaus' depots at Leipzig, Berlin, Vienna, and Paris, arrangements are being made to extend the sale in other directions. Among the authors whose books will appear in the early issues of the English Library are Robert Louis Stevenson, Rudyard Kipling, George Meredith, Henry James, W. E. Norris, Hall Caine, B. L. Farjeon, H. Rider Haggard, Conan Doyle, Sir Edwin Arnold, W. D. Howells, Justin McCarthy, S. Baring Gould, Mrs. Walford, Margaret Deland, Mrs. Alexander, Mrs. Parr, Mrs. Riddell, Mrs. Woods, Miss Poynter, Helen Mathers, Maxwell Gray, Mrs. Hungerford, Ouida, and Rhoda Broughton. The first three issues of the series will be Mr. Rudyard Kipling's "The Light that Failed," Sir Edward Arnold's "The Light of the World," and Mrs. Deland's "Sidney."

ZADOC PINE, AND OTHER STORIES.

By H. C. BUNNER. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

No more delightful collection of stories has appeared in a long time than these, revealing a refined literary touch, deep and tender feeling, and a close study of some of the more rugged phases of human nature.

HOW THE OTHER HALF LIVES.

Studies Among the Tenements of New York. By JACOB A. RIIS. Illustrated from photographs by the author. 12mo, $1.25, net.

This work, which is exciting profound interest, is now issued in a new edition at half the former price.

"No book that has ever appeared in this land pours such light on 'the Other Half.' It is enormously more interesting than any novel that ever was written or that ever will be. Let all who are in any way interested in the welfare of humanity buy and read it at once."—Dr. A. F. SCHAUFFLER, in charge of the N. Y. City Missions.

HISTORY OF THE SECOND ARMY CORPS,

In the Army of the Potomac. By General FRANCIS A. WALKER. With portraits and maps Cheaper edition. 8vo, $2.00.

"We have no hesitation in saying that his history is one of the best that the war has produced. The work is more than the history of a single corps, for it practically describes at length most of the operations of the Army of the Potomac."—New York Sun.

Final Sale of Relics of Gen. Washington,

BELONGING TO LAURENCE WASHINGTON, BUSHROD O. WASHINGTON, THOMAS B. WASHINGTON AND J. R. O. LEWIS,

TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY AFTERNOONS and EVENINGS,

April 21, 22 and 23, 1891.

Afternoon Session, 2:30 o'clock; Evening Session, 7:30 o'clock.

THOMAS BIRCH'S SONS, Auctioneers, 1110 Chestnut Street, Phila.

This sale embraces all the relics of General Washington owned by the Washington family; consequenly, this will be the last sale made under their auspices. They have held nothing back for mementoes; every item that was in their possession which had any relation to General Washington has been placed in this Sale, to be sold absolutely without any reserve whatever, that being the rule strictly observed in all sales in this our Book Department. Want of space will not allow us to attempt to describe the many valuable relics; we will therefore merely mention some of the most important.

Portrait of Louis XVI., presented to Washington by the King; Bust of Count Necker, presented to Washington by Count D'Estaing; Drawing of the Destruction of the Bastile, presented to Washington by General Lafayette; Washington's Dress-Sword, bequeathed to Bushrod Washington; his Shoe-Buckles, Spy-Glass, Violin and Cane, his Mantel-Mirror, Pastel-Paintings, and numerous Engravings that hung on the walls at Mount Vernon.

Among the manuscripts is the Original Will of John Washington, Great-Grandfather of George Washington, dated 1675, and the only specimen of his handwriting and signature extant; General Washington's Copy of his Own Will, to every page of which he has affixed his signature.

A fine Letter of Washington's at the age of 17, as likewise a signed survey at the age of 18, and his Cash Memoranda Book at the age of 15, together with innumerable Letters, Deeds, Leases, Plans, Accounts, Checks, Receipts, etc., as well as a Prayer-Book, all in his handwriting.

Washington's Memoranda Expense Account Books during his Presidential Career, which are the only books relating to his official life that are not owned by the Government; also his Farm-Books, Store-Books and Miscellaneous Account-Books.

Portrait of Henry Clay by Samuel F. B. Morse; the rarest collection of American broadsides ever offered at public sale.

An Extraordinary and Valuable Collection of Revolutionary Letters and Documents.

An accumulation of the Rarest Nuggets in Americana, as well as a Unique Collection of Rare American Maps and Views.

Annual Catalogues, 1890.

We invite your subscription to the "Annual Catalogue" of books issued in 1890, so that it may be of use with the opening of spring and summer trade. This important "trade tool" is quite distinct from the "Trade List Annual" (which gives only short-title record for the first half of the year), since it not only includes the whole year 1890, but also gives titles in full, with descriptive notes on the greater number of books, and, because of this last feature in particular, is of permanent value. This volume also forms the first supplement to the forthcoming American Catalogue, 1884–90, now printing, since this last necessarily covers only to July 1st. In addition to this full-title entry, with descriptive notes, the "Annual Catalogue" also indexes the books by author, title, and subject, so that the bookseller can answer a customer's question, as to any book of last year, no matter how the question is asked, and contains a full directory of publishers who have issued books during the year, with street addresses, and lists of the publications of the year arranged by publishers. The price is $3.50, half leather, or $3.00 in sheets.

We have also, as usual, the American market for the "Annual English Catalogue," which will be furnished at $1.50 paper, or bound in one volume with the "Annual American Catalogue" in half leather at $5.00.

The Literary News.

THE LITERARY NEWS is a capital Dollar Magazine, which gives each month in a pleasant hour's reading a bird's-eye view of current literature.

Portraits of living authors will be given from time to time, accompanying descriptive sketches of "Authors and How They Work."

Bright articles based on new books will be finely illustrated from them.

The "Survey of Current Literature" presents the best quick view of current literature given in any periodical.

A page of humor and miscellany, usually illustrated by "comics," enlivens each number.

Every bookseller who pushes THE LITERARY NEWS, pushes his own trade also, because it is specially intended to help him sell books.

Any bookseller who takes 100 copies monthly has his own imprint-advertisement printed on front cover free. It becomes thus practically his own magazine.

Terms, One Dollar a year; Ten Cents a number.

TO THE TRADE: 100 copies monthly, with imprint, $5; 250 copies, $10; 1000 copies, $35. On single copies, mailed to subscribers from this office direct, at $1, one-third commission will be allowed.

NOTES IN SEASON.

L. PRANG & CO.'s travellers will call on the trade at once with samples of their new Christmas and New Year's publications for the season of 1891. They have had the co-operation of such artists as Ida Waugh, A. F. Tait, Sarah C. Sears, Rosina Emmet Sherwood, Louis K. and Lizzie K. Harlow, Watson, Beal and many others.

JORDAN BROTHERS, Philadelphia, announce that "Confessions of a Nun," by Sister Agatha, has gone into its fourth edition, though it was published less than three months ago. The book has been as bitterly and violently attacked as it has been highly and warmly praised. The author has already been offered ten thousand dollars from a large publishing house for a new book.

ROBERTS BROTHERS announce an edition of the Complete Prose Works of Walter Savage Landor, comprising "Citation and Examination of William Shakespeare, the Pentameron, Minor Prose Pieces and Criticisms," in one volume; "Pericles and Aspasia," in one volume; and the "Imaginary Conversations," in five volumes. This edition will be a reprint of the English edition, edited by John Forster, containing the author's last revsion.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just ready Samuel Smiles' "Memoir of John Murray, with his correspondence and an account of the origin and progress of the house, 1768–1843." According to Mr. Smalley "it is the second John Murray who is the hero of these two volumes." The whole story of his relations with Byron, Scott, Moore, Disraeli, Hallam, Lockhart, and many others, less distinguished, but still interesting men of letters, is told. The work is a contribution to the literary history of the century.

D. APPLETON & CO. will publish shortly "The Iron Game," a new novel by Henry F. Keenan, the supposed author of "The Money-Makers," and the acknowledged author of "The Aliens" and "Trajan." The time of this dramatic and intensely interesting story is the first year of the war; and Mr. Keenan, who served as a private soldier, presents some graphic sketches of scenes at Washington and Bull Run, as witnessed from the private soldier's point of view. Lincoln, Sherman and Jefferson Davis appear in the course of the narrative.

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON have just ready the first volume of "Institutes of Christian Religion," by Prof. E. V. Gerhart, of the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church, Lancaster, Pa., with an introduction by Philip Schaff. The work consists of four parts: 1, The Source of Theological Knowledge; 2, The Christ-idea the principle of Christian doctrine; 3, Theology, or, the doctrine on God; and 4, Cosmology, or the doctrine on creation and providence. The work has considerably outgrown the proportions first planned upon its announcement in 1890, but is issued at the price then fixed. A full index of subjects has been annexed.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THE Duc de Broglie declares that the Talleyrand memoirs, as published, are an exact reproduction of the four bound volumes certified by M. Bacourt and the Duchesse Talleyrand to be original, complete and faithful.

THE American [Authors'] Copyright League will celebrate the victory for international copyright by a dinner at Sherry's rooms, 5th Avenue and 37th Street, Monday, April 13, the eighth anniversary of the formation of the League.

THE Boston Pilot announces that George Parsons Lathrop, the author, and his wife, who is a daughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne, have become Roman Catholics. They were received into that Church on March 19 by the Rev. Alfred Young, of the Paulist Fathers on West Fifty-ninth Street, New York, and were confirmed by Archbishop Corrigan on March 21

IN the course of a talk on literary style before the Methodist Ministers' Association of Chicago, on March 30, the Rev. Dr. Mendenshall, of Cleveland, it is reported, announced himself to be the author of "The Breadwinners." This, it is believed, is a misunderstanding on the part of the reporter. While it may be possible that Dr. Mendenshall is the author, he is not known to the publishers (Messrs. Harper) as such, neither is he the person who was paid for the work and is receiving the royalties on it.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas, P Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); (Q. 4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.) D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fo. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Alden, Mrs. Is. M. ["Pansy," pseud.] Helen, the historian. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1891.] c. 5–76 p. il. D. cl., 50 c.

The heroine is a little child, incurably ill in a city hospital. Her days are full of acts of thoughtful kindness, and one of her greatest delights is to gather around her every Sunday morning the children of the hospital, and to tell them, in her simple way, the story of the Sunday school lesson.

Barrows, J: H: Seven lectures on the credibility of the gospel histories; with introd. by F. E. Clark, D.D. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1891.] c. 10+146 p. D. cl., 75 c.

The author is pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of Chicago. "The lectures are printed as they were delivered to audiences in which were gathered persons who are rarely seen in Christian churches." They examine the evidence in favor of the truth of the Gospels, the miracles of which they tell, and the resurrection. With the exception of the last two, the lectures have appeared in the Golden Rule.

Bayliss, Alfred. Easy lessons on the Constitution of the United States; incl. the Constitution itself, and the history of its adoption. Chic., W. W. Knowles & Co., 1891. c. 143 p. D. bds., 50 c.

Designed for use with larger reference works, and interleaved with blank pages for preservation of notes from these to be made by the pupils. The text of the Constitution is given, and a history of the movement leading to its adoption, prepared by J. H. Beadle, in 1889, for the Associated Press. The lessons consist of questions on and summaries of the text.

Bible. The Psalms: a new translation: with introd. essay and notes by J: De Witt, D.D. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1891. c. 38+325 p. O. cl., $2.

"Some of our English Psalms are nearly faultless, while others fail in bringing out the spirit and rhythm of the old Hebrew bards, or are even prosaic, awkward in expression and obscure." The basis of the present translation is "The praise songs of Israel," published in 1884, so completely rewrought, however, that it may be called a new translation. The Psalms were not only poetic in content, but also in form. Special attention has been given in this new translation to preserving the rhythmic effect of the originals as far as is compatible with faithfulness; to restoring the proper tenses; and to the recovery of lost emphasis due certain words. A critical note precedes, and textual commentary follows each Psalm. The essay considers at some length the character and authorship of the Psalms, their use in worship and the ethical significance of the imprecatory psalms. Dr. De Witt is a professor at the New Brunswick, N. J., Theological Seminary, and one of the revisers of the Old Testament.

Bruce, W. Cabell. The negro problem. Balt., Md., J: Murphy & Co., 1891. c. 83 p. O. pap., 25 c.

The author regards the negroes as an essentially degraded race, devoid of intelligence and morality; they are a perpetual menace to the whites; "there are no parties at the South but the white man's party and the black man's party; there is no issue but the race issue." No solution of the negro problem is offered, but further "intermeddling" on the part of the national government or northern reformers is opposed.

Clarke, Ja. Freeman. Autobiography, diary and correspondence; ed. by E: Everett Hale. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. c. 3+430 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

Dr. Clarke never completed his autobiography, which he began to write in 1883. It brings the story of his life down to 1840, after which his diary and letters carry it on. His home was Newton, Mass., until 1833. On leaving the Divinity School he took up missionary work in the West. In after life he was fond of referring to his adventures in Kentucky. In 1840 he returned East; a year later he became pastor of the Church of the Disciples in Boston, over which he continued until his death in 1888. Dr. Hale has supplied missing links and written a chapter on the character of the man. A list of Dr. Clarke's writings, including those which appeared in periodicals and pamphlet form, is given. Among the letters given are several written to Emerson, the Channings, Margaret Fuller and other distinguished writers.

Conklin, Mrs. Nathaniel, [formerly Jennie M. Drinkwater.] Second best. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, [1891.] c. 2+323 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The father of Rachel Ennis was suddenly stricken with blindness, and it became necessary for her to exchange her luxurious home for a life of privation in the country. In alluding to his daughter's hardships Mr. Ennis regrets that the "Second best" has always been her last. The scene is New England. The story tells how the ministrations and self-sacrifice of a young girl brought others to a realization of their deficiencies of character.

Crooker, Jos. H: Different New Testament views of Jesus. Bost., American Unitarian Assoc., 1891. c. 80 p. T. pap., 15 c.

Reprinted from The Unitarian, April–July, 1890. The author finds an argument against the existence of a divine nature in Christ, in the fact that the writers of the New Testament have different conceptions of his person. That the historical development of Christianity, even in its first centuries, shows divergent tendencies and changes, proves, he thinks, that the Christian religion is "essentially human."

On the proper reading of the first chapters of Genesis. The author holds that "Adam" and "The Adam" are distinct terms, the latter denoting a man who was the direct progenitor of the Hebrew race, all of whose descendants, save Noah and his family, were destroyed in the Deluge. The descendants of "Adam" were not so destroyed.

(Johns Hopkins Univ. studies, 9th ser., nos. 3–4.) pap., 50 c.

Mr. Steiner's paper deals with collegiate education in Md., exclusive of Johns Hopkins. No collegiate institution was founded until after the Revolution. The history of extinct colleges and Roman Catholic institutions is given. President Gilman gives the history of Johns Hopkins from 1876-91, including his own inaugural address as first president, and the address of President Eliot at the "Inaugural assembly." The substance of the addresses on "University extension" delivered before Johns Hopkins and other university audiences, by R: G. Moulton, of Cambridge (Eng.) University, concludes the publication.

Strong, H: A., comp. Graded studies for the Sunday-school: with introd. by Jesse L. Hurlburt, D.D. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1891. c. 7 v. T. pap., ea., 5 c.

Talmage, T. De Witt. From manger to throne: embracing a new life of Jesus, the Christ, and a history of Palestine and its people; incl. Dr. Talmage's account of his journey to, through and from the Christland. Phil., Historical Pub. Co., [1891.] 2+652 p. il. Q. subs., cl., $3.75; ed. de luxe, levant mor., $10.

Dr. Talmage agrees with Rénan in declaring that a wonderful harmony exists between the Evangelical picture and the country which serves as its frame. His "Life of Christ" was partly written in Palestine, and includes much relating to the general life of the inhabitants, their customs and physical environment. An account of his travels precedes the sacred narrative. The book is copiously illustrated by wood-cuts of Syrian scenery and paintings of old and new masters, and there is a reproduction, in colors, of the Munich cyclorama, "Jerusalem on the day of the crucifixion."

Mary Smith, who, despite her prosaic name, is a romantically pretty girl, inherits a fortune on condition of living in a certain old house connected with a distillery. Her school-friend, Georgie Oliver, visits her, and discovers that some person or persons are plotting to drive her friend insane by frightening her with cruel tricks. Georgie begins investigations which finally lead to the discovery of the guilty persons.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ATCHINSON, KAN.—Downs & Keating, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA.—According to the Chicago Stationer and Printer, Cooper & Hill, booksellers and stationers, made an assignment Feb. 22. Their liabilities are about $6000 and assets estimated from $4000 to $6000.

MARIETTA, O.—E. R. Alderman & Sons, proprietors of the Marietta Bookstore, and also of the Marietta Register, weekly and tri-weekly paper, gave a banquet on the evening of the 12th inst., at the Hotel Brunswick, to their employees, celebrating their third year of business since the great fire of March 13, 1888, which destroyed their entire plant. This was the first occasion on which the employers met face to face all of their employees, about twenty-four in number, at the same time. Resolutions were offered by the employees, thanking the firm for past kindnesses, and pledging themselves to more faithful performance of duty.

NEWARK, N. J.—"The sale of the Riley-Osborn Company's property was effected on March 7, by Receiver J. Frank Fort, and the sale has received the sanction of Chancellor McGill. The buyer was Samuel Klotz," says the American Stationer, "and it is believed he will be the President of a new company to continue the manufacture of fancy brass goods. His original offer was $55,000. It was raised $1000 by a bid of J. B. Mayo, and Mr. Klotz saw him and raised him $1000. Mr. Mayo dropped out and Mr. Klotz took the property for $57,000."

PORTLAND, ORE.—J. Keatting, bookseller and stationer, has sold out.

TOPEKA, KAN.—H. L. Bunnell is selling out his stock of books.

WACO, TEX.—William P. Glenn, bookseller and stationer, is advertising to sell out.

YAZOO CITY, MISS.—W. H. Stubblefield & Son, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 4, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

"THE WEAK SIDE OF BOOKSELLERS."

WE note with satisfaction the effort of our friend, The Newsman, to point out to the booksellers the error of their ways. With a disinterestedness that almost bordered on recklessness, our contemporary last month actually left his fold unguarded for the space of about 7½ inches of leaded long primer type, in order that he might take time to point his finger at "the weak side of booksellers." He calls attention in his issue of March to the fact that "it is nearly ten years since New York booksellers met to take formal action on trade abuses." We regret to confess that it is nearer sixteen years ago, friend Newsman.

"Every other class of merchants," the Newsman truly continues, "are banded together. The question of the utility of union is no longer in dispute. That point has been settled long since. The banding together of class interests means progress and co-operation that solidifies and strengthens the unit body. The individual is sunk, but the power for organized action is increased in ratio with the force that moves the organized body.

"There is much ado about American push and enterprise. We point to slow-moving European methods, but sometimes facts are against us, as, for instance, the thorough and complete affiliation of the German booksellers. The following notice, taken from the Export Journal of Leipzig, Germany, will give our conservative brethren a shock:

"'A Booksellers' School is now being opened in Prague under the auspices of the Booksellers' Union in that town. Every member of the Union binds himself to let his apprentices and assistants attend the school, which is held twice a week from 7 to 9 in the evening. The course of instruction lasts three months and includes arithmetic, correspondence, bookkeeping, the law of bills of exchange and the law relating to the book trade. The instruction is given alternately in Czech and German. At the conclusion of the course certificates will be awarded.'

"The wood-choppers and dry-goods store pharisees, who only know a book by its title and cover, would have to take a back seat, if such action as the above was taken by the legitimate booksellers of this and other cities in our country. Will the American bookseller put on his thinking-cap for a short while, and figure out the advantages that would accrue from united action, guided by a purpose at once unselfish, liberal and progressive? As an individual in the commercial world, you count for nothing; but as an atom in a large body, you count for everything. Organize."

Does our esteemed contemporary catch the drift of the argument of the languid, hyperæsthetic, preraphaelite order of genius, that "true greatness can only be achieved through much suffering"? That is what is the matter with the book trade to-day. It has suffered, true; but it has not suffered nearly enough to realize its greatest needs, and to maintain that perfect union which gives strength.

The American Book Trade Association is still in existence, in so far that it never was formally disbanded. The season in which it was organized was inimical to work and growth. The enervating heat of the summer of 1876, and the general demoralization brought on by the excitement over the Centennial Exposition, were in themselves obstacles great enough to impede progress. But the greatest obstacle of all was the lack of co-operation on the part of the membership.

The times were not then ripe for such an organization. Jealousy and lack of confidence in one another attended every movement, and a short-sighted policy finally prevailed. From the Centennial year the book trade dates its hardest times. When his measure of misery is full and overruns, but not before, the bookseller will take means to protect himself, and will make common cause with his neighbor against the evils which beset them—if the experience of past ages teaches us any truth at all. When that time comes, the A. B. T. A., like Barbarossa, may be awakened from its long sleep and gird its loins for the fight which must end in victory.

In the meantime we agree with the Newsman that the book trade get together and have a talk. Talk leads to something in the long run, and the discussion of grievances may bring about a suggestion of remedies.

A SOCIETY of American Authors, for the purpose of maintaining, defining and defending literary property and the promotion of international and domestic copyright, was formed at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, March 30. Dr. Richard Clarke was made President, Katherine Hodges Secretary and Caroline Le Roy Treasurer. Vice-Presidents from every State will be chosen. Ella Wilcox, Kate Field and Lillie Blake were among those present.

STEAMING WINDOWS.

THE subject of "steaming windows" came up for discussion in a late issue of the Publishers' Circular and the following are some of the remedies suggested :

"I believe that if the window is coated with a preparation consisting of three parts methylated spirits and two parts glycerine there will be no condensation, but I have had no occasion to give it a trial. My windows have always been air-tight, and we keep them carefully closed. On a very cold day, if the shop is very warm, we only open them very occasionally, and shut them again almost directly."

"A remedy I found out ten years ago, and I have never found it to fail: 1st, Don't put gas-lights into your windows. 2d. Put a ventilator as near the ceiling as you can get it, so as to let out the heat. 3d. Keep your door open and let the heat out and your customers in, and show the public that you do not only want them to look into your clean bright windows, but that you invite them inside of your bright and cheerful shop."

COMMUNICATIONS.

ABUSE OF COPYRIGHT-REGISTRY.

PHILADELPHIA, March 25, 1891.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

DEAR SIR: On March 2 we addressed a letter to A. R. Spofford, Librarian of Congress, in reference to the gross violation of the intents and purposes of the copyright laws by certain unscrupulous publishers who have recently reprinted old books under new titles and foisted them upon an unsuspecting public as late publications. We inquired by what right a publisher could change the title of a work printed forty years since, reprint it with a new title, and claim copyright on the same. We inquired further whether the United States Government lent its aid to the furtherance of such unlawful practices. Mr. Spofford replied as follows: "I have to advise you that no question concerning the validity of a copyright can be determined under our laws by any other authority than a United States Court. This office has no discretion or authority to refuse any application for a copyright coming within the provisions of the law. . . . It is made the legal duty of the undersigned to record every copyright claim in the order of receipt without regard to originality and even without reference to evidence of ownership. Thus many fraudulent or deceptive titles to publications are entered like those you refer to. It is surprising that authors and publishers do not combine to secure such amendments of the law (through the committees of Congress) as would introduce greater certainty into valid claims to copyright property and defeat dishonest practices on the part of pseudo-claimants of copyright."

It can readily be gathered from Mr. Spofford's letter that there is much need for reforming the present loose system of granting such an important privilege as the copyright laws bestow. No publisher should be permitted to issue an old book under a new title, or copyright an old book and issue it under a pretence of its being a recent publication. All applicants for copyright should receive a question blank in which the fullest information should be given respecting the work they intend issuing. Very respectfully,

JORDAN BROS.

OBITUARY.

DR. HOWARD CROSBY, instructor, clergyman and author, died March 29, aged sixty-five years. He was of Knickerbocker descent, and born in New York City, February 27, 1826. At the age of fourteen he entered the University of the City of New York, of which his father had been one of the founders. After he was graduated he went to Dutchess County, and worked on a farm for three years. In 1851 he became Professor of Greek at his Alma Mater, and remained there in that capacity until 1859, when he left to take a similar chair at Rutgers. Two years after his removal to Rutgers he became pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Brunswick, N. J., adding his duties as a pastor to those of a professor. In 1863 Dr. Crosby resigned his professorship and came to New York to become pastor of the Fourth Avenue Presbyterian Church, which is now hardly known by any other name than "Dr. Crosby's Church," where he remained until the time of his death. From 1870 to 1881, Dr. Crosby acted as Chancellor of the University of New York, and has been a member of its Council since 1864. In the year 1877 Dr. Crosby helped to organize the Society for the Prevention of Crime, of which he was the President from the first. Among his published books are the following: "Lands of the Moslem" (1850), "Œdipus Tyrannus" (1851), "Notes on the New Testament" (1863), "Social Hints to Young Christians" (1867), "Bible Manual" (1869), "Jesus—his life and work, as narrated by the four Evangelists" (1870), "Healthy Christians" (1872), "Thoughts on the Decalogue" (1874), "The Christian Preacher," the Yale lectures for 1869–'80, "True Humanity of Christ" (1881), "A Commentary on the New Testiment" (1885), "Bible Views of the Jewish Church" (1888), "The Seven Churches of Asia, or, worldliness in the Church" (1880), "Book of Nehemiah" and "Notes on Joshua."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Scribner's Magazine has published a "folder" containing twenty questions (with answers) about steamships, suggested by its articles on Ocean Steamships, beginning in the April issue. It is similar to the one "About Railways," published last year.

The Newsdealers' and Publishers' Bulletin is the title of a new monthly journal devoted to the interests of "all engaged in the production and sale of periodicals." The first issue is dated March, and contains 24 pages, 9 x 12 inches in size, nearly all advertising matter, presenting from this point a more prosperous appearance than its older rivals. The office of publication is 31 Beekman Street, New York.

The Magazine of New England History is made up of original and selected articles relating to New England local and family history; notes and queries, book notes; and announcements of local and family histories in preparation. The editor and publisher is R. H. Tilley, of Newport, Long Island, who respectfully invites all interested to furnish for publication articles and items relating to New England local, family and church history. The magazine is a quarterly.

THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS COMPANY will receive subscriptions for The Ladder, a review of public affairs, literature, science and art, published by Marshall Brothers, London. The editor is Mr. David Balsillio, and some of the best English papers acknowledge that the paper has marks of intelligence, wide-awakeness and all-round capability. Taken as a whole it is well up to date and contains a mass of sound good reading, specially appealing to those in earnest about self-culture.

THE TEACHERS' CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO., Cincinnati, Ohio, have begun to issue in monthly parts The Library of Education. Every number will contain from 48 to 96 double-column pages, and the volume for the year is intended to make a complete cyclopædia of education. The subjects of the volumes thus far planned include Principles in teaching, Literature in the public schools, Civics, Arithmetic, Geology, Morals in public schools, Educational history, Management of country schools, and The schools of Philadelphia.

The Modern Cemetery is the title of a new monthly publication, the first number of which will be issued at once by R. J. Haight, 243 State St., Chicago. Its object, as may be surmised from its name, is the dissemination of modern ideas in cemetery management. The March number will contain, among other interesting matter, the following articles: "Modern Cemeteries," from the writings of Adolph Strauch, the father of the lawn plan in cemeteries; the first of a series of articles on "Preliminary Work in Laying Out Cemeteries;" "Cemeteries from a Sanitary Point of View;" "Suggestions to Cemetery Lot Owners;" "Wearing Hats at Funerals," etc.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

THE BOSTON BOOK CO., 15½ Beacon St., Boston, has published four catalogues of periodicals in numbers and in sets, which they offer for sale. The lists include a number of scarce periodicals which are not frequently met with in booksellers' catalogues, and dealers interested will therefore do well to send for the lists, which, by the way, are models of what such catalogues ought to be —concise and neat. (Nos. 1-4, 8°.)

MR. MAX COHEN, librarian of the Maimonides Library, 203 East Fifty-seventh Street, N. Y., has prepared a catalogue of the books in the library which he thinks will prove attractive to girls from fourteen to eighteen years of age. He has made it a point to select those most congenial to a girl's tastes, which at the same time will stimulate their thinking, and be conducive to mental growth. (8 p., 24°.)

Catalogues of New and Second-hand Books.—U. P. James, (Davis L. James), 131 W. 7th St., Cincinnati, O., chiefly history and belles-lettres. (No. 37, 16 p. 8°.)—Max Kantorowicz, Via Allesandro Manzoni, 5, Milan, Miscellaneous, comprising a large collection of historical and architectural works. (780 titles.)—Luzac & Co., 46 Gt. Russell St., London, Oriental list, Feb., 1891. (V. 2, No. 2, 16 p. 16°.)—Henry Stevens & Son, 39 Gt. Russell St., London, Americana. (No. 23, 16 p. 16°.)

"TRIFLES LIGHT AS AIR" are sometimes "confirmations strong as proof of Holy Writ." The N. Y. World says that "it is easier for a man in Chicago to pay $14,000 for a Bible than for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle."

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

MR. GIBBINGS, London, will shortly publish, in a limited edition, "The Memoirs of Lady Hamilton," edited and annotated by Mr. W. H. Long, with portraits of Sir William Hamilton, Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson.

HEINEMANN, of London, announces a new volume dealing with the much-discussed Marie Bashkirtseff, entitled "The Social Life of Marie Bashkirtseff, being extracts from her letters and journals, illustrated with drawings and studies."

THE Montesquieu manuscripts, soon to be published by his descendants, are eagerly awaited in France. Two of the papers, an essay on "Universal Monarchy" and one on "Reputation," were recently read before the French Academy of Moral and Political Sciences.

IMRIE & GRAHAM, 26 Colborne St., Toronto, Ontario, will publish early next month a volume entitled "Poems, Grave and Gay," by Mr. Albert E. S. Smythe. The book will consist of a selection from his contributions to various publications in England, Ireland, Scotland, the United States and Canada, and will extend to about 200 pages.

HOWARD REDWOOD GUILD, of Providence, R. I., has written and just published a genealogical work entitled "Ancestry of Calvin Guild, Margaret Taft, James Humphreys and Rebecca Covell Martin." Among the other related families are the Cushmans, Allertons and Howlands of "Mayflower" stock; the Drapers, Whitings, Wares, Metcalfs, Brownes and others prominent in the early history of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island colonies, including in all over one hundred surnames.

JULIUS BIEN & CO., New York City, announce that they will publish an "Atlas of the State of New York," "provided sufficient encouragement is secured to warrant so costly an undertaking." Among the proposed features of the work are these: A general map of the State, exhibiting county and town boundaries, etc., railroads, canals and all important cities and towns; temperature and rainfall maps; detailed maps of the counties, sixty in number, showing public roads, rivers, lakes, city and township boundaries, etc.; railroad lines and stations; street maps, on a large scale, of the principal cities; lines of original land patents; an alphabetical list of counties, townships, cities and villages, with population from last census, and an enumeration of all post-offices.

T. FISHER UNWIN has nearly completed preparations for a "History of the Press." The volumes will deal in the first place with the British press, and afterwards with the Continental press and the American. In each case the history of the great journals will be treated in connection equally with the political and social events they have influenced and the characters and methods of the men who have directed them to these ends. In a few instances a single journal has played a sufficiently conspicuous and important part to furnish abundant materials for a single volume, but in others the general characteristics of a section of the press will combine many newspapers and personalities into one work. The first volume will be devoted to the Times, and others have been arranged to treat of "The Provincial Press," "The French Press," "The German Press," "The American Press," and "The Comic Press." The volumes will be issued under the general editorship of Mr. Henry Norman.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers as a guarantee of good faith.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis, will find it to their advantage to put after their firm name the word [Cash].

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS NEW BOOKS

A GREAT LITERARY WORK.

Memoir of John Murray,

With his Correspondence and an Account of the Origin and Progress of the House, 1768–1843.
With Portraits.

By SAMUEL SMILES.

2 VOLS., LARGE 8vo, WITH OVER 1000 PAGES, $9.00.

From G. W. Smalley's Despatch to N. Y. Tribune.

"It is the second John Murray who is the hero of these two volumes. The whole story of his relations with Byron, Scott, Moore, Disraeli, Hallam, Lockhart, and many less distinguished, but still interesting men of letters, is told. It is a contribution to the literary history of the century."

From Harold Frederic's Despatch to N. Y. Times.

"One of the most valuable and entertaining contributions to English literary history in many years. No other posthumous work of our time affords such keenly drawn and intelligent pictures of a galaxy of great writers and striking personalities."

PRESS NOTICES.

"There is an air of verity in this strange narrative that is as fascinating as a romance, and yet there is no appearance of its being a work of fiction. The pictures of the inner life of a convent are novel and well drawn, by one who has evidently 'been there.' The book is not written in a sensational style, but it has already made a sensation, the demand for it being extraordinary."—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Artistic Homes

In City and Country, with other examples of Domestic Architecture. By Albert W. Fuller and Wm. Arthur Wheeler, Architects.

Fifth Revised Edition, with 70 full-page illustrations from original drawings and photographs. One volume oblong quarto, $6.00.

This work, so well and favorably known, is practically a new work as now reissued, enlarged, and in every way improved. The authors say concerning their work:

"The fourth edition of 'Artistic Homes' being now exhausted, and the demand for the work continuing, the authors are led to publish this, the fifth revised edition. In the preparation of it they have endeavored to alter and improve the whole work so as to make it, as far as possible, representative of the latest phases of American Domestic Architecture. With this object in view, they have discarded many of the older illustrations and have replaced them by ones of later work, adding at the same time a few miscellaneous examples of other buildings recently designed by them in the line of Domestic Work.

"To keep abreast of the tide of improvement, to aid those about to build to secure what is best and most desirable, to show them how use, beauty and economy may be combined, are the aims of the authors. They venture to hope that their book will be found quite as interesting, if not more so, than heretofore."

A FAMOUS WORK.

The Memoirs of Talleyrand.

Edited with preface and copious explanatory notes, by the DUC DE BROGLIE. Translated by Raphaël Ledos de Beaufort. With introduction by the Hon. Whitelaw Reid. The work is to be completed in five volumes. VOLUMES I. AND II. NOW READY. Octavo, with portraits and fac-similes of manuscript. Each, $2.50.

Contents: Volume I.—Part I. The Years Preceding the Revolution, 1754–1791—Part II. The Duc d'Orleans—Part III. The Convention; The Directory; The Consulate; The Early Years of the Empire, 1791–1808—Part IV. Spanish Affairs, 1807—Part V. The Erfurt Interview, 1808.

Volume II.—Part VI. Napoleon's Marriage; His Brothers; His Struggle with Pius VII., 1809–1813—Part VII. The Fall of the Empire; The Restoration, 1813–1814—Part VIII. Congress of Vienna, 1814–1815.

"They are the most valuable contribution made in our time to the history of the new France and the new Europe which had their birth in the Revolution."—N. Y. World.

"The Memoirs of Talleyrand are both interesting and valuable. . . . The chief charm of the first portion of the Memoirs lies in the acute and quite elaborate analysis by Talleyrand of those elements in French society previous to the Revolution which, in his opinion, made the Revolution possible. It is impressive, brilliant and once read not easily forgotten. . . . The accuracy and fidelity of this copy of the Memoirs have been disputed. But we see no good reason for doubting them. They are vouched for in the most formal manner by the present editor and by M. de Bacourt, the immediate custodian of the manuscripts, named by Talleyrand himself."—N. Y. Times.

The concluding volumes will follow at brief intervals.

The Vikings in Western Christendom. A.D. 789–888. By CHARLES F. KEARY, author of "Outlines of Primitive Belief," "The Dawn of History," etc. 8vo, cloth extra, with map, $2.50.

"It presents an unfamiliar side of the history of Europe during the eighth and ninth centuries, and helps one to form some idea of the ethnic proportions in the present race which calls itself Anglo-Saxon, to the exclusion of the later-coming swarms of Danes and Norsemen. It is a needed work and one well done."—N. Y. Times.

Christmas and New Year Publications,

SEASON 1890-1891.

NEW CARDS, NEW CALENDARS, NEW BOOKS,
NEW NOVELTIES in PAPER and SATIN, NEW PICTURES,
NEW STUDIES, NEW STYLES, NEW ARTISTS.

Our travellers are about to start on their Spring trip with samples of our coming holiday publications. Our line of this year is an exceptionally strong one, and contains more fresh features than that of any former years. Being all designed, painted, lithographed, printed and made up in this country, it is as heretofore the before the public, and our dealers will do well to await our samples before placing their orders.

The increased sale of cards last Christmas was a contradiction to the assertion that cards are going out, and hence we have turned our attention anew to that part of our line, and have added to it new attractions by new artists.

The number and variety of our Calendars is very large.

NEW CHRISTMAS PICTURES.

Great efforts are made by us to get out new pictures which shall be at once popular in subject and artistic in composition and execution. Among others we show several new ones by IDA WAUGH, and another chicken picture by A. F. TAIT, called "Take Care."

Two humorous pictures, "The Prize Piggies" and "Age 4 Weeks" are bound to be very popular. Others are:

A classic head, called "Roma," by SARAH CHOATE SEARS; "Phyllis," by ROSINA EMMET SHERWOOD; new landscapes by HARLOW; a beautiful new Rose Panel, and a pair of Children's Heads in Monochrome.

NEW ART-BOOKS.

Two vols. 8vo, cloth, gilt top, in box, - $3.00
Also plain edition without gilt tops, - - - 2.50

LIBERAL DISCOUNT TO THE TRADE.

This great work has now been on the market for some time and has enjoyed a wide popularity notwithstanding the high price demanded, $6.00 net per set; but this large sale has not benefited the bookseller, for the New York publishers have sold the work at so small a discount as to leave no margin above the cost of handling. To meet the great demand for a cheaper edition of

we have issued the work at half the former price and in a superior style. Our edition contains everything written by James Bryce, and in addition has the following, which are not contained in the other edition:

1. Fourteen pages of tables of the census of 1890.
2. An able and scholarly article on the fundamental differences between the great political parties.
3. Ten tables illustrating in certain matters the extent of governmental interference in Great Britain and the United States.

Beside containing more matter than the other edition, our set is more handsomely and substantially bound, the volumes are larger, being 8vo, instead of 12mo.

This is the only edition printed in this country, and therefore the only edition which can be supplied promptly in considerable quantities.

NOTES IN SEASON.

BANGS & CO. will begin their regular Spring Parcel Sale on May 5. Invoices should reach them at the latest on the 18th inst.

LITTLE, BROWN & CO. have in preparation "A Woman of Shawmut," by Edmund James Carpenter, of the editorial staff of the Boston Daily Advertiser. It depicts life in the good old colonial times when Bellingham was Governor.

HARPER & BROS. have just issued a Popular Edition of "The Journal of Sir Walter Scott," in one volume, and a volume of "Recollections of President Lincoln and His Administration," by L. E. Chittenden, Register of the Treasury during Mr. Lincoln's administration.

D. VAN NOSTRAND CO. have just issued "The Elements of Dynamic Electricity," by Philip Atkinson; "First Principles of Electrical Engineering," by C. H. W. Biggs; "A Treatise on Fuel," by Archer V. Abbott, in the Van Nostrand Science Series, and second editions of Dugald Clarke's "Theory of the Gas Engine," and of "Foundations," translated from the French of Jules Gaudard, by L. F. Vernon Harcourt.

ROBERTS BROTHERS will publish, April 15, George Meredith's novel, "One of Our Conquerors;" Balzac's "Ursula," another of Miss Wormeley's artistic translations; "The Professor's Letters," by Theophilus Parsons, with portrait of the author; and "The Peerless Cook-Book," a compact and practical collection of advice for the kitchen by Mrs. D. A. Lincoln, already well known through her "Boston Cook-Book," "Carving and Serving," etc.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have in press for immediate publication a timely volume which deals with a question that is now agitating the religious world, "Church Union." The book is by the rector of Grace Church, New York, Dr. W. R. Huntington, and the title is "Peace of the Church." The author discusses thoroughly the practical methods of union, the relation of modern Biblical criticism to the question; the subject of creeds, etc. They have just issued an edition of an important English work entitled "London, Past and Present: its history, associations and traditions," by Henry B. Wheatley. It is in three volumes, is arranged alphabetically for convenience in reference, and contains exhaustive and painstaking accounts of the various public buildings, institutions and interesting localities of London.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. will publish a large batch of books on the 18th. Among these perhaps the one most likely to create discussion is by Dr. Washington Gladden, who entitles his book "Who Wrote the Bible?" In it he has given the results of the wisest historical and literary criticism with regard to the authorship of the various books of the Bible. The book is written with great reverence and candor, and will doubtless answer a great many questions which multitudes are asking with regard to the Bible. In the series of American Religious Leaders will appear the "Life of Charles G. Finney," the distinguished President of Oberlin College, by Prof. G. F. Wright, now a member of the Theological Seminary of that institution; Mr. Story, the eminent sculptor and author, has collected various essays relating to literature and art and names his inviting little book "Excursions in Art and Letters;" the Atlantic papers, by Percival Lowell, on "Noto, an Unexplored Corner of Japan," are gathered into a very tasteful little volume, which will be specially welcome as treating of a corner of the world which is as yet generally unknown; the first volume of a "Journal of American Ethnology and Archæology," edited by Prof. J. Walter Fewkes, contains descriptions of "A Few Summer Ceremonials at Zuñi Pueblo," by him, "Zuñi Melodies," by Mr. Benj. I. Gilman, and an account of an "Archæological Reconnaissance of Ruins near Zuñi;" Prof. J. Henry Thayer, of Harvard Divinity School, publishes, both in cloth and paper, an address recently given by him before the Biblical Institute in Boston, on the "Change of Attitude Toward the Bible;" and the "Satchel Guide," which for many years has been regarded as one of the best guide-books for the vacation tourist in Europe, has been revised for 1891. In the Riverside Paper Series for this month appears Mrs. Rose Terry Cooke's remarkably good New England story, "Steadfast."

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyright; the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; M: Michael; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); (Q. 4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); TT. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fa. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., oblong, nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Adeline, Jules. Adeline's art dictionary: a complete index of all terms used in art, architecture, heraldry and archæology; from the French. Authorized and enl. ed. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. 5+422 p. il. O. cl., $2.25.

While nothing that has made Jules Adeline's Lexique des termes d'art so excellent an authority has been omitted, a large amount of information has been incorporated from F. W. Fairholt's "Dictionary of terms in art." These authorities have been thoroughly revised and brought up to date by an expert who has spent some years over the task. "The plan includes all such terms as are generally employed in painting, sculpture, engraving and architecture, whether descriptive of real objects, or the principles of action which rule the mind and guide the hand of the artists. It thus comprises the æsthetics of art, as well as their practical results." Arranged on the dictionary plan; copiously illustrated.

Alger, Horatio, jr. Dean Dunham; or, the Waterford mystery. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 3-275 p. S. (Leather-clad tales, no. 32.) pap., 25 c.

Farmer Dunham is robbed of a thousand dollars, and recognizes the thief; but his family believe him crazed, and he lacks evidence to convict the man of the crime. His nephew, Dean, recovers the money, and the enterprising robber is allowed to pursue his lucrative business uninjured.

Annual American catalogue, 1890: being the full titles, with descriptive notes, of all books recorded in the Publishers' Weekly, 1890, with author, title, and subject index, publishers' annual lists, and directory of publishers. [First supplement to the American Catalogue, 1884-90.] N. Y., Office of the Publishers' Weekly, 1891. c. 18+184 +136 p. O. hf. leath., $3.50.

Artistic homes in city and country: with other examples of domestic architecture by Albert W. Fuller and W: Arthur Wheeler, architects. 5th rev. ed. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1891. 70 il. obl. 4°, cl., $6.

Atkinson, Philip. The elements of dynamic electricity and magnetism. N. Y., D. Van Nostrand Co., 1891. c. 12+405 p. il. D. cl., $2.

Written for learners rather than for the learned, the mathematical reasoning being reduced as far as possible to ordinary language. Persons employed in electric industries, who have slight knowledge of mathematical books, educated persons desiring to extend their knowledge of electric principles, but without the time to follow elaborate treatises, and students intending to become electrical engineers, will all find this volume answering their needs. Each chapter is intended to be a complete treatise on the subject to which it relates. The subjects are: The voltaic battery—definitions; One-fluid cells; Two-fluid cells, battery formation; Magnetism; Electromagnetism; Electric measurement; The dynamo and motor; Electrolysis; Electric storage; The relations of electricity to heat and to light; The electric telegraph; and The telephone.

Berkeley, (pseud.) Round games with cards: a practical treatise on all the most popular games, with their different variations, and hints for their practice. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., 1891. 112 p. S. bds., 50 c.

Bible. Cambridge Bible for schools and colleges: The Book of Psalms; with introd. and notes by the Rev. N. F. Kirkpatrick. Bk. 1, Psalms i.-xli. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 79+227 p. 16°, cl., 90 c.

Bible. New Testament. The interwoven gospels, and gospel harmony: the four histories of Jesus Christ blended into a continuous narrative in the words of the gospels; comp. by Rev. W: Pittenger. N. Y., J: B. Alden, 1891. 12°, maps, cl., 50 c.

Birkmire, W: H. Architectural iron and steel, and its application in the construction of buildings. N. Y., J: Wiley & Sons, 1891. c. 14+201 p. 8°, cl., $3.50.

Bogusławski, A. v. Tactical deductions from the war of 1870-71; from the German by Lumley Graham. Leavenworth, Kan., G: A. Spooner, 1891. 202 p. O. (Spooner's military lib., v. 1, no. 1.) cl., $1.75; pap., $1.

"The principal task which I have undertaken is to describe the peculiarities to be noticed in the late battles (between Germany and France), in which, for the first time, the infantry of both armies used a breechloader, and hence to draw conclusions for the tactics of the present day."—Author's Preface.

Booth, Ballington. From ocean to ocean; or, the Salvation Army's march from the Atlantic to the Pacific. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, [1891.] c. 3-186 p. D. (Peerless ser., no. 36.) cl., $1; pap., 25 c.

Describes "Darkest America" and the work of the Salvation Army in 1890; the visit of the Hindoo division of the "Army;" the death of Mrs. Booth; the "interstate congress," and the reception of "In darkest England." Statistics and balance-sheets of expenditures and receipts are given.

Booth, Mrs. Otto, ["Rita," pseud.] Countess Daphne. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 319 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1772.) pap., 20 c.

Booth, Mrs. Otto, ["Rita," pseud.] My Lord Conceit: a novel. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 349 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1778.) pap., 20 c.

Bourget, Paul. Love's cruel enigma (Cruelle enigme); tr., without abridgment, from the 18th French ed., by Julian Cray. N. Y. and St. Louis, The Waverly Co., [1891.] c. tr. 189 p. D. pap., 50 c.

A detailed analysis of love, physical, intellectual and spiritual. The hero has been educated by his grandmother and mother, and watched and idolized until the age of twenty-two. The dissertation on the love of these two women for their boy is full of fine shades of feeling. The "cruel enigma" is the small return generally given for the most self-sacrificing love. Bourget is a trained critic and a pessimist. A novel of French society of to-day.

 In this list, the titles generally are verbatim transcriptions (according to the rule of the American Library Association) from books received.* Books not received are indicated by a prefixed asterisk, and this office cannot be held responsible for the correctness of their record.*

Foutell, L: H: Alexander Hamilton, the constructive statesman. Chic., privately printed, [A. C. McClurg & Co.,] 1890 [1891.] c. 4-66 p. D. cl., 50 c.

An essay whose object is "to call attention to the work of Hamilton in establishing a national republic." The writer thinks "the brilliant success of his [Hamilton's] financial measures blinded men to his greater work as a constructive statesman."

Calvert, F. Xavier. A modern Rosalind: a story. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1891. c. 251 p. D. (Rialto ser., no. 34.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

With a fixed purpose Louise Parrish acts after the manner of Rosalind and dons male attire, and to further the success of this experiment becomes a student at Harvard. On this escapade is founded a novel with every-day scenes, unusual incident, unconventional characters, some plot and a tragic ending.

Cameron, V. Lovett, ed. The log of a Jack tar; or, the life of James Choyce, master mariner: [also] O'Brien's captivity in France: with introd. and notes. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 14+379 p. il. 12°, cl., $1.50.

Carlyle, T: Critical and miscellaneous essays. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 169 p. D. (Lovell's literature ser., no. 68.) pap., 20 c.

Contents: Dr. Francia; An election to the long parliament; Two hundred and fifty years ago; The opera; Project of a national exhibition of Scottish portraits; The prinzenraub.

Carpenter, E: Civilization: its cause and cure, and other essays. N. Y., The Humboldt Pub. Co., [1891.] 65 p. O. (Humboldt lib. of science, no. 144.) pap., 15 c.

Casati, Gaetano. Ten years in Equatoria and the return with Emin Pasha; from the original Italian manuscript, by Mrs. J. Randolph Clay, assisted by I. Walter Savage Landor. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1891. c. 2 v., 21+376; 15+347 p. por. maps, il. O. cl., $10.

Major Casati is both explorer and scientist. In 1872 Gessi Pasha, one of Gordon's ablest lieutenants, wrote for assistance while engaged in quelling a Soudanese rebellion under Solyman. Casati resigned his commission in the Italian army and offered his services. From that day to the end of 1889 he remained in Equatoria, often in peril of his life without an escort and without means. His description of the rise of Mahdism and of the fall of Khartoum gives the true narrative of Gordon's pathetic death. A large part of the ten years was spent in Emin Pasha's company, assisting him with the flora and fauna. Another view is given of the Stanley-Emin controversy. There are upwards of 150 illustrations and maps printed in colors, tints and black-and-white, the majority taken from photographs and from the author's sketches by H. Boden. Many of these have scientific interest.

Chittenden, L. E. Recollections of President Lincoln and his administration. N. Y., Harper, 1891. c. 7+470 p. por. O. cl., $2.50.

Mr. Chittenden, in dedicating his work to Robert T. Lincoln, says, "This volume has grown out of my love and respect for Abraham Lincoln." It is a remarkable collection of anecdotes and episodes of historical import, having mostly for their hero the martyred President. The volume covers the period from 1860 to 1864. Mr. Chittenden was Register of the Treasury during Mr. Lincoln's administration, and is the last surviving officer of the Treasury, above the grade of a clerk, connected with the issue of securities during the war. One of the writer's reminiscences of "making ten millions of United States bonds under pressure," published in Harper's Magazine of May, 1890 (and included in this volume), first called public attention to the novelty and value of Mr. Chittenden's note-books kept during his term in office.

Church, R. W. Oxford movement, twelve years? 1833-1845. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 13+358 p. 8°, cl., $3.50.

Clifford, W: Kingdon. Body and mind, and other esssays. N. Y., The Humboldt Pub. Co., [1891.] 47 p. O. (Humboldt lib. of science, no. 145.) pap., 15 c.

Cook, M. B. Japan: a sailor's visit. N. Y., J: B. Alden, 1891. 12°, cl., 50 c.

Cope, E: D. Alfred Russel Wallace. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. c. 17 p. por. D. (Evolution ser., no. 1.) pap., 10 c.

The first of a series of lectures and discussions before the Brooklyn Ethical Assoc. Considers the life and work and personality of Alfred R. Wallace, a noted evolutionist.

Croffut, W. A. A midsummer lark. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] c. '83, 12+256 p. D. (Lovell's American authors' ser., no. 29.) pap., 50 c.

Formerly published by H: Holt & Co., 1883.

Dale, Mrs. —. Behind the silver veil. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 282 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1808.) pap., 20 c.

Denton, Clara J. Little lines for little speakers; includ. appropriate pieces for opening and closing school, Christmas, Easter, Thanksgiving, birthday, and other special and patriotic occasions. N. Y., Dick & Fitzgerald, 18 Ann St., [1891.] c. 90 p. S. pap., 15 c.

Original short and effective pieces, for children between the ages of four and seven, and seven and ten.

Dowling, R: A baffling quest. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 374 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 150.) pap., 50 c.

A "baffling quest" is made for the will of Sir Andrew Brinfield, whose body, it is supposed, had been stolen by thieves, who had broken into the Hall and carried off some valuable property. The mystery is skilfully kept up to the last chapter, where an explanation is given that is surprising but satisfactory. An old fisherman, suspected of the crime, is an original specimen of the old English "tar."

Elliott, Sarah Barnwell. Jerry: a novel. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1891. c. '91, '90. 2+473 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"Jerry" began its career in Scribner's Magazine anonymously. Its strange force and originality at once attracted attention. With its publication in book form, the author's name appears upon the title-page. Jerry is a half-starved, wholly ignorant, ill-treated waif from Georgia, who runs away from a brutal, drunken father. His journey towards the "Golden gates" in search of his mother is depicted with a most careful attention to details in all its various stages of fear, hunger and despair. He finds friends, receives an education and learns to loath the class he has sprung from, while dreaming of schemes for its regeneration. A fortune strangely obtained awakens in him a love of gold and all it can buy—a passion which leads to a tragical ending. The land and labor problems play a strong part in the story.

Erskine, C: Twenty years before the mast: with the more thrilling scenes and incidents while circumnavigating the globe under the command of the late Admiral Charles Wilkes, 1838-1840. Bost., published by the author, [The Morning Star Pub. House, 457 Shawmut Ave.] 1890 [1891.] c. 10+311 p. D. por. il. cl., $1.

The author is said to be the only survivor of the United States Exploring Expedition under Admiral Charles Wilkes, an account of which was published by the government in 1844. This account Mr. Erskine has lately read, and has tried to make clear to others some of the adventures and the sights of the new and strange lands and people he visited during the twenty years he served before the mast. He wisely dwells upon places and customs most novel to readers—the Fiji Islands, Rio Janeiro and other Southern American ports.

Fairchild, Olive P. A struggle for love; or, cast pitilessly adrift. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] c. '87. 192 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1802.) pap., 20 c.

Fenn, G: Manville. Black blood: a peculiar case. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 358 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1788.) pap., 20 c.

Fenn, G: Manville. Lady Maud's mania: a tragedy in high life. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 277 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1799.) pap., 20 c.

Fitterington, Sophia Bronson. The wonder library. Phil., American Baptist Pub. Soc., 1891. 10 v., 16°, cl., per set, $3.

Contents: Ocean wonders, 71 p.; Every-day wonders, 72 p.; Insect wonders, 72 p.; Bird wonders, 72 p.; Birds and their songs, 70 p.; Birds and their homes, 72 p.; Ants, 54 p.; Bugs and their companions, 52 p.; Spiders, 53 p.; The wonders of vegetation, 52 p.

Gerhart, Emanuel V., D.D. Institutes of the Christian religion; with introd. by Philip Schaff, D.D. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1891. c. 25+754 p. O. cl., $3.

The author is Professor of Systematic and Practical Theology in the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church, Lancaster, Pa. He holds that thus far no system of theology, developed from the Christ-idea as its standpoint, of American or English authorship has been given the Evangelical Church. As a consequence there is in many circles a sense of the lack of harmony between much of the soundest Christian thought of our times and regnant theological systems. "The institutes of the Christian religion" confesses fidelity to the universal Christian creed, as given by the Heidelberg Catechism. The present volume is divided into four books, dealing with the source of theological knowledge, principle of Christain doctrine, doctrine on God, and doctrine in creation and providence. The second volume, which will follow shortly, will deal with Jesus Christ, doctrines respecting man, the Holy Spirit, personal salvation and last things.

Gladstone, W: Ewart. The impregnable rock of Holy Scripture. Ideal ed. N. Y., J: B. Alden, 1891. 16°, cl., 35 c.

Gotch, J. Alfred. and Brown, W. Talbot. Architecture of the Renaissance in England; il. by views and details from buildings erected between the years 1560–1630; with historical and critical text. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1891. 6 pts. ea., 16 p. 21 pl., bds., portfolio, subs., per pt., $8.

Green, Rob. F: Solo whist. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., 1891. 6+64 p. S. cl., 50 c.

Resembles somewhat Boston whist, though simpler; involves, however, as much skill. It is the latest of the many attempts to lighten the mental labor of ordinary whist. Besides the rules there are two initiatory chapters—the first, in which no knowledge of cards is taken for granted; and the second, in which the game is described in the technical language of whist.

Grou, Rev. J: N: The interior of Jesus and Mary; from the French ed., with a biographical sketch and preface by Rev. S. H. Frisbee. [New ed., rev. and enl.] N. Y., Catholic Pub. Soc. Co., 1891. 2 v., 10+384; 2–350 p. S. cl., net, $2.

This little book has gone through more than twenty editions in French; and has been translated into every European language. A new sketch of the author and his works has been added to this edition, as well as an appendix of readings for different seasons. The book treats of the life of Christ and of that of his mother, in a series of helpful religious readings.

Guillemard, F. H. H., M.D. The life of Ferdinand Magellan, and the first circumnavigation of the globe, 1480–1521. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1891.] 7+339 p. por. il. maps, D. (The world's great explorers and explorations ser., no. 4.) cl., $1.25.

With the exception of a brief account of Magellan in a work by a Spanish writer, this is the first life of the great circumnavigator published in English or any other language. The author has therefore departed somewhat from the plan of the series, of offering brief popularly written books for the general reader, and treated his subject as thoroughly as it deserves. Magellan's early life is given in full, and no detail of more important questions and difficulties is left unconsidered. To do this necessitated a reading of a large mass of material, including many old Spanish documents.

Hatch, F: H. An introduction to the study of petrology: the igneous rocks. 2d ed. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 6+128 p. il. 16°, cl., 90.

Home decorative work; comp. by the editor of the Housekeeper. Minneapolis, Minn., Buckeye Pub. Co., 1891. c. '90. 462 p. il. O. cl., $1.50.

Illustrated papers giving detailed information on embroidery, knitting, crochet, netting, tatting, painting, paper-flower making, drawn work.

Hoppin, Ja. M. Sermons upon faith, hope and love; together with Horæ Homileticæ. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1891.] c. 10+338 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The nine sermons comprised under this title are "intended not to provoke criticism, but rather to provoke to good works and faith, hope and love." In an appendix, under the title of "Horæ Homileticæ," are short articles, first published in the Homiletic Review during the years 1886 and 1887, and which are familiar answers to questions sent by young preachers. Author is Professor of the History of Art, in Yale University.

Horton, Rev. R. F. The book of Proverbs. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1891. 6+418 p. O. (Expositors' Bible, new [4th] ser.) cl., $1.50.

In making the Book of Proverbs a subject of expository lectures and practical sermons, the Rev. Mr. Horton found it necessary to treat the book as a uniform composition, following, chapter by chapter, the order which the compiler has adopted, and bringing the scattered sentences together under subjects which are suggested by certain more striking points in the successive chapters. By this method the great bulk of the matter contained in the book is brought under review, either in the way of exposition or in the way of quotation and allusion. The introduction treats briefly of the origin of the book, and the compilation of the separate parts.

Huxley, T. H. Social diseases and worse remedies: letters to the [London] Times on Mr. Booth's scheme, with preface and introd. essay. N. Y., The Humboldt Pub. Co., [1891.] 68 p. O. (Humboldt lib. of science, no. 146.) pap., 15 c.

Japp, Alex. H., ed. De Quincey memorials: being letters and other records here first published; with communications from Coleridge, the Wordsworths, Hannah More, Prof. Wilson and others; ed. with introd., notes, and narrative. N. Y., United States Book Co., 1891. 2 v., 6+289; 4+274 p. O. cl., $5.

These letters and papers relating to the De Quincey family were intrusted to the editor by Mrs. Baird Smith and Miss De Quincey, who also aided him in arranging and editing them. The letters were written by De Quincey to his mother and sister at school, and during the travels and wanderings of his later life; there are also many letters to De Quincey from his mother and Miss Jane De Quincey, and from many well-known writers. In spite of all that has been written of the "opium-eater," many new side-lights have been cast on his personality and character by this later "find" of materials.

Keenan, H: F. The iron game: a tale of the war. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. c. 1+405 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Mr. Keenan wrote "Trajan" and "The aliens," and is also thought to be the author of "The money-makers," published anonymously. The entire action of this novel takes place during the first year of the Civil War and in the East. The heroes are two friends, who side each with his own section, each being in love with the other fellow's sister. The plot deals with an attempt to disgrace the young northern hero, the interest being most successfully sustained. There is a long and vivid description of the battle of Bull Run. Among the historical characters introduced are Generals Sherman and Lee, Jefferson Davis, Lincoln and Stanton.

Kellogg, S. H., D.D. The book of Leviticus. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son., 1891. 6+566 p. O. (Expositor's Bible, new [4th] ser.) cl., $1.50.

By the author of "The Jews; or, predictions and fulfilment." An introduction deals with the origin and authority of Leviticus. The book itself is considered under two parts, viz., "The tabernacle worship," "The law of the daily life." An appendix deals with "The promises and threats of the covenant," and "Vows."

With the best intentions in the world, and a readiness to undertake any duty or responsibility his superiors might unload on him, the staff-officer, who is called Mr. X. in the humorous descriptions of his heterogeneous duties, possesses an unlimited capacity for getting into snarls and tangles. The chapters tell of his trials as adjutant, ordnance officer, at West Point, in militia camps of instruction, sham battles, etc. A short sketch, "How we elected the Mayor of Oglethorpe," is included.

Landor, Walter Savage. Citation and examination of William Shakespeare, Euseby Treen, Joseph Carnaby and Silas Gough, clerk, before the Worshipful Sir T: Lucy, Knight, touching deer-stealing on the 19th day of Sept., 1582; now first published from original papers; to which is added a conference of Master Edmund Spenser, a gentleman of note, with the Earl of Essex touching the state of Ireland, A.D. 1595; with introd. by Hamilton Wright Mabie. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1891.] 16+229 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

This imaginary trial of Shakespeare, based upon a traditionary story, was written by Landor between the years 1829 and 1837. It is considered one of the most delightful of his works. Lamb said of it "that only two men could have written this charming bit of old English life—the man who did write it, or he of whom it was written."

The out-of-door studies and meditations which make up this volume appeared at intervals during the past four years in the columns of the Christian Union. They are closely akin in sentiment to the papers published last autumn, under the title "My study fire." There are 21 essays in all. The titles—"An April day," "Under the apple boughs," "A mountain rivulet," etc.—indicate their scope.

Matheson, Rev. G: Spiritual development of St. Paul. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1891. 8+324 p. D. cl., $1.75.

The inward history of St. Paul is an epitome of the inward history of the church universal. His life, like the history of the first Christian century, is a tale of three cities—Jerusalem, Antioch and Rome. His spiritual life, as revealed in the epistles, shows a growth in his conception of Christianity, from the narrow and restricted Jewish phase to the comprehensive and universal character which it first assumed in Rome. The author, who is minister of St. Bernard's, Edinburgh, has endeavored to trace, from the autobiographical illustrations and reminiscences, and the progressive development of Christian philosophy contained in the letters of Paul, the true history of his spiritual life.

John Armstrong and his daughter, the servants in charge of an English manor-house, are murdered under circumstances of peculiar horror. Circumstantial evidence indicates Arthur Denison, nephew of the owner of the estate, as the criminal. The motive of the crime and discovery of its perpetrator form the material of the tale.

Maxwell, W: H. Advanced lessons in English grammar, for use in higher grammar classes. N. Y., American Book Co., [1891.] c. 7+327 p. D. (Maxwell's English ser.) cl., 60 c.

The first 57 pages, giving a bird's-eye view of the parts of speech and of the construction of the English sentence, will serve as a review of an introductory book, if such has been studied, or as an introduction to the scientific study of the subject, if it is commenced with this volume. Grammar is divided into Orthography, Etymology, Syntax and Prosody. Each of these departments is treated separately. The illustrative sentences and exercises were, for the most part, selected or prepared specially for this work.

Mead, Theodore H. Health without medicine. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1891.] c. 35 p. T. pap., 25 c.

Embodies the experience of the writer, an overworked American author, who journeyed to Brighton, England, in search of health. His English physician prescribed no medicine for his case but a few simple exercises, cold bathing, abstinence from work, etc., and the result was most satisfactory. The cure may be followed at home and without any expenditure of money.

Mrs. Sarah Osborn, the writer of these letters, was the sister of the unfortunate Admiral Byng of the British navy, and the elder child of Lord and Lady Torrington. Mrs. Osborn was early left a widow, and was for many years the guardian of her boy's estate, and afterwards had the education of her grandsons and the care of their property. She was born at the end of the 17th century and lived to be 82. Her correspondence as given is rich in information as to the manner and cost of living in her time, as the letters relate mostly to her management of the estates of her son and grandsons. Some correspondence is also included showing her efforts towards having the death sentence of Admiral Byng commuted.

"Written with the purpose of informing the householder how wholesome water may be obtained both in town and country. This end is sought not by laying down a series of axioms and rules, but rather by calling the reader's attention to some more or less interesting facts about water and water supplies, in the hope of helping him on these to base an independent judgment applicable to his own peculiar case. Some of the new bacterial lore is brought into prominence." —Preface.

Quackenbos, J: D.; Mayer, Alfred M.; Nipher, Francis E., [and others.] Appleton's school physics: embracing the results of the most recent researches in the several departments of natural philosophy. N. Y., American Book Co., [1891.] c. 6+544 p. il. D. (Appleton's science text-books.) cl., $1.20.

Intended to meet an existing demand for a thoroughly modern text-book on natural philosophy, reflecting the most advanced and practical laboratory and pedagogical methods. The different sections of the book are treated by educators of recognized eminence and skill. Specific features are the thorough and original treatment of motion, energy, force and work. In the chapters on dynamics the author has presented a modern and applicable conception of the nature, transformation and conservation of energy, as well as of the relation existing between energy and force. Adapted to students of fourteen years and upwards. Instructive diagrams and illustrations have been introduced to elucidate the text.

Rabusson, H: Madame D'Orgevaut's husband; from the French, by Frank Hunter Potter. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1891.] c. tr. 4-255 p. D. cl., $1.

Luce d'Orgevaut was the young widow of Count Eloi d'Orgevaut, member of the Institute. As she had been her husband's literary associate in life, she undertook after his death to prepare his mss. for publication. To aid her she employed D'Amberieu, a young savant, whose sympathies were identical with those of Luce. What was first a business relation developed into romance and ended in marriage. The interest centres in the husband's action and the wife's decision in a crisis brought about by the interference of a rival lover.

Roth, Ch. The student's atlas of artistic anatomy; ed., with an introd., by C. E. Fitzgerald, M.D. N. Y., B. Westermann & Co., 1891. 6+24 p. 24 pl. F. portfolio, cl., $7.50.

Difficulties of various kinds stand in the way of art students to acquire such a knowledge of anatomy as will prove useful in their studies. The object of the present work is the removal of those difficulties. The dry details inseparable from an elaborate work on anatomy, are but lightly touched upon, and only so far as they appear to have any practicable bearing on the art-student's work. The two first plates represent the bony framework of the body, and the eight following ones the muscular structures in a condition of intense activity. Each carefully drawn figure-plate is followed by a similar explanatory one, in which the several parts depicted are numbered. The numbers refer to the text, which contains the names of the various bones and muscles.

Scott, Sir Walter. The journal of Sir Walter Scott; from the original ms. at Abbotsford. Popular ed. N. Y., Harper, 1891. 3+621 p. O. cl., $2.50.

The original journal consists of two quarto volumes 9 inches by 8, bound in vellum and furnished with strong locks. The manuscript is closely written on both sides. Lockhart made free use of this material in his life of his father-in-law. The journal was begun in 1825, a significant point in the author's career. He was in his fifty-fifth year, at the height of worldly prosperity and literary fame. The last illness of Lady Scott fell in this period and Sir Walter was left much alone. The journal is a full reflection of his mind, but, as a rule, he keeps silence as to what people say and think of him. There is a break between July, 1829, and May, 1830. The steady decay of the physical powers and the persistence of the energetic will are shown in every line. The last entry was made in Italy, April 16, 1832. The appendix contains a table of the descendants of Sir Walter Scott. Index.

Sergeant, Adeline. Brooke's daughter. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 340 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 144.) pap., 50 c.

Only on leaving her convent-school does Lesley Brooke learn the secret of her mother's life. Then Lady Alice tells her that for many years she and Caspar Brooke have led separate lives, the separation having been brought about through Lady Alice's jealousy of another woman. According to the terms of separation, she is, after her school life, to live a year first with her father and then a year with her mother, before espousing permanently the cause of either. The different and very opposite experiences of people and scenes she goes through in this probation are the chief subjects of interest, together with her influence upon her parents' final fate.

Stillé, C: J. The life and times of John Dickinson, 1732-1808. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1891. c. 4+437 p. por. O. cl., $3.

The story of John Dickinson's life forms an important part of the history of Pennsylvania. From 1760 to 1783 Mr. Dickinson was probably the most conspicuous person in the service of the state. He was born in Maryland in 1732, received a legal education in London and practised law with success in Philadelphia. He served as private soldier in the Revolutionary war. In 1779 he was member of Congress for Delaware. He was the first to advocate resistance to the ministerial plan of taxation on constitutional grounds. He however regarded the Declaration of Independence as premature and was one of the few members of Congress who did not sign it. Many historical questions are discussed in the author's plan to make clear the environment that so strongly influenced the life and services of the great statesman. The appendix contains several papers on vital state questions drafted by Mr. Dickinson during the Revolution. Index.

Sully, Ja. Pessimism: a history and a criticism. 2d ed., with new preface. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. 26+477 p. O. cl., $4.

In bringing out this new edition the author says he has only made one or two unimportant corrections. These consist in reducing the number of apparently independent writers on the subject. The preface consists of a brief review of the further developments of thought about life and its value, since this work appeared nearly fourteen years ago. A bibliography of the subject up to date.

"The idol of Americans to-day is muscle. We are a gymnastic people. The principal topic of conversation among college men is foot-ball. The last generation neglected physical development, but it had been raised chiefly on farms and was strong. Athletics should develop muscle and manhood, strength and character." How this may be accomplished is explained in five chapters under the headings of strength, rest and food, exercise, air and religion.

THE numerous jokes that "go the rounds" in regard to the ignorance of book-clerks render it a religious duty on the part of those slandered students to expose on all occasions the ignorance of other professions whenever found. Recently, in company with a prominent physician, I went to five or six leading drugstores in this city inquiring for a compound which had been extensively advertised and commented on in Merck's Bulletin, which, I believe, is to the drug trade what the P. W. is to the bookseller. Not one store had the drug in stock, and none of the clerks could give any information in regard to it.

BIBLIOPHILE.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ALLIANCE, O.—A. M. Weir, bookseller, has been obliged to close up his shop. Slow business was too much for him, and now he must take some time to argue with his creditors.

ANTHONY, KAN.—This seems a dry place for booksellers. Within a week two—Miss L. M. Piquette and A. Martin—pulled up their stakes and left for fields more promising.

BOSTON, MASS. — The Massachusetts New-Church Union removed from 169 Tremont Street to 16 Arlington Street, on April 1.

BOSTON, MASS.—His many friends in the trade will be pleased to hear that Mr. S. E. Cassino has returned to his old sphere, and is acting as the President of the Cassino Art Company, publishers of art novelties and holiday books, which has its headquarters at 196 Summer Street.

CINCINNATI, O.—The general book committee of the Methodist Church recently held a meeting and decided to authorize the local book agents to erect a new building at Plum and Home Streets at a cost of $100,000. Cranston & Stowe, the Cincinnati agents, will have charge of the improvement, which will be divided as follows: $40,000 on the Home Street side and $60,000 on the Plum Street side.

HELENA, MONTANA. — E. O. Raisbeck has opened a bookstore here.

NEWARK, N. J.—The Larwood & Day Co. has been incorporated at Newark, N. J., to deal in books, stationery, etc.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—J. C. Eyrich has been granted a respite of one, two and three years, in which to pay his debts. We are confident that Mr. Eyrich will meet his obligations, and wish him good luck.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Fleming H. Revell Company find themselves crowded out of their old quarters in the Bible House by increasing business, and have taken a larger store at 30 Union Square, to which they will remove May 1. As heretofore the branch will be under the superintendence of S. Edgar Briggs, as managing director

SAUK CENTER, MINN.—Parties who do not wish as yet to be known are making arrangements to open a fine book and stationery store in this town.

SELMA, ALA.—"R. S. Wetmore, bookseller and stationer," says the American Stationer, "has made an assignment, with preferences to the Commercial Bank of Selma, the Loan Company of Alabama, R. M. Nelson and Mrs. Williams, aggregating $12,500. Outside of this his liabilities are $5000, a total of $17,500, with assets of $7000.

SHELBINA, MO.—J. A. Krummel, bookseller and stationer, has sold out his business to V. O. White.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 11, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

A "LAST STRAW."

WE note with regret that the ambition to "get there" has on a number of occasions got the better of the sense of justice which we trust exists somewhere in the make-up of a certain young Western publishing house.

Its first notable exploit was the reprinting of General Booth's "In Darkest England." This book was put forth in the interest of a vast reformatory scheme, which at once enlisted approbation and countenance from many prominent men and women all over the world. The sale of the book was to help swell the fund to carry out the plans proposed in it. Its author made what no doubt were satisfactory arrangements to him with an American house, which had every facility to make a success of the book. It started out with remarkable promise. Every publishing house—good, bad and indifferent—stood aside, leaving their rival envied, perhaps, but free to make the best of the bargain and to do his best for the book and its scheme.

The unenviable reputation of despoiler of this effort to elevate mankind was reserved for the Chicago house in question. The output of their reprint could not have put much money in their purse—though it kept much out of the author's.

After making several other attempts on what had been generally regarded the prerogatives of others—none of which was perhaps so aggravating as the case cited above, but all of them nevertheless reprehensible — a golden opportunity occurred to this enterprising firm. A book remained in the market to attract its envious eyes, which had for three years been respected by every publishing house in this country. It was a book that every American felt he must respect; and when, for just a brief moment, the idea of reprinting it was entertained, very little argument was needed to ward off such a catastrophe to the honor of the publishing trade of this country. All felt that the debt Americans owed to the author of "The American Commonwealth" could at best be but inadequately paid by supporting the edition from the sale of which some reward for his labor might be expected. Such consideration, however, seems to have had little weight with the house in question. They have fixed their lenses upon the pages of the original, and in a few days the first batch of their reprint will be put in the market—to be rebuked, let us hope, so thoroughly that its perpetrators may forever remain awake to their duty. They will not reap the money harvest they expected, for the publisher of the author's edition has very sensibly met them on their own ground by issuing a new cheap edition. This has the advantage over the reprint of being complete, the Chicago house being obliged to omit the chapters by Seth Low and other well-known American writers which are copyright in this country. The matter offered in their place by the reprinters can hardly be a substitute for the valuable matter they were obliged to leave out. For this reason, and for the higher moral reason, we trust the reprint will not succeed.

We know that some—and we are glad to know their number is steadily growing less—will object that this line of argument is absurdly sentimental. "Now that we have become virtuous," they reason, "shall all late-comers go without their cakes and ale?" Or, "Now that all the older houses have battened and grown fat by stealing, and can afford to pay as they go, shall the younger houses have no show at all?" To this we can only say, two wrongs never wrought a right! Bad as the old days were, they had this redeeming feature, that, until a very recent period, they admitted an unwritten law under which each one respected his neighbor's right to what he had produced. Even in that darkest period those who made claim to any decency whatever did something to render less odious the wrong to the foreign author. Indeed, strange as it may sound to the unthinking, the publishing trade of this country has rested on a more honest basis than it generally gets credit for. If it had not, it would not be where it is to-day. To prove which we point to the ruins of that portion of the trade which has tried to get along on other lines.

MR. E. MARSTON ON DISCOUNTS.

THE London Booksellers' Provident Association sat down to their second annual dinner on the evening of March 7. There were present nearly 150 persons, all prominent in the book trade; also a number of authors, among them R. D. Blackmore, George Augustus Sala, and J. McNeil Whistler. Mr. John Murray, Jr., occupied the chair. Mr. E. Marston acting as Vice-President. In the course of the evening, Mr. Marston, in speaking to the toast "The Bookselling Trade," remarked that the bookselling trade was a pretty comprehensive term; it embraced publishers, wholesale and retail booksellers, printers and paper-makers, and all those industries that were in any way included in the production of a book. On this occasion, and looking at this large assembly, it seemed still more comprehensive, for in the room were represented all those who were engaged, not only in the production of books, but in the dissemination of English literature throughout the English-speaking world. As a publisher he felt he might speak for all publishers in saying that they regarded booksellers as—next, of course, to authors—their best friends. The business of publishing and bookselling, he thought, was about as pleasant an occupation as any that could be found in the whole round of commercial life; and no one, he fancied, would contradict him if he said that it was one of the most unprofitable. Notwithstanding the pleasantness of their occupation, neither publishers nor booksellers are exempt from the many cares and troubles of life. Publishers have their thorns in the flesh, but he ventured to say boldly that they must necessarily be the most honest people in the world. Had they not on the one hand a Society of Authors ever watchful in seeing that they did no wrong, and on the other hand a Booksellers' Association, one of whose special functions was to keep publishers in the paths of virtue? He had not a word to say either for or against the Society of Authors, feeling that it would be treading on dangerous ground in the presence of the many authors present, who were doubtless some of them members of that wonderful and very vigilant society.

For the Booksellers' Association he had very great respect and regard and hoped that, under the intelligent, energetic, and able chairmanship of Mr. David Stott and his committee, some real good would be effected for the retail trade both in town and country. He was old enough to remember the time—now forty years ago and more—when the principal publishers of London formed a Society for the purpose of protecting the interests of booksellers. The late Mr. Wm. Longman and Mr. John Murray were at the head of that society, and his old friend Sampson Low acted as Secretary. During the brief term of its existence no bookseller could get a book from a publisher unless he had signed an agreement not to sell at less than published price, and possessed a ticket attached to the cover of his collecting book, without showing which, no collector could obtain a book. Those must have been good times for the booksellers. But there was, as doubtless there always will be, a want of unanimity in the trade. Some publishers would not join the Association, and some booksellers refused to take the ticket, on the ground that it was a gross system of protection. It was at length decided to take the opinion of the greatest lawyers and literary men of the day; accordingly a deputation headed by Mr. Longman and Mr. Murray—both of them always foremost in doing what they could for their brethren—waited upon Lord Campbell, Rev. H. H. Milman, Mr. George Grote, and he thought Mr. Gladstone. These gentlemen gave the matter very grave and serious consideration, and at length delivered an opinion—equivalent to a judgment dead against the Society, chiefly on the ground that its principles were opposed to the principles of free trade. That interesting document was still in his possession signed by Lord Campbell, H. H. Milman, and George Grote. The Society, was, consequently, dissolved. Notwithstanding the opinion thus given by those eminent men, he could not help thinking that the Association was based on principles of reason, justice and common sense.

If trades unions must exist—and he knew of no reason why they should not exist—then, surely, booksellers might unite for the purpose of protecting their own interests. He was, of course, aware that that old Society could not by any possibility be revived. One of Lord Campbell's arguments was that the discount of 33⅓ per cent. was enormous, and that a bookseller ought not to be bound to pocket it all. Having once bought the book from the publisher, the publisher's duty ended, and the bookseller should be at full liberty to sell at whatever price he pleased. It was not too much to say that the bookselling trade had gone from bad to worse, from that day to this. The public had been thoroughly educated up to a full knowledge and expectation of large discounts, and it would not be an easy matter to educate them down again to net published prices. If he published a book at six shillings and sold it to a bookseller at four shillings, he was constantly hearing of its being sold at about cost price and carriage paid into the bargain, and he did not think trade philanthropy can go much further than that. He was rather disappointed to find in a circular just issued by the Booksellers' Association that they proposed to limit the discount to 25 per cent., which seems to him a very liberal allowance indeed. He was old-fashioned enough to think that the published price of a book should be the public price, otherwise it was a sham and a delusion. Of course he wished the public, who were the ultimate buyers of books, to be treated fairly in this matter. And he thought the plan suggested by Mr. Macmillan, and which he had partly adopted, of a net published price, was an admirable one. He was sure it would be good for all, including the public, if it could be universally carried out; but he knew there were immense difficulties in the way. He, on his part, would gladly publish a guinea book at 16*s.* 6*d.* or 17*s.*, and allow the trade a fair living profit, on the condition that they did not give that profit away.

HONORS FOR CHAMPIONS OF THE COPYRIGHT LAW.

THE COUNT EMILE DE KERATRY, the special Envoy of the French Government, who was instructed to present Crosses of the Legion of Honor to the Americans who have been conspicuous in the fight for the international copyright law, arrived in New York on the 5th inst., and has been confined to his bed by the grippe at the Hotel Martin ever since. Mr. Robert Underwood Johnson, Secretary of the American (Authors')

Copyright League, hearing of the Count's illness, called upon him on the 8th inst. Count de Keratry thereupon took advantage of his presence to pin upon his breast the cross which he had won by the recent legislative action in favor of international copyright. The cross intended for ex-Representative Wm. Simonds has been forwarded to that gentleman at Hartford, Conn.

The gold medal which is to be presented to Senator O. H. Platt, of Connecticut, for his part in the struggle for international copyright comes from the "Syndicate pour la Protection de la Propriété Littéraire et Artistique." It had been intended to present a cross to Senator Platt also, but when the French Government was informed that a United States Senator could not receive such a decoration this medal was struck instead.

CHARLES REINWALD.—IN MEMORIAM.

In the death of Charles Ferdinand Reinwald at Nice on February 20 (already noted in the Weekly) the French book trade has lost one of its most representative and most popular veterans. Mr. Reinwald was born in Frankfort-on-the-Main in 1812. His father was a coachmaker, but the son showed no taste for that occupation, and at the age of fifteen decided to learn printing. A year later he was apprenticed to Schmerber, at that time the leading publisher and bookseller of the Free City. He was soon trusted to represent the firm at the bookseller's fair for the clearance of accounts held annually at Leipzig. There he first met M. Ambroise Firmin-Didot, who at once recognized the special talents of the young clerk and offered him a situation in his Paris house.

Most disinterestedly Mr. Schmerber encouraged his valued young assistant to accept M. Didot's proposition, and from 1832 to 1848 young Reinwald made himself invaluable to his employers. He was generously rewarded, and in time became manager of their vast establishment.

In time Reinwald desired to start for himself. He became naturalized as a French citizen, and requested the brothers Firmin-Didot to release him from his contract. They acceded to his wishes, and the business relations of the old and young firms have always been most friendly.

In January, 1849, Reinwald opened his own business with one assistant only, M. Brachet, who some time since retired to his native canton.

At a time when communication with Russia presented serious difficulties, owing to the lack of railroads and the long interruptions in navigation, the sale of French books in the great empire amounted to a considerable business. Jacques Issakoff controlled this trade, and at the recommendation of J. B. Ballière, made Reinwald his Paris agent, which gave a telling impetus to the business of the young publisher.

Many German booksellers solicited the honor of having their sons trained in their profession by Reinwald. Among those who received his schooling and have made their mark in the profession may be mentioned Julius Voss, of Leipzig; Braumüller, of Vienna; C. Verdagner, who founded an establishment of chromo-lithography at Barcelona; Paul Ollendorff, and Tauchnitz, the son of the celebrated publisher of the "Collection of British Authors." Many of these are dead, but among the living is one of whom Reinwald was specially proud, Otto Lorenz, the author of the valuable "Catalogue of the French Book Trade."

Booksellers long ago learned to value the useful bibliographical publications undertaken by Reinwald, Le Bulletin Mensuel de la librairie française, begun in 1858 and still continued; also his "Catalogue annuel de la librairie française" (1858–1869).

It is impossible in our space to enumerate the books which have borne Reinwald's imprint during the past forty years. Many of the epoch-making scientific works, especially in chemistry and archæology, are included in his catalogue. Many German and English works of enduring value have been translated under Reinwald's personal superintendence. Charles Darwin's works, in fourteen volumes, are among these publications; and among the philosophical classics are the works of Lange, Strauss, Mantegazza, etc.

In 1875, with the assistance of many scholars and literary men, Reinwald founded the "Bibliothèque des Sciences Contemporaines," which has run up to sixteen volumes.

Mr. Reinwald died childless, but leaves two adopted grandchildren to inherit his business, which will be continued under the direction of Adolph Schleicher, who has been his trusted assistant for many years.

Mrs. Reinwald survives her husband. Mr. Reinwald was buried in the historic cemetery of Père-la-Chaise, on February 26, amid a great gathering of colleagues, scholars and friends. The funeral oration was spoken for the French book trade by Emile Ballière.

FUNK & WAGNALLS vs. THE "EVENING POST."

We understand that Dr. I. K. Funk, of Funk & Wagnalls, has brought suit against the Evening Post for libel. The Post, which has at times been unnecessarily severe in holding this firm to account for some of its methods, took occasion recently to say that Dr. Funk, "along with a brother rascal in Chicago," was stealing Bryce's "American Commonwealth," and publishing and vending a cheap edition. Funk & Wagnalls have issued a circular declaring that they have nothing to do with the reprint, and that the circular letter of their firm on which the Post's charge is based specifically states that the edition they offer is "the complete work, regular authorized six-dollar edition," that is, the one printed by Macmillan & Co. In further explanation of their position in this matter they have addressed the following letter to the trade through our medium:

New York, April 6, 1891.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

Dear Sir: Some misapprehension having arisen among the trade because of our announcement of an exclusive arrangement with Messrs. Macmillan & Co. on account of Bryce's "American Commonwealth," we beg to state that our arrangement applies only to its use for premium purposes. Yours very truly, Funk & Wagnalls.

FAME'S REWARD.

Before his name was well afloat,
Dame Fortune played him sorry pranks,
And every manuscript he wrote
Came straightway back, "declined with thanks."
But now he's known from pole to pole,
Full many an editor he frets,
With groans his stiffish rates they dole—
His stuff's accepted "with regrets"!

NEW YORK'S "400" AS AUTHORS.

E. W. Bok in the Commercial Advertiser.

THE fad of the moment among the wealthy of New York is to write, and not a few of the men and women who can count their fortunes with seven and eight figures have the itch for authorship. Young William Waldorf Astor started the literary fad and he has made a success of it—that is, a literary success; for the financial part he cares but little. Recently Mrs. Van Rensselaer Cruger has taken up authorship, and she has been successful. Col. Elliott Shepard, only a few know, once published a little volume in blank verse called "The Christ Child." One of his daughters has had privately published several clever little poems. Edith Kingdon Gould has just taken up the pen and written a very neat little article soon to be printed in a popular magazine. George Vanderbilt has a great penchant for writing, although his "copy" is never seen by profane eyes. Once he thought of entering active journalism, and again has had a novel in mind for some time. Dr. Seward Webb, another of the Vanderbilt family, has also recently published a little book on horses for private circulation. Dr. Webb owns the largest hackney stud farm in America, and those who have his little book say it is very well written. Last Christmas Mrs. Calvin S. Brice composed a very pretty little poem, had it printed and sent it to her friends on Christmas day.

Now I am told that Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt has just had printed a dainty little volume about the last cruise of the Alva. It describes the trip of that splendid yacht in foreign waters, and gives a lot of interesting and gossipy matter about places visited. Not over a hundred copies have been printed, and these only for presentation among most intimate friends. No attempt was made at illustration, but the paper was heavy and the presswork as fine as the printer's art could devise. Each of these little volumes bore Mrs. Vanderbilt's signature in her own hand, and I violate no confidence in saying that the demand for them in the gilded circles of Murray Hill has been very great.

OBITUARY.

FRANK W. ROBINSON.

MR. FRANK W. ROBINSON, who for the past ten years has been associated with the firm of P. Blakiston, Son & Co., Philadelphia, died on the 7th inst at Oneonta, Cal., at the age of about forty years. Mr. Robinson began his career as a bookseller with J. B. Lippincott & Co. He left this firm in 1877 to go into business on his own account in Philadelphia. His firm—F. W. Robinson & Co.—published a number of books handsomely illustrated, chiefly in colors and monotints, being possibly the first of their kind issued in this country. In connection with this business Mr. Robinson published Robinson's Epitome of Literature, a semi-monthly journal for bookbuyers, which sustained a reputation for usefulness and brightness to the end. Mr. Robinson contributed to this journal a series of articles on the "Private Libraries of Philadelphia" that attracted enough attention to warrant a reprint of them in book form. Of course the little realized on the publishing of books was swallowed up by the journal, and in 1879 Mr. Robinson wound up his business. He took charge for a short time of the "Book and Stationery Trade Directory," which the office of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY was then tentatively publishing. On the death of Marcus Woodle, Mr. Robinson took his place with George Routledge & Sons. This he held until the summer of 1881, when Mr. P. Blakiston made him an offer that induced him to return to the city where he spent most of his life. A series of afflictions tried Mr. Robinson sorely—the protracted illness and finally the death of his wife, the sickness and care of his motherless children, etc., all no doubt helped to undermine a constitution that was never robust. Several years ago he married a second time. Gradually his health became worse, until about a year ago his physicians ordered him to remove to the more salubrious climate of California. He went at first to Coronada, and about three months ago to Oneonta, San Diego County, Cal. His letters from the former point were most encouraging. His removal to Oneonta, where he had purchased a plantation, taxed his strength too much, and a heavy cold aggravated his lung troubles and hastened his death. Mr. Robinson was a gentleman in every sense of the word—kindly, and generous in his estimate of his fellowmen. He had read deeply and was a scholar of no mean pretensions. He was thoroughly in love with his profession and everything that belonged to it, and his removal from it will leave a void not easily filled.

REV. DR. E. D. G. PRIME died at his home in New York City, on Tuesday, April 7. Since the death of his brother, the Rev. Dr. S. Irenæus Prime, in 1885, Dr. Prime's health has been delicate, and he was forced some time ago to leave active work. Dr. Prime was born in Cambridge, N. Y., in 1814. He graduated from Union College in 1832. His health was never robust, and he was often forced to take long rests, during which he travelled extensively and sent long letters describing many lands to the N. Y. Observer, which were signed "Eusebius." Dr. Prime contributed largely to many volumes published without his name, and also issued the following works: "Around the World: sketches of travel through many lands and over many seas;" "Forty Years in the Turkish Empire, or, memoirs of Rev. William Goodell, D.D.;" "Calvinism and Missions, an address before the Synod of New York, October 19, 1852;" "Civil and Religious Liberty in Turkey," and "Notes, Genealogical, Biographical and Bibliographical, of the Prime Family."

GEORGE W. W. HOUGHTON, whose name has lately been prominently brought forward as editor of Mr. Thomas' story, "The Crystal Button," died at Yonkers, April 1, in his forty-second year. For twenty years Mr. Houghton has been editor of The Hub, the well-known journal devoted to carriage-making interests, and was a recognized authority in the history, statistics and science of the trade. He was the author of a book of verses called "Niagara, and other poems," and of a long poem called "The Legend of St. Olaf's Kirk," both published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., besides being a valued contributor to many literary papers.

EDMOND DEHAULT DE PRESSENSÉ, the well-known French Protestant Episcopal pastor and author, died in Paris, April 8, aged sixty-seven years. Among his most noted works are "Conférences sur le Christianisme dans son Application aux Questions Sociales" (1849); "Du Catholicisme en France, Prospérité Matérielle, Décan-dence Morale" (1851); "La Famille Chrêtienne" (1858–1877); "Discours Religieux" (1859); "L'École Critique et Jésus-Christ" (1863); "L'Église et la Revolution Française" (1864); "Jésus-Christ, Son Temps, sa Vie, Son Œuvre" (1866); "Études Évangéliques" (1867); "La Liberté Religieuse en Europe depuis 1870" (1874). His wife was Mlle. Elise-Françoise-Louise de Plessis-Gouret, and is well known as the author of several works on education and religion.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

EMILE ZOLA has been elected President of the Société des Gens de Lettres.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS is said to be at work on a long novel to be called "A Plantation Newspaper."

A STORY by Judge Tourgée, called "A Son of Old Harry," has been begun in the New York Ledger.

REV. J. W. MENDENHALL explains that in his lecture lately he only referred to the fact that he knew the author of "The Breadwinners," and that he did not claim to be the author himself.

J. H. BROWN, who has lived in Oregon for more than forty years, is engaged on a history of that State, and already has the first volume completed. It brings the Territory down to the organization of the State government.

DAVID A. WELLS, the well-known free-trader, of Norwich, Conn., has received a gold medal from the jury on social and economic matters of the French Exposition of 1889, in recognition of his contributions to economic science and literature.

A SOUTHERN newspaper announces that the widow of Stonewall Jackson recently started for this city to arrange for the publication of the promised life of her husband. It adds that "throughout the entire South the news that this book is forthcoming will be hailed with delight."

MRS. ANNIE BESANT arrived at New York on the 9th inst. She has come to represent Madame H. P. Blavatsky at the meeting of the Theosophical Society, which meets at Boston on April 26. She will also give lectures in New York, Brooklyn, Washington and Philadelphia during the present month.

OLIVE SCHREINER, the gifted author of "The Story of an African Farm" and "Dreams," has a beautiful home in a strange little oasis in the desert karoo. The little town called Matjesfontein is pitched in the heart of the wilderness and consists of a farm, a hotel, a station, a mill, a warehouse and a few huts. "An energetic young Scotchman named Logan," says the Pall Mall Gazette, "has made Matjesfontein the quotable example of what can be done in the way of coaxing a harvest from the most sterile region of Cape Colony. The miracle which certain thrifty Germans have worked with their little kitchen-garden patches in waste land about Cape Town, Mr. Logan has worked in the karoo with a farm the size of an English county." The clear dry South African wind sweeps over the flat, drab wastes of sand stretching far away, only relieved by low sierras of jagged rock or ragged stone-heaps. But the landscape is said to have moods of wild, weird beauty when the garish midday glare is exchanged for faint dawn or twilight or the clear Southern night.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Harper's Young People offers a hundred prizes to young gardeners who grow the best cotton—a plant which, it is said, will grow in the North if properly cared for.

A SERIES of articles on practical gardening, written and illustrated by Mrs. T. W. Dewing, were begun in this week's issue of Harper's Bazar under the heading "In the Garden."

W. BLACKBURN HARTE, whose recent articles on the politics of the Dominion of Canada in the Forum and other magazines have attracted attention, has been appointed assistant editor of the New England Magazine.

The Independent for April 9 contains an important review of "The American Patent System," by Hon. Carroll D. Wright, written upon the centenary of the patent system, conceded to be the best and cheapest in the world, and an article by the Librarian of Congress on "A Century of Copyright Progress in America," both supplemented by full editorial comment.

THE current number of Harper's Weekly describes the celebration of the eightieth birthday of Dr. McCosh, ex-President of Princeton University, and contains a portrait of Dr. McCosh, and pictures of the silver presented to him on that occasion. The same issue has an interesting article by Stephen Bonsal, the N. Y. Herald's Bulgarian correspondent, on "Where Will Be the Battlefield of the Next European war?"

THE EVENING NEWS ASSOCIATION, Detroit, Michigan, has issued the first number of a new magazine to be called The Quarterly Register of Current History, which is intended as a convenient record of events of recent history, the most interesting to the generation that has participated in it, and the most difficult to find any convenient record of. The first number is chiefly given up to a review of the entire year 1890. As in the beginning it is natural to suppose the majority of subscribers will be residents of Michigan, a department of State and local history has been added. The magazine will be illustrated chiefly with portraits of men and women, prominent in the history of the day.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

JOSIAH COX has become the manager of the Chicago Agency of the American Tract Society.

"A BRAVE WOMAN," recently published by the Worthington Co., is the same as "The Second Wife," by Marlitt.

W. S. GOTTSBERGER & Co. publish to-day "The Story of an Abduction in the Seventeenth Century," by J. van Lennep, which has been translated from the Dutch by Mrs. Clara Bell.

THE Cassell Publishing Company have just concluded arrangements with the distinguished Spanish novelist, B. Perez Galdos, by which they become the publishers for all English speaking countries.

MACMILLAN & Co. will publish shortly Mr. William Winter's new book, "Gray Days and Gold," already mentioned in these columns; also a new edition of his "Shakespeare's England," issued in uniform style.

J. L. HILL PRINTING Co., Richmond, Va., have in press "Southwest Virginia and Shenandoah Valley," an inquiry into the causes of the rapid growth of these sections, by Thomas Bruce who gives special attention to the Norfolk and Western and Shenandoah railroads, and historical sketches of the cities and towns along these lines of railroads.

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY CO. has now on sale the third (and final) volume of Mr. A. H. Prichard's translation of Bernardine à Piconio's "Exposition of the Epistles of St. Paul," which first appeared in Latin in 1703. Bernardine's family name is unknown; being a Capuchin, he was always called by the name of his birthplace, Picquigney, a town of Picardy.

THOMAS WHITTAKER is issuing "Men with a Mission," a new fifty-cent series of brief biographies in handy form, devoted to characters in English and American history whose lives were full of action and great aims. The volumes nearly ready are devoted to Tyndale, Stanley, Latimer and Kingsley. Those to be issued during the spring are Lincoln, Howard, Lord Lawrence and Livingstone.

ROBERT CLARKE & CO. Cincinnati, have in press, for immediate publication, "The Spanish Conspiracy," a review of early Spanish movements in the Southwest, said to contain proofs of the intrigues of James Wilkinson and John Brown; of the complicity therewith of Judges Sebastian, Wallace and Innes; the early struggles of Kentucky for autonomy; the intrigues of Sebastian in 1795–97, and the legislative investigation of his corruption, by Thomas Marshall Green.

J. G. CUPPLES will issue this month a volume of poems by the late Henry Bernard Carpenter, entitled "A Poet's Last Songs," with an introduction by James Jeffery Roche. The city of Haverhill has intrusted to Mr. Cupples the manufacture and sale of the account of the celebration of the 250th anniversary of its settlement. It will be a large quarto volume, fully illustrated. Prof. S. W. Duncan's oration and Mr. Whittier's poem will be the chief literary features. The larger part of the thousand copies to be printed are already taken; the volume will be ready in May.

TILLOTSON'S Newspaper Literature Syndicate announce that they have acquired the right to "Carmen Sylva's" writings. They have arranged her new novel of English life, "Edleen Vaughan," for immediate international serial publication. It will be ready in book form in October. The Tillotsons also announce for early publication novels by Geo. M. Fenn, Mrs. E. Kennard, Capt. Hawley Smart, Adeline Sergeant, James Payn, W. Clark Russell, Hall Caine, H. Rider Haggard, Mrs. L. Cameron, G. A. Henty, W. Black, "The Duchess," F. C. Philips and others.

P. BLAKISTON, SON & CO. announce for early publication, "A Handbook of Local Therapeutics," being a practical description of all those agents used in the local treatment of disease, such as ointments, plasters, powders, lotions, inhalations, suppositories, bougies, tampons, etc., and the proper methods of preparing and applying them. Specialists in diseases requiring local treatment have assumed the authorship. The work will form a compact volume of about 400 pages, arranged in a manner to facilitate reference and containing, besides the usual index, a complete index of diseases that will greatly enhance its usefulness.

THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF POLITICAL AND SOCIAL SCIENCE, Philadelphia, is devoted to the advancement of knowledge on economic questions, and although only a year old, has already a long list of publications sent to all members in the form of the "Annals" with supplements. The issue closing the first volume of the "Annals" is fully up to the standard of its predecessors, and contains a wealth of valuable economic matter. Among the most recent supplementary volumes to the "Annals" is the "History of Statistics," by Prof. August Meitzen, of Berlin, which marks a distinct advance in statistical theory. The work has been ably translated and gives a statement of the best scientific thought of Germany.

DR. KARL KRUMBACHER, Privatdocent of Modern Greek in the University of Munich, has published a volume entitled "Geschichte der byzantischen Literatur von Justinian bis zum Ende des oströmischen Reiches, 527–1453," in which he gives an admirable sketch of a hitherto rather neglected period of literary history. The man who contributed most to a revival of letters which bore rich fruit in the twelfth century was the statesman and courtier Michael Psellos, a writer of vast learning and remarkable versatility. Krumbacher is enthusiastic in praise of Romanós, whom he characterizes as the greatest sacred poet of all ages, and thinks this place will be assigned him by the literary history of the future. The two best manuscripts of Romanós' sacred lyrics are preserved in the library of St. John's cloister on the island of Patmos, where they were copied by Krumbacher some years ago with the intention of publishing a complete edition of his poems.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have in preparation a translation of the "Universal History of Literature," by Prof. Gustav Karpeles of the University of Prague. The American and English editions will be issued under arrangements with the Berlin publishers. The work will be illustrated, and will be published in six parts, each complete in itself, as follows: "The Orient," "Greece and Rome," "Christendom," "The Romance Lands," "The Teutonic Lands," and "The Slavonic Lands." They also have in preparation a "Story of the Civil War, 1860–1865," which is being prepared by John Codman Ropes, Secretary of the Military Historical Society of Massachusetts. The work will be in two volumes, uniform in general style with the Story of the Nations Series. Each volume will have a frontispiece portrait and carefully prepared maps and battle plans, making clear all the more important operations as well of strategy as of tactics. It is intended to present a narrative sufficiently free from technical detail to be interesting and serviceable to the general reader, but thoroughly trustworthy and precise as to all of the facts given, so as to stand the test of technical criticism. In putting into this brief compass the complete narrative of the four years of war, it will be practicable to give detailed consideration only to the more important and decisive events of the campaigns. These events will, however, be fully described in such a manner as to render clear the actual progress of the campaigns, and the reasons for the various results secured.

CLUB LIBRARY.—A clubman was asked if his club possessed a library. "I'm blowed if I know," said he; "the only book I ever want is the directory, and there's one bound in real Russia leather right in the hall as you go in."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

WILL PUBLISH SATURDAY, APRIL 18:

Who Wrote the Bible?

By WASHINGTON GLADDEN, D.D., author of "Applied Christianity," "The Lord's Prayer," etc. 16mo, $1.25.

In this book Dr. Gladden gives the results of the best modern scholarship with regard to the authorship of the Bible. He says: "The aim of this volume is to put into compact and popular form, for the benefit of intelligent readers, the principal facts upon which scholars are now generally agreed concerning the literary history of the Bible."

There must be a large class of readers to whom a book on this important subject, written with discrimination, candor and reverence, will be very welcome.

Charles G. Finney.

Vol. V. of American Religious Leaders. By GEORGE FREDERICK WRIGHT, Professor in Oberlin Theological Seminary, 16mo, gilt top, $1.25.

As teacher, author and evangelist President Finney exercised a remarkable sway over multitudes. Professor Wright has told excellently the story of his career, and forcibly portrayed him as the great religious leader he was.

Excursions in Art and Letters.

By WILLIAM WETMORE STORY, author of "Roba di Roma," "Fiammetta," "Conversations in a Studio," etc. 16mo, $1.25.

CONTENTS: Michel Angelo; Phidias, and the Elgin Marbles; The Art of Casting in Plaster among the Ancient Greeks and Romans; A Conversation with Marcus Aurelius; Distortions of the English Stage as Instanced in "Macbeth."

Mr. Story is equally at home in literature and in art, and the essays he has here gathered cannot fail to instruct and delight a large circle of readers.

Noto: An Unexplored Corner of Japan.

By PERCIVAL LOWELL, author of "Chosön," "The Soul of the Far East," etc. 16mo, $1.25.

Mr. Lowell was fortunate in visiting a region as yet almost unknown by travellers, and his book is a fresh and engaging description of the country and of all that it contains of interest.

A Journal of American Ethnology and Archæology. Volume I.

Edited by J. WALTER FEWKES. 8vo, paper covers, $2.00; cloth, $2.50.

This Journal includes (1) A Few Summer Ceremonials at Zuñi Pueblo, by Professor Fewkes, describing the rain dances and other semi-religious ceremonies of the Zuñis; (2) Zuñi Melodies, by Mr. Benjamin Ives Gilman; and, (3) An Archæological Reconnoissance of Ruins in or near the Zuñi Reservation.

A Satchel Guide

For the Vacation Tourist in Europe. Edition for 1891, revised. A compact Itinerary of the British Isles, Belgium and Holland, Germany and the Rhine, Switzerland, France, Austria, and Italy. With maps, plans, etc. 16mo, roan, flexible, $1.50.

This guide-book has grown yearly in popular favor, as it has been tested and proved to contain just what ourists wish to know and to be thoroughly reliable.

The Change of Attitude toward the Bible.

By JOSEPH HENRY THAYER, Professor in the Divinity School of Harvard University. 8vo, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

An Address showing why historical and critical study of the Bible has inevitably modified the view formerly held of it.

PRESS NOTICES.

"There is an air of verity in this strange narrative that is as fascinating as a romance, and yet there is no ap ance of its being a work of fiction. The pictures of the inner life of a convent are novel and well drawn, b who has evidently 'been there.' The book is not written in a sensational style, but it has already made a sensa the demand for it being extraordinary."—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

STORIES OF OLD NEW SPAIN.

Including a new story written especially for this volume.) By THOMAS A. JANVIER, author of "Color Studies," "The Aztec Treasure-House," "The Mexican Guide." TOWN AND COUNTRY LIBRARY. 12mo, cloth, with frontispiece, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"Nobody has pictured the life of Mexico and our Southwest with the vividness, sympathy and absolute truthfulness shown in Mr. Janvier's 'Stories of Old New Spain.' His work is as realistic as Kipling's stories of India, and, like them, it forms an invaluable literary record. But in this case the writer possesses a mellow humor, a grace and charm of expression, and also a genuine force and dramatic power which are rarely combined in the 'clever' stories of the day. Such literature as this will receive more than transient recognition."

ELECTRICITY:

THE SCIENCE OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY. A Sketch for General Readers. By E. M. CAILLARD, author of "The Invisible Powers of Nature." Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

"The aim which the writer has proposed to herself in the present little work is to give such an outline of modern electrical science as may be readily understood by readers who have no previous acquaintance with the subject, and who, though unable to make a serious study of it, wish to acquire sufficient knowledge to enable them to follow with intelligent interest the marvellous and rapid progress which is being made in this ever-widening field." —From the Preface.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS NEW BOOKS

Marie Louise and the Return from Elba,

And the Hundred Days. From the French of IMBERT DE ST. AMAND, with portrait. 12mo, $1.25.

The final scenes of the Napoleonic drama are unforded in this volume, which immediately follows the "Marie Louise and the Invasion of 1814," just issued. Thus the period begun by "The Happy Days of Marie Louise," and continued by "Marie Louise and the Decadence of the Empire," is brought to an end. Other volumes deal with the lives of Marie Antoinette and Josephine. Send for circular.

Gallegher,

And Other Stories. By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

The stories comprising this volume attest the appearance of a new and strong individuality in the field of fiction. They are of wide range, and amply account for the popularity which Mr. Davis has already won.

The Index Guide

To Travel and Art Study in Europe, By LAFAYETTE C. LOOMIS. With maps, plans, catalogues of chief galleries, routes and 160 illustrations. New Edition for 1891. 16mo, leather, $3.00.

"One of the most compact, comprehensive and exhaustive travelling companions ever printed."—N. Y. Tribune.

Spain and Morocco,

Studies in Local Color. By H. T. FINCK. 12mo, $1.25.

A piquant and crisp record of impressions left upon the mind of a peculiarly observant traveller among Spanish and Moorish people and things. His account, which includes not only Spain, but Tangier and Tetuan, is full of adventurous and picturesque interest.

Zadoc Pine,

And Other Stories. By H. C. BUNNER. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"Mr. Bunner's most eminent characteristic is an exquisite taste, a faultless literary breeding, and an unerring instinct of literary refinement, which yet does not lack in strength, and is fully masculine."—New York World.

Memoir of John Murray,

With his Correspondence and an Account of the Origin and Progress of the House, 1768-1843. By SAMUEL SMILES. Two vols., 8vo, with portraits, $9.00.

"An important and valuable book. The volumes illustrate the literary life of England during the first half of the present century through this publisher's correspondence with famous men of letters; at the same time throwing new light upon the characters and habits of these distinguished correspondents."—N. Y. Tribune.

The work contains valuable and interesting letters from Scott, Byron, Disraeli, Coleridge, Moore, Gifford, Leigh Hunt, Lockhart, Carlyle, Southey, Campbell, Hallam, Canning, Washington Irving, and many other eminent men of letters.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE WORTHINGTON CO. will publish at once two novels—"The Rector of St. Luke's," descriptive of life in a military town of Germany, by Marie Bernhard, translated by Elise L. Lothrop, and "Her Playthings, Men," a story of English and Continental society, by Mabel Esmonde Cahill.

D. LOTHROP COMPANY will publish at once, by special arrangement, a new novel by George Macdonald, entitled "There and Back." Those who have read the MS. pronounce it not only the strongest but the most fascinating that Mr. Macdonald has written, so that for it may be expected as large and popular a sale as his previous works have enjoyed. The work of an American author is incorporated in the book.

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY CO. has just published the "Life and Writings of Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor of England under Henry VIII.," by Rev. T. E. Bridgett. The author has used much material that was not available before "The Calendars of Letters and Papers Illustrating the Reign of Henry VIII." (published by the "Record Office") had been carried through and beyond the life of More. The frontispiece is a portrait of More photographed from the original crayon sketch by Holbein in the Windsor collection.

THE METHODIST BOOK CONCERN (Hunt & Eaton) have in preparation "Evenings at School," by Clara Marshall: "The King's Messengers," by Emily Huntington Miller; "The Doctrine of a Future Life," by James Strong, S.T.D.; "The Friendly Five," by Mrs. Mary C. Hungerford; "Initial Studies in American Letters," by Henry A. Beers; "A Workman's Confessions," by Floyd Hayes; "Una and Leo," by Julia Goodfellow; "St. Matthew's Witness," by Dr. Francis W. Upham; "Around Bronton," by Mary R. Baldwin; an American edition of "Carlowrie, or, among the Lothian folks," by Anna S. Swan; and a "History of Methodism in the City of New York," by S. A. Seaman.

D. APPLETON & CO. will publish at once Thomas A. Janvier's new book, "Stories of Old New Spain." It has been said that Mr. Janvier's fascinating tales of life in Mexico and our Southwest form a new page in our literature, for the author has preserved the coloring, atmosphere and strange character of the life as vividly as Kipling has delineated certain phases of life in India. For this volume Mr. Janvier has written a new story, entitled "A Mexican Night," and the collection includes "San Antonio of the Gardens," which has been called the most beautiful American short story of recent years. Those who are acquainted with Mr. Janvier's graceful style, mellow humor, and command of dramatic effects will regard the appearance of this book as one of the pleasantest features of the spring publishing season.

ROBERT CLARKE & CO. will publish early in May a volume of addresses by Rev. L. J. Evans and Rev. H. P. Smith, entitled "Biblical Scholarship and Inspiration." The addresses were prepared in view of the current attack on higher criticism and Biblical theology. The authors (Professors of Biblical Literature) suppose this attack to be based largely on misconceptions as to the nature of the higher criticism on the one hand, and as to the definition of Biblical inspiration on the other. The addresses discuss the treatment of the Bible in the past, and show the position of the Christian churches as to the doctrine of inspiration. The aim of the authors, who claim to stand on strictly evangelical ground throughout, is to promote a harmony between theological instructors and those in the active work of the Church. At the same time they will publish "An Attempt at an Analysis of Music," by Helen M. Sparmann, formerly Professor of Music at the College of Music, Cincinnati; and "The Spanish Conspiracy," a review of early Spanish movements in the Southwest, containing proofs of the intrigues of James Wilkinson and John Brown; of the complicity therewith of Judges Sebastian, Wallace and Innes; the early struggles of Kentucky for autonomy; the intrigues of Sebastian in 1795–7, and the legislative investigation of his corruption, by Thomas Marshall Green, author of "Historic Families of Kentucky."

Adams, Rev. H. C. History of the Jews; from the war with Rome to the present time. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1891. 406 p. 12°. cl., $3.20.

Arène, Paul. The golden goat (La chevre d'or); from the French, by Mary J. Safford. N. Y., Harper, 1891. c. tr. 3+214 p. il. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 695.) pap., 50 c.

A pretty, poetical love-tale of Provence, in which is interwoven the fanciful legend of the "Golden goat." The goat is supposed to be the guardian of a buried treasure. He appears at intervals in wild, dangerous regions, and lures to their death those who attempt to follow him and gain the treasure. The secret of the treasure is known to the women of a certain family. It is the last descendant of this family who is the heroine of the love-story. Part of the legend is that if the lover learns the secret of the treasure, the woman loses his love.

Bazán, Emilia Pardo. A Christian woman; tr. by Mary Springer. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1891.] c. tr. 11+368 p. por. D. cl., $1.

Opens with an excellent biographical sketch of the author by Rollo Ogden. The motive of the novel is the marriage of a young girl to an old man whom she dislikes, but whom she thinks it better to marry than to remain in the house of her uncle with his mistress, and so appear to sanction her uncle's sin. The arguments all point to the question, "Is the heroine a Christian woman, as her friends call her, for so marrying, or is she not on a level with the woman she so severely condemns?" Many sarcasms are levelled at the Catholic Church in Spain and at the priests.

Bettany, Jeanie Gwynne. A laggard in love. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 189 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1810.) pap., 20 c.

As far as Dr. Brinton knows this is the first attempt at a systematic classification of the whole American race on the basis of language.

Browning, Rob. A few words on Robert Browning. Phil., Arnold & Co., 1890 [1891.] c. 5-61 p. D. bds., 50 c.; pap., 30 c.

The anonymous author thinks it unfortunate that people always use the word study in connection with Browning. Less time should be spent in studying the criticisms of Browning, now multiplying so fast, and more should be devoted to reading him and forming independent opinions of his stimulating and inspiring words. The writer advises how not to read Browning, criticises the verdict of the critical on the obscurity of Browning, gives a glimpse of the poet, whom he met twice by appointment, and offers a concluding ch on the ideal relation which existed between Mr. Mrs. Browning.

Iermola is a poor Russian peasant of the very poorest class, living in a little hut by himself. One night a little child is left at his door. He devotes his life to the boy, learns to read that he may teach him, learns the potter's trade to increase his very slim income. After a time the child's father and mother appear, and the story of the old man's sufferings and the boy's warring conceptions of duty towards benefactor and parents bring about a tragic ending.

Madame Cambarrieu was the wife of a prosperous French manufacturer, who loved her excessively. In return she gave him mere tolerance. There was room only in her cold nature for an idolatrous love of a profligate son. Victorien skilfully plays upon his mother's weakness, and the result is a story of a husband's misplaced confidence, a woman's severance of family ties, and a villain's flight from the consequences of his own act.

Valmond is a socialist. His life is spent in a constant warfare of words and acts against wealth and power. An episode is introduced similar to the recent strike on the Vanderbilt railroads. A love-affair with a young girl, his superior in education and social standing, runs through the story. The reasoning is crude and one-sided. The story is broadly vulgar, and aims at the destruction of all conventional barriers.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 11, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

THE PROVISIONS OF THE NEW COPYRIGHT ACT.

THERE is so much misconception of the real bearings of the new copyright act that we give below, in the fewest possible words, for the benefit of home as well as foreign readers, a statement of the actual changes.

The law is, technically, not an international copyright act, but an extension of domestic copyright to foreigners. This extension is accomplished by striking out the previous clauses which specifically restricted copyright to American citizens or residents. The only distinction now made between citizens and foreigners is that the record charge for the copyright of an article "the production of a person not a citizen or resident of the United States" shall be one dollar, the fee for Americans remaining fifty cents. [This proviso, "to defray the expenses of lists of copyrighted articles," is an incongruity quite needless, in view of the fact that by the final form of the bill all entries, and not simply those of foreign origin, are to be printed.]

The rights of the American producer are incidentally lessened in one particular: the "manufacturing clause" forfeits his right if his book is type-set abroad. This has been an infrequent practice, Mr. Howells being almost the only American author who has had many of his books set abroad.

The right of the American and of the foreign producer to be protected against unauthorized translation or dramatization of his work, is fully secured by the new act. The former law was imperfect in this respect, and there is here a decided gain to our own authors.

The title or description of the work to be copyrighted must be registered on or before publication in this or any other country, and the two copies of books, etc. (or one photograph of paintings, etc.), must be deposited not later than the day of the publication thereof in this or any other country, instead of within ten days after publication, as provided in the old law. This permits simultaneous publication in all countries, but forfeits domestic copyright if a work is first published elsewhere—a feature included or implied in the British and in most copyright systems.

Registration and deposit may be by placing in the mails within the United States. This does not prevent an author from mailing his title-page from abroad, but means that only deposit in the United States mails can be officially accepted as a valid delivery.

The former proviso that the two copies must be of "the best edition" is omitted; the publisher is no longer required to deposit an édition de luxe, but would be expected to deposit copies in permanent shape (i.e., cloth-bound), though it is not probable that paper-covered copies could be refused.

By "the manufacturing clause," copyright is denied to books, photographs, chromos or lithographs, not from type set or negatives or stone-drawings made within the United States. Maps and charts, dramatic and musical compositions, engravings, cuts and prints, paintings and like art-works, are copyrightable without restriction. This permits copyrighted maps, or illustrations (other than photograph or lithograph), to be imported and incorporated with a copyright book, and prevents unauthorized copying of such for other books.

Copyrighted books, photographs, chromos or lithographs, or plates thereof, cannot be imported for sale. Not more than two copies at any one time may be imported for use, and these subject to duty unless for the United States or for an institution of learning or brought by arriving passengers after a year's use abroad. But books and pamphlets in languages other than English or in raised print for the blind may, by the tariff statutes, be imported free of duty, and this probably makes it legal to import French books, for instance, though type-set and copyrighted here. The copyrighting of a translation does not involve copyright or prohibition of the original work. As a result of this complication, a French writer who desires to secure his copyright and reserve rights of dramatization and translation in America, must cause his book to be type-set here in French, but probably his publish r or representative cannot prevent the importation, duty free, of foreign copies or editions of it.

Newspapers and magazines containing authorized copyright matter may be imported notwithstanding; but if the copyrighted matter is unauthorized, they are prohibited. This is the wholesome effect of a proviso somewhat obscure in its phraseology.

Copyright cannot be had for books published (in whole or in part, as a first volume) before July 1, 1891, and the status of foreign books, etc., not type-set and copyrighted in this country remains after that date the same as before. But new matter in new editions may be copyrighted, in which case any one would have liberty to reprint the old but not the new edition.

The Treasury is to print a weekly list of all title-entries at a price not exceeding $5 per annum.

The above are substantially all the changes of the new act, the text of which was given in the issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for March 7.

IN a letter on the act in the London Athenæum, Mr. M. D. Conway says:

"The foreign author has also some check on his American publisher in a privilege shared with the American author of changing his publisher. Should an American or English author believe himself unfairly treated, he may bargain with another publisher to bring out an edition of his book, and no injunction could issue against such edition. The first publisher could bring an action against the owner of the copyright, but then only if he had been guaranteed against a rival edition. He would have to prove that he had fulfilled his part of the contract."

This tends to give our British brethren a curious view, to say the least, of the morals of American authors. As a matter of fact, neither this act nor any copyright law has to do with the business relations between authors and publishers. If an author wishes to sell to a publisher the right to publish his book for a specific number of copies only, or for a first edition, or for a stated number of years, he may of course do so, if he can find a publisher willing to make the bargain; but if he sells the book, as is usual, "changing publishers," as above suggested, would be deserving of adjectives. Happily, American authors are usually well satisfied with their treatment by American publishers, so that they not only do not attempt to steal their own books after they have sold them, but they rarely change publishers when they issue a new book.

THERE is much unwise talk as to the hardship of compelling a foreign author to defer his publication until he can find an American publisher. But is that not what every author does at home—wait till he can find a publisher, unless he prefers to pay his own way?

WE take pleasure in giving in this issue a full account (including verbatim reports of the speeches) of the banquet given on the 13th inst. by the American Copyright League in honor of the passage of the Copyright bill. No such illustrious assemblage of authors and members of the book trade has been seen together in this country since the notable banquet tendered by the New York Book Publishers' Association to the authors and booksellers of the United States at the New York Crystal Palace in 1855. Of that earlier gathering but one survived to take active part in the campaign whose victorious issue was celebrated this week. We refer to the Nestor of the publishing trade, Mr. W. H. Appleton, the President of the American Publishers' Copyright League, who unfortunately could not be present on Monday evening. The purpose of the reunion in 1855 was, as Mr. W. H. Appleton, the chairman on that occasion, hoped, "the inauguration of a new era in the history of that trade which ministers to the intellectual wants of a great and powerful people." Later experience did not quite justify that hope. We sincerely trust that we have at last reached the period when the hopes of the past and present may be fully realized.

AMERICAN COPYRIGHT LEAGUE.

CELEBRATION OF THE PASSAGE OF THE BILL.

IN honor of the passage of the Copyright bill, and in celebration of the eighth anniversary of the formation of the American (Authors') Copyright League, the members of the Copyright League and their friends met at Sherry's charming rooms at 5th Avenue and 37th Street, New York, on the evening of April 13. A brilliant company was seated around the festive board. The tables were arranged in the form of a great horseshoe, emblematic, no doubt, of the good luck and the good guidance that have prospered the League. The decorations consisted of a profusion of flowers and of the flags of the nations prominent in the International Copyright Union. On one wall, in a frame of heavy oak, on a dark red background, was the eagle quill with which President Harrison signed the International Copyright bill, and made it a law.

Owing to the absence of James Russell Lowell, the President of the League, E. C. Stedman, by general request of members of the council, presided. Seated near him at the head of the horseshoe were Senator O. H. Platt, of Connecticut, who had charge of the International Copyright bill in the Senate; Count Emile de Kératry, representative of the French Societies that favored international copyright; Robert Underwood Johnson, Secretary of the Joint Committee of the authors and publishers;

General A. C. McClurg, President of the Chicago Copyright League; George Haven Putnam, Secretary of the Publishers' Copyright League; Dana Estes, Secretary of the Boston International Copyright Association; Theodore L. De Vinne, representing the Typothetæ; George Parsons Lathrop and George Walton Green, former Secretaries of the Authors' League; Charles Scribner, Treasurer of the Joint Committee; W. W. Appleton, of the Campaign Committee; John L. Kennedy, Chairman of the International Typographical Union Copyright Committee at Washington; Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke. Seated on Mr. Stedman's left were Honorables Henry Cabot Lodge, A. P. Fitch and William McAdoo, George William Curtis, Parke Godwin and Seth Low.

Among the other members and guests present were the following:

Daniel Appleton,	James Harper,
Edw. Dale Appleton,	L. J. Hatch,

From the music-gallery, which was decorated with American, British, French, German and Italian flags, the speeches were listened to by a group of women sympathizers with and workers for the cause of copyright. Among them were Mrs. E. C. Stedman, Mrs. R. U. Johnson, Mrs. Brander Matthews, Mrs. G. H. Putnam and Miss Kate Field.

Many invited guests found that, for various reasons, they could not attend the dinner. Among these were the President and Vice-President of the United States, ex-President Cleveland, the French and English Ministers, Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop Potter, Senator Chace, William M. Evarts, Thomas B. Reed, J. R. Hawley, Benjamin Butterworth, W. C. P. Breckinridge, Amos J. Cummings, General F. A. Walker, President of the International Copyright Association of New England; W. H. Appleton, President of the American Publishers' Copyright League; John G. Whittier, Dr. O. W. Holmes and Charles W. Eliot, first President of the Boston Association.

The first letter read was the following from the absent President of the League:

ELMWOOD, CAMBRIDGE, MASS., April 2, 1891.

I should feel highly honored could I accept your invitation to preside at the dinner on the 13th of April. We have not gained all that we wished, but we have won a substantial triumph in securing the acknowledgment of the principle for which we have been contending. I have a firm belief that matters will arrange themselves more to our liking as time goes on and public opinion with it, as it is sure to do. We have every reason, therefore, for congratulating each other and for giving public expression of the satisfaction we feel. I should be heartily glad to share in these felicitations, but my health is at present so uncertain as to forbid my undertaking any such responsibility. With many and sincere regrets, faithfully yours, J. R. LOWELL.

Then followed one from Congressman W. E. Simonds:

HARTFORD, CONN., April 12, 1891.

While I am steadily, though slowly, gaining health and strength, it is the opinion of my physician that there is danger of a serious interruption of my progress if I undergo the strain of a trip to New York and an attendance upon your dinner. This is a great disappointment to me, and I refrain from coming with deeper regret than I can readily express.

I feel a great interest to hear what American authors will say about the passage of the International Copyright bill. I hope they recognize and appreciate the dominant reason of its passage. A large majority of all those members of Congress who repeatedly voted for the passage of the bill did so as a matter of right and wrong and without respect to other considerations. A few were actually maintained by their friendship for the printers, but they were only in comparison. For myself, I was and am assured that the act will decrease the price of all books except the very cheap and the very dear; I was accustomed to say this to my colleagues, but I cannot recall that one of them ever gave a cordial assent to the proposition.

On one side of the chamber there were many members who steadily voted for the bill, feeling all the while that its main promoters outside the chamber were their political opponents and inconsistent in their advocacy of the measure. It is within the knowledge of the League that no threats, promises or blandishments, large or small, were brought to bear on members in favor of the bill.

It is so easy and so fashionable to decry the Congressional conscience and to indulge in pessimistic wonder as to what on earth we are coming to, that it seems to me worth while to point out how clearly and distinctly this question was decided in Congress as one of right and wrong. In conclusion, I most heartily congratulate the League on the passage of the bill, and I am pleased to be able to say that the act comes very near being the exact thing that the situation demands. Yours truly,

WILLIAM EDGAR SIMONDS.

From Senator Hoar:

WORCESTER, MASS., April 8, 1891.

I am sorry that I cannot attend the dinner in celebration of the passage of the International Copyright bill. I cannot claim much credit myself in the matter, except in so far as I have been a loyal lieutenant of Mr. Platt and in virtue of having once facilitated the passage of the bill by a masterly flash of silence just at the right time, when I was sorely tempted to make an indignant speech. I am glad the old contest between copyright and copywrong is so near settlement in this country. The statute of last winter will probably need some amendment after a little trial; but I do not think there is danger of losing what we have gained. I am, with the highest respect, faithfully yours, GEORGE F. HOAR.

From ex-Speaker Winthrop:

BOSTON, MASS., April 9, 1891.

I thank you and the committee for your kind invitation. It is now fifty years, save one, since I served on a committee in the House of Representatives of the United States on the subject of international copyright. My accomplished friend, John P. Kennedy, of Baltimore, the author of "Swallow Barn" and "Horseshoe Robinson," was the chairman of the committee, of which, I believe, I am the only survivor. He did all that was done in initiating the international reform which has at length been accomplished, and his name should not be forgotten when the history of this long-vexed question is made up. It would give me pleasure to take part in the celebration by the Copyright League, but age and infirmities compel me to deny myself to such occasions, and I can only offer you my congratulations and acknowledgments. Believe me, with great regard, yours very truly, ROBERT C. WINTHROP.

From C. P. Cranch:

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., April 9, 1891.

There is no festal meeting at which I should more heartily be present than the dinner in celebration of the passage of the International Copyright bill. But I regret that I must join you only in spirit, rejoicing with you and the fraternity of authors in your opportunity to signalize by a symbolical banquet the dawn of a brighter era for a class of workers admitted at last to an honest share of the fruits of their life-long labors. I have the honor to be, very truly yours,

CHRISTOPHER P. CRANCH.

Congressman W. L. Wilson, of West Virginia, wrote:

In acknowledging the courtesy of their invitation, I beg leave to tender the members of the League my hearty congratulations on the success of their efforts to secure a permanent lodgment in our laws of the principles for which they have so earnestly striven. In common with some of my colleagues who supported the bill, I did not like the form it finally took, but, believing this form to be only temporary, and an indispensable condition to immediate success, I did not hesitate to support a measure, inherently just, whose enactment is a part of the "righteousness that exalteth a nation." W. L. WILSON.

Congressman Amos J. Cummings wrote:

Am sorry I cannot be with you to-night. I congratulate both the typographical unions and the Authors' Club. Without the aid of either you would have had no Copyright law. All honor to Simonds, Breckinridge, Bynum, Lodge and the others. They did the work. I salute you.

A. J. CUMMINGS.

Letters were also read from Colonel R. H. Johnston, of Baltimore; A. R. Spofford, Librarian of Congress, and Dr. Edward Eggleston. The following telegraph by accident did not arrive in time to be read:

"I congratulate the association most heartily upon the beginning of full justice to the authors of the world. To day let us not spend time pointing out the shortcomings of the act just passed, but rather rejoice over the central fact."

JOS. R. HAWLEY.

At a somewhat late hour Mr. Stedman rose, and, before introducing the speaking, which he promised would be marked by Arcadian brevity, said:

There is nothing to mar our satisfaction, gentlemen, except the absence of a few of our guests. We miss from the head of this table our foremost man of letters, the chief of our guild, the distinguished President of the American Copyright League, whose chair another has the honor to occupy, but which none other than himself can be said to fill.

Then Laurence Hutton read Mr. Lowell's letter, and all present heartily joined in a toast to "the health of Mr. Lowell, with a warm wish that it may pass from a state of uncertainty to that of complete restoration."

The toast to Mr. Lowell having been drunk with much enthusiasm, Mr. Stedman continued as follows:

EDMUND C. STEDMAN.

Though our summons was sent out at short notice, we have a thoroughly representative assemblage, gathered to celebrate, upon the eighth anniversary of the formation of the American Copyright League, the passage of a bill securing international copyright. We celebrate the victorious result of a struggle, the successive campaigns of which have extended over more than half a century. I do not think of any measure which has so long been fought in any legislative body, unless it be the Parliamentary bill to legalize marriage with a deceased wife's sister. Fifty-four years have passed since the petition presented by Henry Clay, in 1837, and the favorable report upon it of a select committee, including Mr. Clay, Mr. Webster and Mr. Buchanan.

Now, it chances that within the last week our inventors have been celebrating the 100th anniversary of the American patent system. From the first, a foreigner could obtain a patent. The international principle was at once established. The right at one time was, I think, withdrawn, but in 1836, or about the time a copyright struggle began, it was confirmed upon certain conditions. The international right of property in material inventions—in the designs of what were termed "useful articles," and in "new processes in art or manufactures," was recognized by Congress just 100 years before the principle—for which we have been contending, and the victory of which we are now celebrating—was recognized, to wit: that the right of property in thatary invention—in the written product of the brain—however it may be otherwise conditioned, has no boundary lines.

You know, gentlemen, that this was fought for, during many years, chiefly on grounds relative to the welfare of American authors and the development of a home literature. For one, I always have felt that the wrongs experienced by foreign writers, however prejudicial to our reputation among nations, and outrageous as they were, have been less severe than the cruel ills so long inflicted upon our own men of letters—of less moment than the repression of American ideas, the restricted growth of our national literature; during that weary period in which, though a foreign author was denied some increased measure of profits, the question for an American author was whether he could even obtain a hearing—whether he could live at all. This was the question for him, from the time of Irving's first struggle, and even so late as the formation of the Copyright Association of 1868, under the auspices of Bryant and the elder Putnam.

In time, as we know, the chief wrongs felt by American authors seemed to right themselves. But international copyright had not been gained. The cause of forty years, chiefly maintained on practical and egoistic grounds, made little headway. I know of no more striking example of the ultimate force of ethics than the record of our final campaigns. It has again been found that right makes might—that it is the most effective promoter of even statutory law.

This result makes us wish still more fervently that Mr. Lowell were with us to-night, and makes us say: "His health was never better worth than now." From the beginning of his active connection with the League, he has put his strength upon the moral side of its argument; indeed, his apothegms, equally famous and enduring in prose and verse, have made the argument for us. You and I, and every Congressman in time, learned them by heart. They became our apostolic and confessional creeds, the first being:

"There is one thing better than a cheap book, and that is a book honestly come by," and the second is like unto it:

> "In vain we call our notions fudge
> And bend our conscience to our dealing;
> The Ten Commandments will not budge,
> And stealing will continue stealing."

I shall not here repeat the story of the last seven years. There are others here from whom we shall gather some sense of the zest and suspense and vigor and triumph of the final campaign. The main fact to-night is that here are representatives of all classes engaged in it—of authors, publishers, printers, workmen, and of the noble army of legislators that fought for and with us—gathered to celebrate, first, the legal recognition of the international right of property in literature, and, secondly, the rehabilitation of our national good name throughout the reading world.

Yes, and one thing more. Primarily this is an author's jubilee. But I trust that it is not only American authors who feel like chanting:

> "It must be now dat de Kingdom am a-comin',
> An' de year ob jubilo."

We hope that foreign authors—and especially our English fellows of the craft—are rejoicing, are rejoicing just a little, are somewhat in touch with us to-night. We really have done our best for them, through weary and costly marches, often led by those who themselves can profit little by what is gained. We can say with George Eliot, "One must be poor to know the luxury of giving." And we now can safely permit our transatlantic brethren to understand that American authors have for some years realized that the time at last had come when we were fighting their battle, rather than our own, as far as material interests are concerned.

The road to publication for an American work has been easy—almost too easy for some trashy American works—since the manufacture of unauthorized reprints became unprofitable. So far as respects the Authors' Copyright League, its efforts have been, to use a hackneyed word, altruistic, except for the satisfaction derived from a sense of honor, dignity, right. For what have we now dared to do? We have doubled at a stroke the list of our competitive writers. All British authors are now American authors. The old toast about the commonwealth of those who inherit the language of Shakespeare and Bacon and Milton at last means something. All will now compete on nearly equal terms in the marvellously broadening market of this "Greater Britain"—of what must be the greatest bookmart of the world.

We have bought this right of competition for our foreign compeers with no small price, and we therefore tender it the more joyously. If it be not a perfect gift, it is the best within our means—as perfect as we can make it. And if we have not yet listened to a symphonic chord of the appreciation which we are assured our new associates must feel, we piously believe that this is due to the gloom of their present season, and because their Anglo-Saxon heart is too full for words, and is one not worn upon the sleeve. For it cannot be denied that our new Copyright law, if not perfect, wins at least nine-tenths of the battle. If it were quite perfect, perchance we might not feel so sure that this revolution is not one of those which never go backward.

The one thing more, then, upon which we congratulate ourselves is that American literature has of truth outleaped restrictions and has grown to that estate in which it fears no just and equal competition. We welcome the wide world's writers to this dependency—assured that their entry, though it may check the production of a class of works that spring up in too fallow a soil, will only act as a stimulant to the zest and noble ambition of the deserving. The prizes will be the more worth, now that the Romans also are admitted to the Olympic games.

The publishers have ably seconded our efforts and are with us to-night. Their position, too, has been misunderstood. They have made more than one concession. The law is no more perfect for them, nor are its results much more clearly defined, than for us, and for their foreign competitors. But they, too, in spite of the eighteenth-century traditions to the contrary, chose to be on the side of right. Moreover, whatever may ensue, they know that nothing can be so adverse as the want of a settled basis of trade. Nor let the typographers be forgotten. The workingman may be an idealist, but his bread is sweet—nor can he live without it. He, after all, has held the key of the situation, and he has not refused to turn it for us.

But now, gentlemen, you are eager to see and hear the heroes of the past struggle—and first the legislators who have carried through one of those great national causes from which too many a public servant stands aloof, because there is—in the phrase of the lobby—"so little in it." I shall not draw too heavily upon their strength, for not all of them are yet recovered from the fatigue of the campaign. Besides, there are so many here to-night from whom we expect—though, for what seemed to me good reasons, I have not set them an example—those brief and rapidly succeeding utterances which render the feasts of our Arcadia so distinctive.

The remarks of Mr. Stedman were frequently interrupted by applause. The first speaker called on by the chairman was

SENATOR PLATT.

I fear that you give me too much credit for my efforts in behalf of International Copyright. I was not an active factor in the fight until made one by the resignation of Senator Chace, of Rhode Island. I took an active part in behalf of your law as a sort of a legacy from him. My work in behalf of the law was something more than the performance of a duty. It was really to me a pleasure, for I felt that I was champion of a cause that was right. I know of no pleasure greater to a man in this life than to champion such a cause, and especially if it shall succeed.

This celebration is very appropriate, for when the public sense of right and justice becomes crystallized in the law of a nation, everybody should rejoice. When I woke up this morning and found the bright sun streaming through my window, I could not but call to mind your celebration here to-night. You come together here after a long storm to rejoice over the dawn of a new day. I do not think that the history of your fight will ever be written, yet I wish that it might. I think that it would be most appropriate if the first copyright taken out under the new law should be a history of that campaign, written by your very able Secretary, Robert Underwood Johnson.

It has been, as your chairman has remarked, a long struggle. I believe that in the history of governments the struggle for the triumph of right, the struggle against what may be considered the self-interest of the people, has always been a long struggle. It is only when the public conscience is aroused that abstract right is done. The work of arousing the conscience has been largely the work of this Association. The representatives you had in Washington were true and faithful and filled the ears of Congressmen and Senators, in season and out of season, with arguments in favor of International Copyright.

I saw in a book to-day that the first man in this country to agitate the International Copyright was John Neal, more than sixty years ago. You remember, of course, when Charles Dickens came first to this country for the double purpose of writing a book and persuading our legislators to pass an International Copyright bill. Dickens was fortified by letters from English authors; had he not been he might have accomplished something, but unfortunately they were written in a tone that was not agreeable to Americans at that time. The prejudice aroused by this I believe prevented the passage of a bill at that time.

I will not follow the history of the contest because it is so familiar to you The right has triumphed at last. The idea that the property of a man's brain is his as much as is the property wrought by his hand has been put into our law, and I think that a material step in the direction of progress has been made.

We have said in our law that there shall be no distinction between an American and a foreign author in respect to his ownership of what his brain may create. We have put the foreigner upon the same ground in regard to a copyright as we have put our own citizens. It is said that the bill is not perfect. It is said that some of our English brothers are not satisfied with it. In answer to this I submit that when we put an English author on the same basis as an American author, he has not much to complain about. An American author wanting a copyright abroad should be disfranchised if he asked for anything more than the same privileges and rights given to foreign authors.

I sometimes regret that I hear so often that this law is not perfect. I do not think any law contrived by human wisdom was ever perfect. In lawmaking we should not expect perfection. Indeed, where can we look for perfection? We struggle for it and we get as near to it as we can; that is what we have done in the Copyright law. The more it is studied, thought about and understood, the more it will be appreciated.

I see no harm in its provision that books shall not be imported. I think it is entirely fair that if we give to the author of any other country the exclusive right to sell his book, his engraving, his chromo in this country, it is proper for us to stipulate that the manual work of its production shall be performed in this country. This is but justice to others whom we have to consider, as for instance the publishers and the typesetters. If we give the author the exclusive right of sale, he should be satisfied to have his work done here. I think that American authors getting a copyright abroad would not object to such a stipulation as that.

This law was misrepresented from the time that it was brought before Congress until the time that it was passed. I do not think I have ever seen so much ignorance of a subject displayed as was displayed of this Copyright measure. It seemed to me that every argument levelled against it was levelled not at International Copyright, but at domestic copyright as well. The great argument was monopoly and dear books. That was the argument that went to the core of the whole matter, to the heart of the idea of protecting what is wrought in the brain of a man. I told your committee at the time that the fight was going on, that I feared more that we should lose American Copyright, than that we should fail to accomplish International Copyright. There has seemed to me a growing sentiment in this country that no labor is to be protected, or to have any special recognition, except the labor performed by the hands. I was very glad when I saw that that danger had passed by, and that the Congress of the United States had come to understand that the real wealth of this people, or rather the source of the wealth of the people, was the work of the brain. It showed that there was an appreciation of labor, of brain labor, becoming greater among the people, and that it must be by labor of the brain that real progress be made. In proportion to the amount of labor of this kind does a nation become intelligent and cultured.

What is to be the outcome of this law? That is a serious question for all of us. Will it be to develop a literature of our own? I believe the direct tendency of it is to that end. I believe the direct mission of the principle involved in the bill is to develop a distinctively American literature. I do not know as you would care to have an outsider tell you what he thinks of American literature. I do not give much credence to what sometimes appears to be a popular sentiment that we Americans ought to be ashamed of our literature. I do not believe we are so deficient in our literature as some people would have us believe. A tall tree standing among tall trees attracts but little attention; but let it get out amidst the underbrush, and it becomes conspicuous. I believe the average of American literature is very high.

I am a little surprised to find so many people who recognize in literature only novels and poetry. It is, perhaps, this class who decry American literature. They do not take into account all the writings of American scientists, historians and biographers. Yet, in the field of novel-writing and poetry America's star is a bright one. It seems to me we have a body of literature as it relates to poetry, fiction, science, history and biography, of which we can be proud.

How is a national literature to be developed? In the first place I want to say that, if we are going to have a national literature, it must be an American literature. You cannot write novels for an American market on foreign topics. We do not live in the past in this country. We live mostly in the present, and yet considerably in the future. We are developing more and more a rugged, practical type of Americanism. Dealing with social and economic questions, the minds of the people are taking hold of these questions, and they are reaching out to see what they are going to avail for the future. The American novelist should take these conditions into his mind and embody them in his work. Romance and poetry there must be, but the substratum must be American and not foreign. When we shall have done that, when American fiction shall have been built upon an American basis, then we shall begin to develop a literature of our own, and then foreigners will begin to buy our books. When American authors truly depict American sentiments in their books, I believe that they will find a good market for them abroad. The trouble to-day is that the books which have been written by foreigners about Americans have not touched our real Americanism, and therefore the character of our nation and our people is not understood as it should be in foreign lands. When it is understood, it will be admired, and the literature which really portrays it will be admired.

I think this law is going to accomplish another result. I think it is going to give the people good books at fair prices. I have no patience with this idea that cheapness is the chief end of man. I have no patience with the demand for cheapness without regard to the quality of what is purchased, or whether the seller recieves his price. I believe it to be for the best interests of the people to pay such a sum for anything—I do not care whether it is a book, a bushel of corn, or the product of a machine—as will fairly compensate all the people who are engaged in producing it. Reasonable, fair prices are better for the people than cheap prices without reference to quality and ownership. I believe, as I said before, that we shall have reasonable prices and good books.

It is not well to fly in the face of a prejudice when it can be reasonably allayed. Therefore I have believed the publishers would recognize the demand of the people for reasonable books and good books, and supply it. If I could reach the ear of every publisher in the United States, I would like to talk to him on this subject, and tell him that it was his duty to give the people good books at such a price as would give him only a fair profit. If the publishers would all do that, then the whole country would come to recognize the fact that it is better to pay the author a fair compensation, and the publisher a fair profit, and the typesetter a fair profit. Let the publishers see to it that we who have championed the International Copyright measure will never have to face with shame the claim of the opposition that was offered to the bill, that we were establishing a monopoly in the people's reading-matter.

The Chairman in introducing the next speaker, Henry Cabot Lodge, said that when he was elected to Congress every American writer felt that he was a representative-at-large for the Republic of Letters in this country, and the interests of the writers would be well represented on the floor of Congress. Mr. Lodge was applauded when he began to speak.

HON. HENRY CABOT LODGE.

I am the only member of the League, to my knowledge, who ever was elected to Congress. I tried to fight the battle for International Copyright, which was as much my battle as yours, to the best of my ability. I trust that to-night I shall be pardoned if I say a word in regard to the Congress of the United States.

I think that the Congressmen, as a rule, receive more kicks than "halfpence." Not only is it common for members of the other party to attack their opponents, but there is a general tendency among the able and distinguished editors without regard to party, to attack members of Congress, and the body of Congress as a whole.

I think the passage of this bill, as Mr. Simons has said in his letter, shows that Congress is largely influenced on a question of right and wrong by a desire to do what is right. The votes which carried the International Copyright bill in both branches were as disinterested as any votes ever passed by a legislative body. Personal interest often dictated a vote opposite to that which was passed. It was a very easy matter for those of us who live in the East to take a strong ground in favor of copyright. It was by no means as easy for men from other parts of the country to stand with us in that position. Some of the men from the South and the West supported the bill against determined opposition and the advice of their constituents.

Decorations have been most deservedly bestowed upon some of those who served the cause of International Copyright by our honored guest from France. A medal of the Legion of Honor is indeed a decoration to be proud of, but there are crosses and crowns of different kinds. There is one member of the last House of whom I think it is not too much to say that he wears the martyr's crown as the result of his service to the cause of copyright. I refer to my colleague, Congressman Adams, of Chicago. He fought the first battle in the last Congress for copyright. He did it in the teeth of bitter opposition from his own constituency, and of the Chicago newspapers which had been his warmest supporters. This opposition pursued him until he cast his vote for the bill. As you know, he was defeated at the last election, and his defeat was in no small measure due to the fight he made for copyright. The League owes him a debt for the manly service he did, knowing full well the price he might be called upon to pay.

I want to say a word or two about the bill itself. I do not deny for a moment that there are imperfections in it. Macaulay says in one of his essays that a man of action is necessarily a man of compromise, but that the historian should always be abstractly right. This bill had to be made a law by men of action. They had to pass a copyright bill, and they passed the best copyright bill that they could get through. The clause to which most objection has been made is that known as the printers' clause, which says that no foreign author can obtain an American copyright for his book unless he has it produced and put upon the maket by an American publisher. I think the objection to that clause is not justified. The opposition to monopoly granted by government is a much older thing than the establishment of copyright among civilized peoples. No nation has ever given an absolute, unlimited right to copyright. On our domestic copyright we have always had a time limitation. Another limitation has provided that it cannot pass from generation to generation like so much real estate. In drawing up this bill, we put the limitation on the foreigner that he must have his book printed in this country. We did that to bring to our support the publishers' and the printers' interests. I think that we were right in recognizing their demands. And I am sure that our bill never would have passed without their aid. That they were entirely unselfish in the matter, and not all inclined to turn the screws on us, was demonstrated by the fact that on the last night, in order to save a great principle at stake, they yielded a portion of what they had originally asked for rather than lose the fight altogether.

We have carried the great principle for which we have fought, that to be honest with the man of brains in our own country and abroad is the duty of the people of this country.

The other day I was reading a very interesting poem called "A Publisher and His Friend." Some scoffer said that the title must be a misnomer, for the publisher had no friend. We know that that was slander, for this fight has proved to us that the interests of the publisher and the author are so closely allied that the well being of each depends upon the other, and as a pure business principle they must co-operate.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I am not particularly sensitive to what is said by foreign critics of this country, but I am sensitive when any man can reproach my country for doing what I believe to be a dishonest act. It was not worthy of American civilization, of American manhood and womanhood to allow a continuation of the robbery, the theft, of the products of the brains of foreign authors. To that we have put an end. I consider this bill as not yet fully appreciated. We do not yet understand how great a piece of legislation has been accomplished by this League and its friends. I think the law will stand a monument and a milestone in the march of American civilization, and will be remembered when the acts of many Congressmen have been forgotten. That bill will stand a lasting testimonial before the people of the United States that even after half a century we did right as between man and man, and that the work of the man, produced by his brain, shall have the same protection on American soil that we give to the products of men's handiwork.

COUNT EMILE DE KÉRATRY.

Count Kératry, who was next introduced, was greeted with hearty applause. His speech, which was in French, was in part as follows:

Gentlemen, or, if you will permit me, friends: At the end of the last century our fathers fought under the same flag for the rights of men and free citizens. We have fought the good fight for the rights of thought. I must tell you, gentlemen, how much I am honored by this place you have given me to-night in this family rejoicing—to me, a humble soldier in the good cause, the modest representative of my countrymen in France. I find myself here, placed among the most illustrious Senators, Congressmen, and literary and artistic celebrities.

But the battle has been long and fierce, and you may say with a certain pride that you are indeed the fathers of the Copyright bill. And, while speaking of this fathering of a good law, permit me a brief observation. When a child is born into the world, it is only human for the father to think it perfect, finding at the first glance himself reproduced in his child. But the enthusiasm diminishes somewhat when father and son become better acquainted. We are only the cousins of the Copyright bill, and we do not recognize, perhaps, all the qualities of perfection in it which you, its proper fathers, see. But, however that may be, we receive it kindly, full of confidence in the glory of its future!

ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON.

The next speaker, Robert Underwood Johnson, was introduced by the toastmaster as "the Bayard of the campaign of American copyright.' When he arose to speak the entire company rose with him, and gave a cheer that showed their appreciation of what he had done in the good cause.

He said in substance:

Fellow-Veterans of the Copyright campaign: Fifty years from now, when literary men of the two Americas—the one on this side of the Atlantic, and the one to be on the other side—shall meet to celebrate the event now being first celebrated by us, it will be recalled by some graybeard survivor of this occasion that, most appropriately, the Chairman of this meeting was the beloved poet and critic who, more than any other of his generation in this swarming city of New York, has been called to uphold and has bravely upheld the supremacy and dignity of the intellectual life. Along with the tradition of his helpful kindness to the members of his own profession—a tradition which will remain as a standard for those who come after us—it will be gratefully recorded that the body of his criticism and the soul of his verse were united in public protest against the domination among us of mere things. And it is because this commemoration is in itself a reinforcement of the ideal mission of literature that we are here to-night to lay emphasis upon the success of a great cause advanced by many agencies working through many years, and at last owing its triumph to the support of the best public opinion. For, in the wise words of the Concord philosopher, "It is easy to see that whatever has been best written or done in the world was no man's work, but came by wide social labor, when a thousand wrought like one, sharing the same impulse." It has been thus in the contest for the principle of literary property, and the prominence at times of first one agency or person and then another only means that every reform has to be saved over and over again, once for every one of the hundred critical points that has to be passed. Whatever honor or credit may have come to those of us who have been in the thick of the fight, is not ours for ourselves, but only ours in trust for you and the larger company of those throughout the land who have been the support of this cause. I could name a dozen men at this board, and a dozen elsewhere, but for the aid of any one of whom at some critical time we should not have had the happy fortune that brings us here to-night.

There was at least one time, however, when the identification of one man with the success or failure of this movement was complete, when in fact its fortunes appeared to rest wholly and for many days upon the tact and devotion of one Senator. I can think of no parallel to the situation save the anecdote of Col. Jones' body-servant in St. Mary's Parish in Louisiana. A visitor, conveyed through the bayous of the Têche, inquired of his dusky boatman Wesley whether his former master was connected with the White League. "Cunnel Jones cunneck' wid de White League?" queried Wesley in unaffected astonishment. "Yes, a member of the League." "Cunnel Jones a member ob de White League? Cunnel Jones? Why, bress de Lord, massa, Cunnel Jones—Cunnel Jones am de White League." In those last despairing days in the Senate, Senator Platt was not merely in charge of the Copyright cause; he was the Copyright cause.

Now it is asked, "What have Americans gained by the success of this reform?"—as though it were necessary to show a ledger balance in order to justify our satisfaction. Let me reply, then, that what is chiefly valuable in this victory is that it is a protest against the crowding materialism of the time. It is a victory for national self-respect, and I believe the standing and progress of the nation is not less marked by self-respect than the standing and progress of the individual. Are we to say with Sir John Falstaff, chief of the materialists, that because honor cannot set a leg, we will have none of it? Who can estimate the increased respect for literature of the better class which shall follow upon the success of this cause? In truth, we are in much danger of being misled by the extraordinary vogue in America of the products of the printing-press, and of confounding the multiplication and the immensity of reading with the main considerations of the literary life—the quality of the authorship, and the attitude of the reader. That there is much curiosity in this country in regard to the literary profession, is good so far as it goes, but it is only the first stage in the evolution of that sympathetic audience which is necessary to sustain and stimulate a literary revival. There is reason to fear that books are more read than prized, and that in the very spread of unregarded books, the sacred calling of letters is in danger of losing something of its ideality in the eyes both of those who read and those who write. Poetry still remains an exception among us, but even the practice of it is confessed with shame among the petty vices, rather than glorified among the virtues. We are in this regard very far from a parallel to that respect for letters which is fabled of ancient Syracuse, in whose loathsome quarries the captive Athenian made his appeal for mercy in the name and in the language of the poets. Let Browning tell what a Masonic talisman was in the name of one great Greek among the enemies of Greece:

Of all these men immersed in misery,
It was found none had been advantaged so
By aught in the past life he used to prize
And pride himself concerning—no rich man
By riches; no wise man by wisdom—
As certain few that (wisest they of all)
Had, at first summons, oped heart, flung door wide;
At the new knocking of Euripides.
* * * * * * * *
Any such happy man had prompt reward.
If he lay bleeding on the battlefield
They stanched his wounds and gave him drink and food;
If he were slave i' the house, for reverence
They rose up, bowed to who proved master now,
And bade him go free, thank Euripides!

But this spirit is not wholly gone in our generation. Something of this chivalric feeling has permeated that great Republic of Europe which stands to-day as the inheritor of old Greece in mastery of the arts and in generous regard for intellectual progress. Forty years ago she testified this regard in extending without recompense, and to all nations, the freest hospitality of her literary marts. Our success is a tangible, though a tardy, return for this. The battle we have fought for justice is a battle also for freedom—for our freedom and her freedom, and in turning our face in the direction toward which she pointed in 1852, and in accepting the recognition she makes to all American friends of our cause, we have made between France and America a bond of sympathy which, let us trust, will never be broken. In return for her friendship and sympathy we give her our respect and love, and wish for her a long and honorable peace.

For her no backward look Into the bloody book
Of kings. Thrice-rescued land!
Her haunted graves bespeak
A nobler fate: to seek
In service of the world again the world's command.

She in whose skies of peace
Arise new auguries
To strengthen, cheer and guide—
When nations in a horde
Draw the unhallowed sword,
O Memory, walk a warning spectre at her side!

After Mr. Johnson's, the following speeches were delivered in the order printed:

HON. WILLIAM McADOO.

I thank Heaven that in New Jersey and other foreign countries there is now a law by which men have a property right in the products of their brains. My friend, Mr. Lodge, has alluded to the general fact that Congressmen as a rule get more kicks than halfpence. The passage of the Copyright bill in Congress was a very difficult matter. The opposition was very powerful, especially from the legislators from the West, where is a popular feeling against copyright in general, stimulated by the experience of Western people with patent laws. Our friends of the Farmers' Alliance have become very much prejudiced against the protection of the products of the brain, whether that product be a book or an invention of a material thing. What made their opposition hardet to overcome was that they could not seem to grasp the slightest idea of the scope of our International Copyright bill. They seemed to think that it would result in nothing more or less than a demand for higher prices on books of every kind, including the Pilgrim's Progress, Webster's Dictionary, City Directories, and the Holy Bible. There were other gentlemen, particularly on our side of the House, who have, as you know, pronounced ideas on the protective tariff. There were features of this bill which, I take it, would not be in consonance with their ideas for freedom of trade in the materials of which books are composed. To the credit of these be it said that they sank their ideas on that point in support of the abstract idea that the author had as much right to the product of his brain as had the creator of an invention. Looking back upon this campaign in behalf of International Copyright, considering the conscientious opposition it encountered, and its ultimate success, we cannot but be reminded to-night that the decalogue is not an iridescent dream.

You had, on the other hand, the support of quite a number of members of Congress who have no prejudice against cheapness, but believe that a book which is calculated so much to play a part in the education of the youth of the country should be filled with the tone of our nation. A cheap coat made in a foreign land does not play much part in forming the character of an American boy, but his worth as a future citizen depends, as I think you will admit, very largely on his being provided with a literature that is sound and patriotic.

Your sturdy craft, Copyright, was obliged to take other interests in tow. This bill never could have passed had not the support of the Typographical Union and other interests been secured. There was in the minds of us who supported that bill on purely abstract ideas, that in the Senate the encumbrances that would be placed upon it would endanger its passage. In Washington it was the prevailing opinion that the opponents of the abstract idea of copyright would kill the bill by loading it up in the Senate. I think that such would have been its fate had it not been for the work done by your Secretary, Robert Underwood Johnson, who proved himself to be a very Napoleon in organizing the various interests affected by the bill.

The public has not yet realized how important this bill is. I consider it by all odds the most important bill of the last Congress. It lies with you, authors and publishers, to say whether this matter of copyright shall ever again become a matter for legislation. You must give to the people of America a better literature, worthy of the intellect of a great and progressive people. You must give them a literature healthy in sentiment, and ennobling in its every paragraph. We look to you that no advantage shall be taken of the monopoly that was openly given to you of the American market, but that you shall deal with the American people so that we who have supported your bill can in future find no cause to face or answer those people who, while we were fighting for you, said to us that we were placing a tax upon the reading-matter of the American people. Do as you should do, and there will be no such opportunity given to the opponents of International Copyright to taunt us, but rather a constant demand that the bill shall be strengthened.

We did not put this bill on the statute-books because we wanted wholly to protect the foreigner, but because we wanted to protect the American author as well. You must expect in a national legislature to find laws being passed to protect the people of that nation primarily. Yet, to me, the most satisfactory feature of this bill is the fact that it will wipe out what has long been a stain on the national character, and will forever protect us from the charge that we are purloiners of the ideas of European brains. That charge has been too often made, and has not been without its effect upon the American people. I would not have answered for the safety of your bill before it became a law had that erratic author of England, Mr. Rudyard Kipling, published the stuff he has in regard to this country previous to the passage of the bill and had it been distributed throughout the cities which Mr. Kipling spoke so slanderously about by the opponents of the bill. When I speak of Mr. Kipling, I do not refer to him with any personal feeling, but I merely want to make plain to you that this International Copyright bill was made a law for the benefit of the American people. We were not forced into it to protect the interests of our own people, but adopted it as a proper measure of protection, and as a measure of fairness and equity to the authors of this and foreign countries.

GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM.

Looking over this noteworthy gathering of literary lions, among which a few publishing lambs have been permitted to browse, I recall to mind an International Convention held on the other side of the water which I attended many years ago. A good deal was said at that convention about International Copyright, and about an International cable. The cable finally became an actuality. The telegraph connection between the Eastern and the Western hemispheres was completed, and has done more than anything else to bring the people on both sides of the ocean into closer sympathy with each other. It has taken us ten times as long to lay our wires for International Copyright as it took to lay the cable wire, but we have at last succeeded, and I hope and believe that the copyright connection will in its way prove to be a stronger binding force between Europeans and Americans than the cable itself.

I ran across a letter, the other day, from my father, written in Washington in 1837. It stated that he had gone on there to fight for the Copyright bill, which he said he thought would be passed in two or three days. I believe that that is the earliest date that has been given here to-night as the starting-point for copyright agitation.

The time certainly has passed when only that is regarded by law as property which could be kept within the reach of the owner's club. It is progress, indeed, when so attackable a piece of property as intellectual conceptions should be equally recognized as personal property. The author has now secured for himself his share of the world's policemen. The author to-day is secure in all the countries of the world. He knows that no vampire publisher is lying in wait for him behind every corner waiting to suck the blood from his skull. Author and publisher are now in the same boat, but each handling his own skull. There is, it seems to me, a danger lest the author becomes puffed up now by collecting his enormous royalties. In these days to come, when every author occupies his palace, let us hope that the humble publisher may be allowed a small lodge at the gate of the author's preserve, from which they will still be permitted to watch the incomings and the outgoings of literature.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS.

These snowdrifts on my cheeks attest the lapse of time which gives me on this occasion an interest which perhaps there are not many at the table who can share. I go back even beyond the half century ago to which your President has alluded. I was a member of the still earlier Copyright Association, and I feel, therefore, at this moment, as if I presented myself to you as an ambassador from the struggling and scattered soldiers of yesterday, bearing their solicitations to the triumphant army of to-day.

As Mr. Putnam was speaking, I remembered that there is among my books a little paper-covered one, one of Hawthorne's priceless gems, which I prize very highly. It was a copy of a first edition and was printed by the house of which Mr. Putnam's father was the head. I value it for two reasons: it has the autographic inscription on the cover "from his friend, the author," a declaration which I cherish with something of the same feeling, I am sure, as your Secretary, Mr. Johnson, entertains towards the cross from the Legion of Honor which has been given to him by the Republic of France for his work in behalf of International Copyright. The other reason why I value it is because on its cover, as upon the covers of all the books, I believe, that the Putnams have issued, is printed an extract calling for international copyright.

Our young friend, George Haven Putnam, did therefore but seize the torch from his father's hand. He has waved it aloft, dispelling the ignorance of this country, until to-night he sees it planted as a beacon of victory. Born a publisher, he was brought up on the idea that the author and the publisher are friends and not foes. He was educated in the faith that the American author has rights which the American people are bound to respect. Bred an honest man, he understood that the rights of the American author should not be respected so long as the rights of the foreign author were denied.

If Mr. Putnam will allow me, and the rest of you gentlemen who are publishers will allow me, I will say that Mr. Putnam is a fair representative of the sagacity and energy of the publishing interest in this country, to which this final victory for International Copyright is largely due. I praise my friend, but surely, gentlemen, there is praise enough for all the Knights at this goodly table. We surely may say in this case that "to divide is not to take away." The honors, in our rejoicing, it seems to me, are easy. Without concession and compromise, there could have been no success. If the publishers had opposed, if the printers had refused, if the senators and representatives who have so skilfully guided this shivering bill through the ambuscades of Congress had faltered or failed, we should not be here at this moment cheerful, cheering and cheered. For myself, I am in the humor of congratulating Congress simply for doing right. They had a hard time of it. We have heard from my friends, Mr. Lodge and Mr. Platt, that whatever Congress does it does by a majority, and it is sure to be criticised by the other side. The situation in which we now find ourselves is very like that which reminds me of a little anecdote of Agassiz. He was in California at the time. A friend of mine, who was there then, wrote me a letter in which he spoke of California as "an unclouded Paradise." When Agassiz returned, I spoke to him of my friend's reference to California as an unclouded Paradise, and frankly asked him to tell me the other side. "Why, bless you," he answered, "there is no other side!" Since the passage of the bill I have been waiting to hear the cry of the unbelievers, but in vain. There is no other side now on the copyright question. We are all on the side of fair play.

Senator Platt referred to an incident which I think was of very great importance to this movement. I refer to the visit of Dickens to this country. He came here to see the great nation which honored and loved him, but he came also to plead for a great moral cause. I can remember his coming, and how, as it were, we ran to the ship, and put him on our shoulders, and carried him out, and dined him and wined him, and wreathed him, and danced before him, and finally gave him a ball at the old Park Theatre. In modern days, we would say we painted the town red. I remember the prodigious red waistcoat Mr. Dickens wore on that occasion. It was so heartily in sympathy with the occasion itself.

It was the unanimous feeling in this country that our show of good feeling for the author was to be taken as payment in full for every copy of his books which we had read and for the pleasure of reading which we had not paid him a cent. His career here opened by a dinner in Boston. As I remember, everything passed off very pleasantly there. The only serious response, I think, of the occasion we owe to the wit of Senator Evarts. He did not go to the dinner, but he sent this telegram: "Our illustrious guest. He wears laurels upon his brows. May our American laws enable him to browse upon his laurels." The position of this country was strictly that of Dick Swiveler. We implored Dickens to forget everything but friendship. Dear Mr. Dickens, we substantially said to him, "Fan the expiring flame of friendship with the wing of genius and pass the cup along." I think, upon the whole, there never was a more comical episode in our history; and I never yet have met the American who confessed he was proud of it. After fifty years we begin to make our reply to Dickens. After fifty years we begin to put him, as it were, where he thought he rightfully should be put. In putting him there, we placed ourselves by his side. We no longer say to him what we said then, when our argument substantially was: "Mr. Dickens, your genius after all is only a pretty trick by which you produce new effects with old words. Mr. Dickens, you are engaged in the enterprise of endeavoring to establish the idea of property in ideas. Mr. Dickens, if you do not wish your property to be confiscated you can always refrain from producing it."

A little less than twenty-five years ago Mr. Dickens came to this country again. The change was very great. The sentiment was very different from that which he encountered on his first visit. I have always felt that it was his perception of the fact that the great and generous people who in the interval between that time and his first visit had abolished human slavery would not stop at the righting of one wrong. It seemed to me that he was assured that that people would presently take another step and decline to fine their citizens for bringing into this country noble works of fine art. I think possibly he thought this people would presently reform their degraded and selfish system of civil service, and it may possibly have occurred to him that that people would have simple justice done in the cause of equal property, whether it be the production of the hand or of the brain. You remember the words of the Eastern sage in the story: "Be just if you would have the blessings of the gods, for the blessings of the gods are only the fruits of justice."

The dinner lasted until late, with remarks by Dana Estes, of Boston, Geo. P. Lathrop, the first Secretary of the League, and others, but the general rejoicing over the Copyright law kept up the enthusiasm to the high level of the oratory. Much of the success of the evening's entertainment was due to the masterly direction of the chairman, Mr. E. C. Stedman.

THE MEMOIRS OF TALLEYRAND.

THE authenticity of the Memoirs having been called into question by certain newspaper reports, the publishers direct attention to the fact that the present publication is made from an attested copy of the original memoirs of Talleyrand, as left in the hands of his executors, M. Ad. de Bacourt and the Duchesse de Talleyrand et de Sagan.

The editor of the Memoirs, the Duc de Broglie makes the following statement in his preface:

"No precaution whatever was thought superfluous by the Duchesse de Talleyrand and M. de Bacourt; and, in order to render all challenge or confusion impossible, M. de Bacourt undertook to transcribe with his own hand the text of the memoirs, as he had received it from M. de Talleyrand, with the complementary notes and documents.

"This copy is mentioned in the inventory of the papers of M. de Bacourt, subjoined to his will in the following terms:

"'Four volumes, bound in leather, which form the only complete and authentic copy of Prince Talleyrand's Memoirs, done by M. de Bacourt from the original manuscripts, dictated documents, and copies whose purpose M. de Talleyrand had indicated to him.'

"Furthermore the first of these four volumes bears on its last page the following declaration:

"'I, the undersigned, testamentary executrix of my late uncle, Charles Maurice, Prince de Talleyrand, declare and certify that the present folio volume, containing five hundred and one hand-written pages, comprises the only original, complete and faithful copy of the first five parts of his memoirs, and of a fragment on the Duc de Choiseul left by the Prince de Talleyrand-Perigord.

"'DOROTHEE DE COURLANDE,

"'Duchesse de Talleyrand et de Sagan.

"'SAGAN, May 20, 1858.'

"A declaration similar in all respects and bearing the same signature, closes the second volume.

"At the end of the third, it is M. de Bacourt, sole survivor, who thus expresses himself:

"'I, the undersigned, testamentary executor of the late Prince Charles Maurice de Talleyrand-Perigord, and of the Duchesse de Talleyrand et de Sagan, Princesse de Courlande, declare and certify that the present folio volume of five hundred and six manuscript pages comprises the sole original, complete and authentic copy of the eighth, ninth and tenth parts of the memoirs left by Prince Charles Maurice de Talleyrand-Perigord.

"'AD. DE BACOURT.

"'BADEN, January 20, 1863.'

"No declaration is found at the end of the forth volume, for the reason that the last part of this volume was to have been completed by subjoined extracts, whose complete transcription was not accomplished when death overtook M. de Bacourt.

"It is from the text prepared for press by the very people whom M. de Talleyrand had charged with doing so, and according to the instructions that they held of him, that the present publication is made. Neither suppression, nor even toning down, have in any degree been allowed."

A cablegram from Paris to the New York Tribune, dated April 5, 1891, gives the following statement by the Hon. Whitelaw Reid, the American Minister to France: "Here is the whole matter in a nutshell: M. Bacourt and the Duchess Dinot, the literary executors of Talleyrand, copied the originals for reasons having no material bearing on the matter, and declared the copy exact. The statement of the Duc de Broglie that he has perfect faith in the genuineness of the Memoirs ought to have great weight. I have been brought into personal relation with the Duc de Broglie, and his honesty is beyond question."

MODERN BOOKBINDING.

From the Athenæum.

THE small collection of modern bookbinding on exhibition at the Caxton Head, 232 High Holborn, offers a valuable opportunity for comparing the work of the better-known binders, especially as the specimens were not executed with a view to exhibition, and therefore afford a fairly trustworthy test of the individual taste of each workman.

The foreign bindings, with the exception of the French, do not call for much notice. No 25, by Sperling, of Leipzig, shows some wonderful tooling, although the general appearance of the binding is poor; and No. 27, by Van den Heuvel, of the Hague, is well designed. Mensing, of Amsterdam, sends an imitation of sixteenth century work in stamped pigskin (No. 29), a style we sincerely hope may never be revived; and Giuseppe, of Venice (No. 33), an imitation of early Venetian work with sunk panels.

The French binders, as a rule, are represented by very plain work, remarkable for the solidity and polish of the morocco and the wonderful gilding of the edges. The bindings of Cuzin, Gruel & Engelmann, and Lortic, are especially excellent. It is worth noticing that all these binders retain the old French habit of gilding the edges over marble.

The English bindings, which form the greater part of the exhibition, show a want of taste, especially in color, and a tendency to overmuch decoration. They have none of that restraint so characteristic of the best French work. A binding in the Roger Payne style (No. 6), by Morrell, though perhaps a little heavy, shows good taste, and a dark-green binding by Rivière (No. 9) is also good. A pretty binding by Zaehnsdorf (No. 12) is rather in the style of Mr. Cobden Sanderson, who unfortunately is not represented in the exhibition. The doublure of No. 31, by Marcus Ward, of Belfast, is very good; but by far the most tasteful piece of work in the whole collection is No. 34, by Henderson & Bisset, of Edinburgh, the tooling and the choice of colors being both excellent.

The specimens of embroidered covers show great diversity, the finest, perhaps, being No. 37, worked by Miss Bloxam, remarkable both for its design and execution. No. 36, by Mrs. Brownlow, is also fine work, but hardly so successful either in design or color.

Mr. and Mrs. Tregaskis deserve the thanks of all collectors for their energy in bringing together this little exhibition, which, besides the mere pleasure it gives, will help to teach amateurs the useful and much-needed lesson that the binders with the best names do not always produce the best work.

NEW OFFICERS OF THE TYPOTHETÆ.

AT the annual meeting of the Typothetæ, held on the 14th inst., at their rooms at No. 19 Park Place, New York, the following officers were elected: William C. Martin, President; Theodore L. De Vinne and Douglas Taylor, Vice-Presidents; William Charles Rogers, Corresponding Secretary; E. Parke Coby, Recording Secretary; John Polhemus, Treasurer; R. Harmer Smith, Henry Bessey, James W. Pratt and J. Faulkner, Executive Committee. A delegation of the society afterward called upon Mr. Martin, who is now eighty-one years old, and who is just recovering from a severe attack of pneumonia, to inform him of his re-election.

OBITUARY NOTES.

CHARLES S. PLUMMER.

IT is with the deepest regret that we note the death of Charles S. Plummer, at his home in Newark, N. J., on the 15th inst., at the age of forty-eight years. Mr. Plummer was born in Boston, January 24, 1843. . e served in the War of the Rebellion in the Forty-fourth Regiment Mass. Vols. In 1864 he travelled for Cutter, Tower & Co., whom he left to go with Gurney & Co., photographers, of New York. In 1865 he married and went on the road for Robert Johnson, dealer in gentlemen's furnishing goods. Two years later he settled in Newark, N. J., where for several years he had the agency for the Cornwell Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of stationers' hardware and novelties. He afterwards came to New York and travelled for May, Hard & Co. and Ph. Hake, and was in his day one of the most popular and best known men on the road. At the close of 1882 he entered the firm of Evans, Plummer & Co., from which he retired two years later to return to Hake's. In 1890 he went into business on his own account as manufacturers' agent of novelties and fine stationery at 397 Broadway, N. Y. He was prominent in the organization of the Brotherhood of Commercial Travellers, of which he was the first President, and of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association, and took an active part in every movement to raise the standard of the trade with which he was connected, or to alleviate the suffering of his comrades. Several years ago he published, through Belford, Clarke & Co., his "Leaves from a Drummer's Diary," in which he gave a number of instances of the rare humor that was one of his distinguishing characteristics, and which made him the centre and the very life almost of every social gathering that he attended. While he was with Gurney he was also a member of Mrs. John Wood's Company at the Olympic Theatre, of which John A. Duff was manager. He was a Master and Royal Arch Mason and a member of Damascus Commandery, Knights Templar, of Newark. He was also a member of Lincoln Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of that city. He leaves a widow and a daughter. The funeral will take place on the 19th.

At a meeting of the B. C. T., held at the office of J. F. Hitchcock on the afternoon of the 17th, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, Almighty God, in the dispensation of his divine laws, has removed from amongst us our beloved brother and ex-President, CHARLES S. PLUMMER, who was the father of this organization,

Resolved, That we recognize in him one with many virtues, beloved by all who knew him, a true man, filled with kindness, and a manifest desire to benefit all with whom he came in contact.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family in this, their hour of affliction, assuring them that we mourn with them in this, their great and irreparable loss.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread in full upon our records, and that a copy be engrossed and sent to the family.

JOHN A. MCQUILLAN, President.
JOHN HOVENDON, Secretary.

JOSEPH LORD, the oldest bookseller in Albany, N. Y., died April 10 of pneumonia, aged seventy-seven years. His first business, over fifty years ago, was selling ladies' fine shoes, but he gradually drifted into the book and stationery trade, and built up a business which has continued at the same place, 19 Philip Street, for nearly half a century. He was one of the oldest prominent Methodists of Albany, and his bookstore was a depository of the Methodist Book Concern and recognized as the headquarters for religious publications. He leaves a widow and one daughter.

WE regret to learn of the death of Mrs. H. O. Houghton, wife of the senior member of Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Mrs. Houghton had been ill but a few days, and succumbed to pneumonia on the 14th inst., at her home in Cambridge, Mass. Her maiden name was Nanna W. Manning, and she was born in Worcester. She subsequently lived in Boston up to the time of her marriage in 1855. During her early married life she was a teacher in the Cambridge High School for a number of years. She was President of the Cambridge branch of the Massachusetts Indian Association, and was one of the directors of the Cambridge Hospital, as well as of the Social Union, of which she was one of the founders. She was a member of the Cambridge Shakespeare Club and of several other local social associations. Beside her husband, one son and three daughters survive her.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

"BUTTERFLYFLUTTERBY and Flutterbybutterfly" is the strange title of a story in two parts, by William Dean Howells, that begins in Harper's Young People this week. The story is amusingly illustrated by Frank Verbeck.

THE AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR THE EXTENSION OF UNIVERSITY TEACHING, founded in response to a widespread demand for a national association which could assist in promoting the work of university extension, will publish a journal to be called University Extension, which will serve as a medium of communication between the national society and the local branches, and which will contain full accounts of the progress of the work in every field. The men in charge of the work include many of the ablest educators and men of affairs in this country. Provost Pepper, of the University of Pennsylvania, who has been foremost in the work; President Angell, of Michigan; Dr. Curry, of Peabody Educational Fund; Hon. W. T. Harris, United States Commissioner of Education; Professor Boyesen, of Columbia College; President Jordan, of the Stanford University; President Chamberlin, of Wisconsin;

President Adams, of Cornell University; and President Gates, of Amherst, are among the Advisory Committee.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ELLENDALE, N. D.—H. A. Christianson will soon close out his stock of books.

MATTOON, ILL.—Charles E. Rudy has sold his bookstore.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Edsten & Giverston, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

NEW YORK CITY.—Hans Mischke, formerly of Beekman Street, has removed to 2 and 4 Barclay Street (under the Astor House), the store formerly occupied by Bonaventure. Mr. Mischke has enlarged the scope of his business, and will carry, in addition to his specialty—fine art books and engravings—a line of best editions, English, German and French, as well as a first-class stock of second-hand books. Mr. Mischke's ambition is to get into the front rank of the booksellers of New York, and he seems to be "getting there" rapidly.

NORTHWOOD, IA.—George M. Emery has succeeded to the book business of Emery & Emery.

ROANOKE, VA.—J. Payne Thompson and W. S. Gooch have formed a copartnership under the firm-name of Thompson & Co., and will open a book and stationery store at this place.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—Margetts Bros., booksellers and stationers, have removed to larger quarters at 40 South Main Street. This new store is large, handsome, well lighted and elegantly furnished, well stocked with fine stationery, books and everything else usually found within the walls of a first-class stationery store.

SHELBYVILLE, TENN.—C. W. Cunningham, agent, bookseller, has been burned out.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—The Pierce Book and Paper Company is a new corporation organized to do a wholesale and retail stationery business.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Benedict & Wallace, of the Bible Publishing House, have been burned out.

PRACTICAL NOTES.

[WE should be pleased to have for this department contributions from the trade of "wrinkles," labor-saving devices, or of any method by which the work of the bookseller is made easier or more effective.—ED.]

BOOK-TAG.—Mr. W. H. Parker, with Estes & Lauriat, has invented a "Book-Tag," of which we give an illustration herewith. It a is neat and simple device made of several layers of substantial manilla paper, and may be used for a number of purposes. Its chief use will probably be to call a customer's attention to the book or set, and to announce the price. It has been found by experience that a counter full of books, or a few books on a counter or in a window, with the prices prominently displayed upon them, are generally sold first. The price upon a book is always a tempting bait, and many a bashful customer is thus induced to come into the store to buy, who would otherwise pass on. The tag has a long stub that goes deep into the book, so that the volume may be handled freely, and looked through without danger of losing the tag. The tag we understand is furnished at a low price in quantities. Mr. W. H. Parker may be addressed at 305 Washington Street, Boston, for further particulars.

DUSTER.—One of the best dusters, if not the best duster, for use in a bookstore is the flat Woven-down Duster manufactured by C. D. Babcock, 25 Ann St., N. Y. This duster may easily be inserted between the top of a row of books and the shelf over it, and the dust carefully removed and carried out-of-doors without scattering over other parts of the store. The original cost is but a trifle more than that of the common duster, which cannot be used to the same advantage. It is made by hand, from fine downs, and will not scratch or mar the softest or most highly polished article. With an active person at the handle stock, showcases can easily be kept clean at a minimum expenditure of time.

A BOOKSELLER'S ORDER-BOOK.—The following form is used in a blank-book prepared for the use of booksellers and newsdealers by Charles D. Raymer, of Minneapolis, Minn. Whether prepared by the dealer himself, or ordered through Mr. Raymer, who furnishes them at a small advance over the cost of an ordinary blank-book, the form seems to be practical and time-saving.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have just published a complete illustrated catalogue of their scientific works. It contains a full description of each book, together with comments by eminent critics.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have recently issued an edition of an English work entitled "The Science of Fairy Tales," by Edwin Sidney Hartland, which contains an admirable bibliography on the subject of fairy mythology.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO. have just ready "The English Catalogue of Books for 1890," containing as usual a complete list of all the books published in Great Britain and Ireland in the year 1890, with their sizes, prices and publishers' names, with the addition of an index to subjects. (120 p. 8°, pap.) The office of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY can supply a few more copies of the second lot, now under way, the first having been exhausted before its arrival here. The English Catalogue may be had alone in paper, or bound in half leather with the "Annual Catalogue."

MACMILLAN & BOWES, the well-known booksellers of Cambridge, England, have just issued the first part of a Catalogue of Books printed at, or relating to, the University, Town, or County of Cambridge. It covers the early period from 1521 to 1700; and is to be followed by two other parts, dealing with the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Though it does not profess to be more than a bookseller's catalogue, containing only those books in the possession of the compilers, it may almost take rank as a Bibliographia Cantabrigiensis, from the number of volumes enumerated, the extreme rarity of not a few of them, and the minute details given. The entire collection is for sale—by preference, in one lot. 4+103 p. (347 titles), 8°, pap.

Catalogues of New and Second-hand Books.—F. A. Brockhaus, Leipzig, Mittheilungen über neueste Verlagssachen. (1891 No. 1, 16 p. 16°.)—A. J. Crawford, 312 N. 7th St., St. Louis, Mo., Scarce Americana, law, medical and theological. (No. 23. 1043 titles.)—A. E. Foote, 4116 Elm Ave., Phila., Minerals, scientific and medical books. (4 p. 8°.)—John Galwey, 17 Garrick St., W. C., London, Miscellaneous. (No. 6, 280 titles.)—Goodenough & Woglom Co.'s (122 Nassau St., N. Y.) Annual Catalogue of Sunday-school books, cards and supplies. (64 p, 16°.)—J. Hess, Ellwangen, Würtemberg, Incunabeln, Holzschnittwerke des 15. u. 16. Jahrhunderts, including a fine copy of the Vocabularium latino-teutonicum, printed in 1469 from the type used by Gutenberg in printing the Catholicon in 1460; a fine edition of a parchment edition of Boniface printed by Peter Schöffer in 1473; and many other equally rare books. (No. 30, 294 titles.)—S. B. Luyster, 98 Nassau St., N. Y., Miscellaneous. (No. 177, 340 titles.)—Joseph McDonough, 53 State St., Albany, N. Y., Miscellaneous. (No. 70, 1633 titles.)—Orange Judd Co., 52 Lafayette Pl., N. Y., New illustrated catalogues of rural books. (112 p. 8°.)—James Roche, 38 New Oxford St., W. C., London, Miscellaneous special cheap list. (No. 71, 881 titles.)—A. Twietmeyer, 23 Queerstrasse, Leipzig, A valuable antiquarian catalogue of books in the departments of history, geography, genealogy, numismatics, and the science of war. (No. 102, 2052 titles.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

B. HERDER has published "Instructions for First Confession," from the German of F. H. Jaegers.

MICHAEL WALSH, editor of the Sunday Democrat, 21 Park Row, N. Y., has published a reply to W. H. Hurlbert's "Ireland Under Coercion," entitled "Hurlbert Unmasked: an exposure of the 'thumping English lies' of W. H. Hurlbert," by the Rev. P. White.

JOHN GILMARY SHEA has finished the third volume of his great "History of the Catholic Church within the Limits of the United States." This new volume covers the period from 1815–1843, and contains a great number of portraits, views, maps, and fac-similes.

A YOUNG Englishman, on the pretence of being a brother of Walter Besant, has recently succeeded in swindling a number of persons in Philadelphia, Princeton and Boston. He is said to be at present in New York City operating under the name of "Wilfred H. Besant, of 32 De Vere Gardens, South Kensington, London, S. W."

MR. JAMES SCHOULER is reading the proofs of the fifth volume of his "History of the United States," and it is to be issued by Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Company in the autumn. This volume covers the period from 1847 to 1861, bringing the work down to the beginning of the Civil War and completing it in accordance with the original plan.

KEPPLER & SCHWARZMANN will publish at once James L. Ford's "Hypnotic Tales" now running in Puck. The volume will include other sketches by Mr. Ford, and will be illustrated by C. Jay Taylor, Sydney B. Griffin and Fred. Opper. In form, size and price it will resemble Bunner's "Short Sixes" published by this firm a few months ago.

THE two next volumes to appear in the Adventure Series published in this country by Macmillan & Co. are: "Klepht and Warrior," translated from the Greek by Mrs. Edwards, with an introduction by M. J. Gennadius, Hellenic minister at the Court of St. James; and "The Travels of Ferdinand Mendez Pinto," the Portuguese adventurer, annotated by Prof. Arminius Vambéry.

IN a Broadway stationer's window there is a white card displayed with a pen tied to the bottom of it. Printed on this card in big letters are the words: "The Pen with which the Declaration of Independence was Signed." Of course a great many people stop and go close to the window to look at the curiosity when they discover these additional words in small type: "is no better than our fountain pens," and recognize how deceptive are the things of this world.

Progressive Springfield (published by C. W. Bryan & Co., Springfield, Mass.) in its April issue gives an account of King, Richardson & Co., successful subscription-book publishers of that city. The books with which their names are most closely connected are: "Our Home," by Charles E. Sargent, with an introduction by Mrs. Garifield; "The Cottage Physician," by Drs. Faulkner and Carmichael; "Echoes of '61," by W. C. King and W. P. Derby; the "Enyclopædia of Business;" and "Manners, Culture and Dress," by Prof. R. A. Wells. Portraits and views of their business establishment accompany the article.

THE first book published in California was a catechism printed at Monterey in 1823. The name of the publisher was Zamorano, and the type used had been imported from Mexico. It was followed by a school-book from the same press in 1835, and in 1837 General Vallejo published in Sonoma (from a hand-press) a vigorous pamphlet advocating the removal of the capital to the bay of San Francisco. From the beginning of the "Fifties" until the present date, no fewer than 2000 volumes have been published in this young State, or by Californians elsewhere, not including many hundred law-books and about 1000 important pamphlets.

REV. JAMES CONWAY, Canisius College, Buffalo, N. Y., is preparing an English version of the "Handbook of the Christian Religion," by Rev. Father Wilmer, S.J., for the use of Catholic colleges and other higher institutions of learning. This work is considered one of the best of the many excellent manuals of the kind in use in Germany and Austria. The editor has considerably reduced its volume by omitting whatever seemed to be of minor importance to the student, and has introduced various improvements, which will render it an excellent text-book for American colleges and academies. Benziger Brothers hope to have it ready in the fall.

BENZIGER BROTHERS have recently issued: "Letters," volume 18 of the Centenary Edition of St. Alphonsus' Works; "Counsels of St. Angela to Her Sisters in Religion;" "St. Joseph, short meditations for March," by Rev. Richard F. Clarke; "Devotion of the Seven Sundays in Honor of St. Joseph;" "Saints of the Society of Jesus," by Rev. D. A. Merrick. They have in press, for immediate publication, "Percy Wynn, or, making a boy of him," an excellent story of college boy life, by Francis J. Finn; "Readings and Recitations for Juniors," by Miss Eleanor O'Grady, author of "Aids to Correct and Effective Elocution," etc.; "How to Get On," a book of sound advice to young people, by Rev. Bernard Feeney; "A Martyr of Our Own Times—life of Rev. Just de Bretenières, Vicar Apostolic and Martyr in Corea; "Month of the Holy Face of Jesus," by the Sisters of the Divine Compassion; "Simplicity in Prayer," from the French of the author of "Les Petites Fleurs," by a Daughter of St. Francis de Sales; and the "New Third Reader," which completes the new series of the Catholic National Readers. They have also in press, to be published in the fall, vols. 7 and 8 of Hunolt's Sermons, "The Good Christian."

W. H. LOWDERMILK & CO., Washington, D. C., will publish May 1, "Scatalogic Rites of all Nations: a dissertation upon the employment of excrementitious remedial agents in religion, therapeutics, divination, witchcraft, love philters, etc., in all parts of the globe," by Capt. John G. Bourke, U. S. Army, author of "The Snake Dance of the Moquis," etc. This claims to be a thorough and exhaustive treatise on a remarkable and little known subject. To quote from the author's preface: "From the moment when the disgusting 'Urine Dance' of the Zuñis was performed in the author's presence down to the hour of concluding this work, a careful examination has been made of more than one thousand treatises of various kinds and all sizes from the musty, pig-skin covered, black letter of the 15th century to the more modest but not less valuable pamphlet of later years. These treatises have covered the field of primitive religion, medicine and magic, and have likewise included a most liberal portion of the best books of travel and observation among primitive peoples in every part of the world; not only English authorities, but also the writings of the best French, Spanish, German, Latin, Greek, Arabic and Celtic authors are here presented, together with an examination of what has come down to us from leaders of Eastern religious thought and from the monastic 'leeches' of the Anglo-Saxons." The book has an especial value in that it fills a heretofore existing gap in socialistic science, and must therefore command the attention of every one interested in that important study.

MACMILLAN & CO. have now extended their system of net prices to the English Illustrated Magazine, which is no longer supplied to booksellers, etc., on terms that will allow them to sell it at less than sixpence.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & CO. announce the publication of a drama, entitled "Rosmer of Rosmersholm," by an anonymous author, who is bold enough to write out at full the antecedent history of the characters in Ibsen's play.

GILBERT & RIVINGTON, London, announce a typographical curiosity, "The Lord's Prayer" printed in three hundred different languages or dialects, together with an introduction by Dr. Reinhold Rost, the learned librarian at the India Office.

A STRANGE union exists at Vienna; all its members follow the calling of collecting subscriptions to newspapers, magazines, and books published in parts, and are also lending a helping hand in their sending-off. The union celebrated the anniversary of its foundation a few weeks ago.

WARD & DOWNEY, London, have just published a new story by W. Westall, entitled "Back to Africa." Mr. Westall has also just completed, in conjunction with Stepniak, a translation of Korolenko's "In Two Moods," which Ward & Downey will publish this month.

MOSCOW has now a bibliographical and book-trade society, at the head of which stands N. Z. Nosson, a well-known Russian bibliophile. The erection of a bibliographical museum is intended, to collect books and subjects relating to the book-trade, letterpress and lithographic printing, bookbinding, etc.

IT is proposed to purchase the entire valuable collection of books on printing, printers, typefounders, etc., gathered together by the late Wm. Blades, the printer antiquarian, with a view to placing it in a suitable building as a "Museum of Printing." We trust this may be carried out, as it would be a pity to have so unique and valuable a collection scattered.

PERCIVAL & CO. have nearly ready a volume of "Essays on French Novelists," by Mr. George Saintsbury. Besides an introductory essay on "The Present State of the French Novel," the authors dealt with are Anthony Hamilton, Alain René Lesage, Charles de Bernard, Alexandre Dumas, Théophile Gautier, Jules Sandeau, Octave Feuillet, Gustave Flaubert, Henry Murger and Victor Cherbuliez.

The Co-operative Index to Periodicals for 1890.

This work is a key to the contents of nearly one hundred representative magazines and periodicals published in the English language in the United States and Great Britain. It has been prepared by W: I. Fletcher, of Amherst College (the editor of Poole's Index), who has had the co-operation of nearly forty members of the American Library Association.

To the literary worker its value can hardly be overestimated ; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field ; to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time ; and to the bookseller it is of the greatest practical value, as it enables him to look up at once any inquiries for magazine articles, no matter how the question is asked.

Now issued as an annual, the index to the whole year being in one alphabet, by title of article or subject, supplemented by an author index, the work has reached its most complete stage of development.

The price has been fixed at $2.50 in half morocco, $2.00 in paper.

THE FRENCH INVASION OF IRELAND IN 179

LEAVES OF UNWRITTEN HISTORY

That Tell of an Heroic Endeavor and a Lost Opportunity to Throw England's Yoke.

BY VALERIAN GRIBAYÉDOFF.

With a Map and numerous Illustrations by well-known Artists. Authorities and Index.

Handsomely printed on heavy paper; good margins, large type, widely spaced; and bound in cloth, ink and gold side and back stamps. 14 full-page and 10 smaller illustrations.

Cloth, - - - - 12mo, $1.50.

PRESS NOTICES.

Tribune (N. Y.) says: "Nearly all who have written on this or any other episode of the Irish Rebellion of 1798 have been moved more by partisanship than by single-minded desire to set forth the truth. . . . The present writer has evidently sought to give his readers a true statement of the French invasion."

Sun (N. Y.) says: "An admirable account of the French invasion of Ireland. . . . The literary quality is excellent. The narrative is orderly, clear, vivid, the English entirely accurate and handled gracefully, and with a very nice understanding. . . . It is a curious, interesting and valuable story which Mr. Gribayédoff has put together."

The Nation (N. Y.) says: An eminently readable and useful book that should find a place in every library making any pretensions to completeness regarding British history. The illustrations are admirable."

JULIAN HAWTHORNE in Lippincott's Magazine says: 'The style of this book is so pure, strong and idiomatic, that one marvels how a writer born and educated foreign country could have produced it. The sp color and vivacity of the narrative are Mr. Gribayéd own. The volume is so tersely and compactly done, nothing could be added to it; and no one who cares thoroughly enjoyable reading on a captivating and hackneyed subject will neglect to possess himself of i

Topic (N. Y.) says: "History receives a valu addition to its archives in this publication. Link by the author has forged a chain of evidence which is only convincing in its argument, but is put togethe such a manner that it is as valuable to the bibliophil it is to the lover of Irish history and the enthusiast in matter of Irish liberty."

Freeman's Journal (Dublin) says: "This descript taken from unpublished papers and recondite sour is one of the most vivid in military narrative."

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS.

Their History, Religion, Philosophy, and Maxims of Self-Control, Self-Culture, Benevolence and Justice. With citations of authors quoted from on each page; full list of authorities and copious index. By FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND. Large type, widely spaced, heavy paper, broad margins, extra cloth, 12mo, 248 pp., $1.25.

"Read the philosophers, and learn how to make life happy, seeking useful precepts and brave and noble words which may become deeds."—SENECA.

"The 'Reign of the Stoics' is a thoroughly accurate, well classified, and valuable compend of the Stoic teachings in philosophy, ethics, and religion, together with a fine summary of their history as a system. No better book on the subject can be found."—Prof. F. E. ABBOT, Boston, Mass.

HOW TO PRESERVE HEALTH.

By LOUIS BARKAN, M.D. Bound in cloth, $1.

". . . I regard your book as the most sound, se ble and useful book on the topics which it discusses t I have met with. I wish it could be in the hands of ev intelligent head of a family and in the library of ev school, for I think it would popularize a vast amount important and useful knowledge. I am particula pleased with one feature of it: that it does not profes teach dosing and drugging, which our anxious gra mothers and others, lacking the requisite element knowledge, are too prone to indulge in, and oftentimes great harm thereby."—FORDYCE BARKER, M.D., Profes Bellevue Medical College, N. TOLD IN THE HILLS.

By MARAH ELLIS RYAN.

"It seemed about time that we should hear something in the way of romance from the Kootenai Hills and Chinook Forests of Montana and Idaho. The story has come; 'Told in the Hills' is its title; it is by Marah Ellis Ryan, and there is music in it."—New York Metropolis.

"The character of Stuart is one of the finest that has been drawn by an American woman for many a day, and it is depicted with an appreciation hardly to be expected even from a man."—Boston Herald.

"Mrs. Ryan's story is a wonderfully clever novel, opening up a new field . . . Now exciting, now pathetic, now amusing; but always fresh, bright and interesting."—Spirit of the Times.

"One of the cleverest stories that has been issued in many a moon."—Kansas City Times.

"The story is breezy with the mountain atmosphere, is natural as the scenery which its actors view, and is dramatic to a degree."—Boston Times.

"There are glimpses of rare art in this remarkable story."—Chicago America.

CRIQUETTE.

By LUDOVIC HALÉVY, author of "The Abbé Constantin." Translated by Arthur D. Hall.

"An artistic gem."—Chicago Times.

"Quite as meritorious as was 'The Abbé Constantin.'"—Buffalo Tidings.

"Very pathetic as well as dramatic."—Brooklyn Eagle.

"Marked by excellent taste and a great deal of delicacy, while at the same time it is strong and vigorous. —San Francisco Chronicle.

HAVE JUST ISSUED:

The Old Navy and the New.

By REAR-ADMIRAL DANIEL AMMEN, U.S.N., author of "The Atlantic Coast During the Civil War." With an Appendix of Personal Letters from General Grant. 8vo, cloth, $3.00.

"During the more than half a century covered by this chronicle, so marvellous have been the changes in naval architecture and armament, in the development of means of locomotion both on shore and afloat, and in the establishment of rapid communication over the whole inhabited globe, that the intelligent reader can hardly realize that they have occurred within so brief an historical period of time. A principal object of the memoirs has been to note these mutations in their order, and to present a picture of naval life as affected by them. It has also been the author's intention to make the narrative as impersonal as possible, representative not only of his own experience, but also of that of many other officers, varying from his only in time and circumstances."—Preface.

Man-Immortal.

An Allegorical Poem. By WM. STITT TAYLOR. With Portrait of the Author. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top and rough edges, $2.00.

The author discusses his lofty theme by means of a series of colloquies between Immortality and Nature, Time, Death, the Grave, Hell, and Man respectively. The style is dignified and elevated, in harmony with the sublime nature of the subject, and the poem is ennobling and inspiring.

Country Luck.

By JOHN HABBERTON, author of "Brueton's Bayou," etc. New edition in paper covers. 12mo, 50 cents.

"Mr. Habberton has given us a thoroughly fresh and healthy story of American life in 'Country Luck,' which it is a real pleasure to read. There is something rational and true to the life about every person in it, but more especially, perhaps, about the women folk."—London Academy.

Vampires.

By JULIEN GORDON, author of "A Diplomat's Diary," "A Successful Man," etc. (Published complete, together.) With a sketch of the author by Mrs. M. E. W. Sherwood in Lippincott's Magazine for May. 25 cents.

NOTES IN SEASON.

DE WOLFE, FISKE & CO. will publish shortly the second series of "Adirondack Tales," and "Cones for the Camp Fire," both by W. H. H. Murray.

JOHN WILEY & SONS have in preparation "The Mechanical Engineer's Pocket-Book," by Wm. Kent, M.E.; also "The Transitive Curve Field Book," by Clinton R. Howard, C.E.

LITTLE, BROWN & CO. have a limited edition of "Impressions and Opinions," a volume of essays by George Moore. Among the essays are those on Balzac, Turguénieff, Art, Literature and the Drama.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish at once the seventh and a cheaper edition of Dr. Edward J. Stearns' "The Faith of Our Forefathers," which was prepared as an answer to Cardinal Gibbons, "Faith of Our Fathers." Mr. Whittaker also announces an edition of Dr. John Young's "Christ of History" and "Little Things in Every-Day Life," the last being in style very much in the same order as Prof. Drummond's "Greatest Thing in the World."

MACMILLAN & CO. will publish next week a "Short History of Greek Philosophy," for students and general readers, by Dr. John Marshall, rector of the Royal High School, Edinburgh. The main purpose of this book is to present an account of Greek Philosophy which, within strict limits of brevity, shall be at once authentic and interesting—authentic, as being based on the original works themselves; interesting, as presenting to the ordinary English reader the great thoughts of the greatest men of antiquity on problems of permanent significance and value, in language freed from technicality and abstruseness. F. Marion Crawford's new novel "Khaled, An Eastern Tale," will be published by Macmillan & Co. early in May.

HARPER & BROS. will publish shortly "Jinrikisha Days in Japan," by Eliza R. Scidmore. This volume, which will be fully illustrated, is promised to embrace a description of the most interesting localities in Japan as seen from a jinrikisha, together with chapters on Japanese life and manners, hospitalities, festivals, amusements and a variety of other entertaining themes. They also have in press a volume of Poems by Wordsworth, chosen and edited by Matthew Arnold; and in The Queen's Prime Ministers Series the following volumes: "Viscount Palmerston," by the Marquis of Lorne, K.T.; "Earl Russell," by Stuart J. Reid; "The Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone," by G. W. E. Russell; "The Earl of Aberdeen," by Sir Arthur Gordon, G.C.M.G., etc.; "The Marquis of Salisbury," by H. D. Traill, D.C.L., and "The Earl of Derby," by George Saintsbury.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO. will publish at once one of the most interesting as well as valuable books of the year in Admiral Ammen's "Old Navy and the New." Entering the service in its infancy Admiral Ammen has seen the vast changes of the last half century in naval affairs. He has kept abreast of the times and is the projector of the "Ammen Ram," likely to prove a most formidable part of our naval armament. He spins a yarn with the gusto of an old salt. His relation to the Nicaragua Canal will interest many readers, as also the personal letters of Gen. Grant, whose life he saved in boyhood, and who remained a warm friend through life. Another volume to be issued at the same time is entitled "Man Immortal," an allegorical poem by William Stitt Taylor, with portrait. The author discusses his lofty theme by means of a series of colloquies between Immortality and Nature, Time, Death, The Grave, Hell and Man respectively. The style is dignified and elevated, in harmony with the sublime nature of the subject.

PERSONAL NOTES.

A PLEASANT informal dinner was tendered Mr. George Haven Putnam in one of the private rooms of the Reform Club of New York, on the evening of the 20th inst., by a number of his friends. The spirit of the occasion was congratulatory in view of Mr. Putnam's conspicuous services in behalf of the Copyright bill.

Balzac, Honoré de. Ursula; tr. by Katharine Prescott Wormeley. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1891. c. tr. 4+358 p. D. hf. rus., $1.50.

Ursule Mirouet, in the series of "Scenes from provincial life," was written by Balzac more than fifty years ago, having been first published in 1841. "Ursula" is a most charming creation, a pure, lovely young girl, brought up by three old men, who all succumb to her tender influence. Her godfather, Dr. Minoret, is surrounded by a number of rapacious relatives, who are watching for his last breath, that they may pounce upon his wealth. Their meanness and viciousness are vividly reproduced. The scene is Nemours, the life of a provincial town being carefully studied. The postmaster of Nemours, who is the Doctor's cousin, forms, with his wife and son, a remarkable character group.

Curry, J. L. M. William Ewart Gladstone. Richmond, Va., B. F. Johnson & Co., 1891. c. 239 p. por. D. cl., $1.

During the author's services as Minister to the Court of Spain he was brought into personal contact with Mr. Gladstone, as well as many of the greater minds of the old world, and this afforded him exceptional facilities for a study of Mr. Gladstone's life and character. This book does not claim to be a full biography, but is prepared as a study on Mr. Gladstone's life.

Davis, R: Harding. Gallegher, and other stories. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1891. c. 5+236 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The ten stories which make up this volume are the product of a close observer of metropolitan character and incident, who has studied the life around him with a keen sense of its dramatic, pathetic and humorous elements. When Mr. Davis wrote these stories he was a reporter on the N. Y. Sun; the immediate fame they brought made him the managing editor of Harper's Weekly. The dramatic force and vivid realism of "Gallegher," a fascinating newspaper story of a little office-boy, were generally recognized on its first appearance. "The other woman," "There were ninety and nine," and the "Van Bibbers" have all found numerous readers in the magazines.

Denison, Mary A. If she will, she will. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891. c. 3+351 p. D. (Good company ser., no. 8.) pap., 50 c.

The striking resemblance of two cousins to each other is the heart of the plot. One was born in Australia, the other in America, but not only had never met, but owing to family troubles did not know of the existence of each other. Both are named Andrew Temple, and the respectable Andrew Temple is made to suffer cruelly for the sins of his disreputable namesake; his marriage to a beautiful young girl being broken off by a woman who claims to be his deserted wife By the author of "That husband of mine."

Desart, Earl of, [W: Ulick O'Connor Cuffe.] Lord and Lady Piccadilly. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 413 p. S. (Seaside lib., no. 1817.] pap., 20 c.

This is a complete index in one alphabet to the periodicals for 1890; it is for the first time published as an annual, and not in quarterly numbers as hitherto. Supplemented with an author index.

Forrest, R. E. Eight days. Authorized ed. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 384 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 154.) pap., 50 c.

A tale of the Indian mutiny. The eight days are those extending from the 8th to the 15th, both inclusive, of the month of May, 1857, the year in which that "devil's wind," as the people of the land themselves most appropriately term it, arose and blew with most destructive violence.

Fuller, Albert W., and Wheeler, W: Arthur. Artistic homes in city and in country, with other examples of domestic architecture. 5th rev. ed.. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1891. c. '82–'91. 4 p. 70 pl. obl. Q. cl., $6.50.

Seventy full-page illustrations from original drawings and photographs, representing the exterior, interior and plans of noted American homes. In issuing the 5th rev. ed., the authors have endeavored to alter and improve the whole work, so as to make it, as far as possible, representative of the latest phases of American domestic architecture. With this object in view, they have discarded many of the older illustrations, and have replaced them by ones of later work, adding, at the same time, a few miscellaneous examples of other buildings recently designed by them in the line of domestic work.

Gaboriau, Emile. Caught in the net. N. Y., Street & Smith, [1891.] 265 p. D. (Secret service ser., no. 42.) pap., 25 c.

Gardener, Helen H. Is this your son, my Lord? A novel. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1891. c. '90. 20+257 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Claims to be an exposé of the evils and shams of society. Though plain in language and realistic in description, the story is not offensive. In depicting the social immoralities of two young men and their partners in sin, the opportunity is taken to indicate the different standpoints from which society views the same transgression in men and women. The author asks that both shall be judged in social sins by the same standard of morality.

Goodyear, Mrs. C. A message to china decorators. N. Y., Society of Decorative Art, 28 E. 21st St., [for sale by J. B. Colt & Co., 16 Beekman St.,] 1891. fo., $2.25.

Goss, N. S. History of the birds of Kansas. Topeka, Kan., G: W. Crane & Co., 1891. c. 693 p. il. Q. cl., $7.50.

Contains the latest knowledge in regard to the habits, etc., of the birds of Kansas. Intended for the general reader as well as the student. The photogravure illustrations represent 529 mounted birds, the author's own work in the Goss Ornithological Collection. The characteristic descriptions of the different orders, families, genera, species and races are chiefly from "North American land and water birds," by Baird, Brewer and Ridgway, with the necessary changes in nomenclature and classification to conform with that of the American Ornithologists' Union. The descriptions of the nests and eggs (where credit is not given) are from notes of of the writer's own observations in the field.

Guinevere, (pseud.) Little jewel: or, Newport's brightest gem. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 196 p. S. (Seaside lib., no. 1805.) pap., 20 c.

Graves, Clo. A field of tares: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1891. 5+257 p. D. (Harper's Franklin Sq. lib., new ser., no. 696.) pap., 40 c.

The heroine is an adventuress. She is introduced as a widow somewhat past her first youth, in a gambling-house in Brussels. She and her partner, Madame de Quayres, have just drugged a young Englishman, with the intention of robbing him. He had, a few days before, broken the bank at Homburg, and had about him £600. The women find this sum, divide it and part forever. The first one, Mrs. Dudleigh, goes back to England and starts out to lead a respectable life. Shortly she marries a man of position and wealth, and begins to think her past life is buried. But the ghost of it haunts her, and after ten years of happiness, the man she had robbed discovers her. To shield herself she resorts to crime and other desperate but futile remedies.

An acquaintance strangely made by two Englishmen at a hotel in Homburg, leads to events which effect the lives of both permanently. The older man, Oliver Fosbrooke, rendered desperate through his losses at the gaming-table, is about to commit suicide, but is saved from the act by Anthony Melstrom, a young fellow of twenty-one, who has been sent to the Continent to acquire polish, and forget a girl to whom his mother objects. The pair turn out to be father and son—but before this development in the story is reached, the plot deals with a secret marriage, the story of a deserted and revengeful wife, a duel and other sensational incidents

Martin, Mrs. Herbert. Amor vincit: a novel. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 214 p. S. (Seaside lib., no. 1796.) pap., n. p.

Meredith, G: One of our conquerors. Author's ed. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1891. 5+414 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Like the majority of Meredith's novels this is more a study of character and of emotions and phases of the social life of to-day than a succession of exciting incidents holding the reader's curiosity till the mystery of the plot is solved. London of to-day is the scene. Love in many phases is shown, and man's injustice to woman dwelt upon.

Mérimée, Prosper. Columba; with introd. and notes by J. A. Fontaine. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1891. c. ed. 5+187 p. S. (Heath's modern language ser.) bds., 40 c.

Northrop, H: H. The history of the French Revolution, 1789 to 1795; or, a country without a God. Richmond, Va., B. F. Johnson & Co. 1890 [1891.] c. '90. 38+725 p. por. il. O. cl., $2.50; mor., $3.50.
"My first endeavor in writing this history has been to tell the truth. The work is not designed for the scholar alone, but for the masses of the people also. The subject of the French Revolution has occupied my leisure hours, more or less, for thirty-five years. . . . . I have been solicitous to do full justice to all the great actors in this mighty drama and terrible and bloody tragedy. I have sought to exhibit Louis XVI., Marie Antoinette, the Duke of Orleans, Lafayette, Bailey, Dumourier, Petion, the Terrorists Danton, Robespierre and Marat, and the illustrious women like Madame Roland, as they actually were. My effort has been to write an impartial history."

Parsons, Theophilus. The professor's letters. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1891. c. 4+215 p. por. S. cl., $1.
Letters written to a young girl solely for her benefit and instruction, and without any thought of publication. The recipient thought they contained so many wise and useful thoughts, that she asked Prof. Parsons if extracts from them could not be published. To this he gave his consent, on condition that the young lady should prepare them for publication, rewriting and adding whatever thoughts were suggested during this work. This she has done. Some of the topics considered are: What true happiness is; What heaven is; Love demands love; What happens depends on; Swedenborg's philosophy of religion; Our Lord's temptations; Living with uncongenial people, etc.

Schubin, Ossip, [pseud. for "Lolo Kirschner."] Boris Lensky; from the German, by Elise L. Lathrop. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1891. c. tr. 2+310 p. il. D. (The Rose lib., no. 6.) pap., 50 c.
A continuation of and sequel to "Asbeln," by the same author. The hero of both books, Boris Lensky, who appears as a violinist, is said to be intended for Rubinstein, the great pianist. His selfishness and vanity are further illustrated, and the last days of a great genius, whose powers are waning, are depicted with a pitiful realism.

Scudder, Horace E. A short history of the United States of American for beginners. N. Y., Taintor Bros. & Co., (1891.) c. '90. 3-286 p. por. maps, il. D cl., net, 60 c.
The text is written in the charming style which characterizes the author's larger history of the United States. The subject is treated from a similar standpoint, but the book is in no sense a condensation of the larger one; it is, properly, an introduction to it, and is bright, attractive and entirely new.

The selections run from "grave to gay, from lively to severe," all bearing more or less directly on the subject of equal rights, and were chosen by the editors from among the gems of such writers as Wendell Phillips, Phebe Cary, Grace Greenwood, Lucy Stone, George William Curtis, and Lillie Devereaux Blake.

Stevens, Orrin Cedesman. An idyl of the sun, and other poems. Holyoke, Mass., Griffith, Axtell & Cady Co., 1891. 3-212 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The longer poem which opens the volume "An idyl of the sun" covers twenty-three pages, and is of an unusual order of poetical excellence. It abounds in lofty thoughts and beautiful imagery. The many shorter poems and sonnets which make up the volume are noticeably refined and poetical in form and expression. This is apparently the writer's first published work.

Thomas, Annie, [now Mrs. Pender Cudlip.] The roll of honor. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 336 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 149.) pap., 50 c.

Lord Mountjoy, an officer of the "Buckingham Blues," is dismissed from the service on account of a trivial breach of discipline. The wrong and injustice of depriving a man whose name has been on the "roll of honor" of his profession and ruining his career past recall for so small an offence is strongly dwelt upon. Mountjoy is the hero of a love-story—the girl he loves being the centre of a mystery which comes near ruining her good name.

In Holland, in the seventeenth century, Johan D rick de Mortaigne sought the hand of Catherine D leans, and was repulsed by her guardian and by lady herself; so he determined to marry her at all ards. With the assistance of Vollenhove, his valet abducted her. The consequences that follow this act make the substance of the story. Famous cha ters of the day are introduced.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 25, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE young Western publishing house whom it was our unpleasant task to take to account in our issue of April 11, insists unwisely, we think, upon making an explanation; and on another page of this issue all who wish may judge for themselves their plea of justification. We think comment on their communication is unnecessary. Two wrongs do not make a right, nor are wrongs in the past valid defense for wrongs in the present. As to the "robbery of the American people" by Prof. Bryce's publishers, and the figures of our correspondents, we cannot but think they are as much at fault in their arithmetic as in their morals.

Had this house in the past been attentive readers of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY it might have known that our action in criticising their methods was not "unprecedented" Far from it. If nothing else, the consistent and persistent course of this journal in behalf of international copyright is on record as a standing rebuke to the existing order of things. Further than that, on more than one occasion has the WEEKLY entered a protest against the course of individual houses, regardless of the fact that such action forfeited to this journal for some time the patronage of the houses criticized.

As to printing the advertisements of such houses as the one in question, it must strike any one who has given the matter a moment's thought, that, as publishers of a newspaper we have no more reason to refuse to act as a medium for advertising books obtained in a manner of which we do not approve (but which, nevertheless, unfortunately, is within the law), than we would have to exclude advertisements of books that do not conform to our individual political or religious views. Our advertising pages must be open to all relevant advertising matter, provided it is couched in decent and proper language, and regards decent and proper books. For such matter space is sold at so much per inch or per page. But there our responsibility ends. Our right to criticise the action of our friends and opponents remains unimpaired, and so long as this journal is published under its present management this right will be exercised to the best of the ability of its editor without fear or favor.

THE first part of the American Catalogue, 1884–90, is now on its way to subscribers, and because of the delay in the time-table of its issue as a complete work we are sending one copy each of this part issue to those whose orders were for bound volumes. When the full work is ready we shall accept these parts for binding, or if in good order, in exchange for the bound volume; and meantime subscribers will have the benefit of this part of the alphabet, A–Hill, covering 240 pages. At least 300 more will be required for the balance of the alphabet, as the work will be considerably larger than its predecessor, though its period, July 1, 1884, to June 30, 1890, is but six years as against eight. The second part, largely in print or in type, will be ready during the spring; and the third, including the subject-alphabet and the valuable appendices, some months later. The delay has been largely because of the endeavor to get publishers to fill gaps in the record of their books—a very costly effort with which we should not be burdened. We trust the appearance of this part will stimulate subscriptions, which are still inadequate; and we remind existing subscribers who fail to pay their subscription or their $5 now, that they will lose the benefit of the subscription rate.

FOR months inquiries have turned up again and again as to who was the publisher of a subscription-book entitled "God, Home and Heaven." On the authority of Mr. E. W. Bok this book had been the most successful subscription-book published in years, and that "hardly a bookseller was aware of its existence." Mr. Bok was right; not a bookseller, nor a cataloguer, not anybody knew of such a book—no, not even Mr. Bok. For now it appears that he meant "Mother, Home and Heaven," which everybody knows is published by E. B. Treat & Co.

WE send out with this issue an "Open Letter to the Publishing Trade." We have only to add hat the communication is the spontaneous expression of a bookseller of many years' experience—one who is well known to the trade, but who, for valid reasons, withholds his name—and that we consent to its publication chiefly because it contains a number of suggestions which the writer insists should be presented to that portion of the trade which he addresses.

POSTAGE ON NEWSPAPERS.

ACTING POSTMASTER-GENERAL WHITFIELD issued on the 20th inst. the following order modifying the regulations of the department as to postage on newspapers and periodicals:

Under the proviso of Section 352, Postal Laws and Regulations, the postage on newspapers (excepting weeklies) and periodicals deposited in a letter-carrier office by publishers when sent to regular subscribers or as sample copies or by newsdealers when sent to regular subscribers for delivery by its carriers, is as follows:

1. On newspapers (excepting weeklies, for the rate of which see Division 4 of this ruling), without regard to weight or frequency of issue, 1 cent each, to be prepaid by affixing ordinary 1-cent stamps to each paper.

2. On periodicals (other than newspapers) not exceeding two ounces in weight, 1 cent each, to be prepaid by affixing ordinary 1-cent stamps to each publication.

3. On periodicals (other than newspapers) exceeding two ounces in weight, 3 cents each, to be prepaid by affixing ordinary 2-cent stamps to each publication.

4. Weekly newspapers entitled to second-class rates, except on above, 1 cent per pound, to be weighed in bulk and to be prepaid with newspaper and periodical stamps at the office of mailing.

5. The rate of postage on newspapers and periodicals of the second-class, when sent by others than the publishers or news agents, shall be 1 cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof, without regard to place of mailing or destination. (Sec. 351, Postal Laws and Regulations.)

THE LAW OF BOOK ROYALTIES.

THE Court of Appeals on the 16th inst. heard argument in a case which has attracted considerable attention in the book world, since it involves the much-debated relations between the owner of a copyright and his publisher, and thus concerns not only the publishing trade but every author or assignee of author's rights. The point in issue is whether a contract for publication under a royalty agreement establishes such a relation of trust as may be maintained in a court of equity.

The facts in the case are these: In 1880, Francis S. Street and Francis S. Smith entered into an agreement with J. S. Ogilvie & Co., of which firm Street was also a member, by which agreement Street & Smith were to allow J. S. Ogilvie & Co. to publish certain stories controlled by the former firm. Ogilvie & Co. were to pay a royalty on all copies sold, they themselves fixing the retail price. Street died in 1883, and Ormond G. Smith, the plaintiff in the present action, purchased his interest. The successors of Street & Smith then demanded an accounting of Ogilvie & Co., under the agreement, no statement of sales or royalties having been given during Street's lifetime. An account was accordingly rendered, and the plaintiff, relying on it, and without knowledge on his own part of the extent of the Messrs. Ogilvie's transactions, settled with them.

In bringing this action the plaintiff alleged that the account rendered was incorrect, and that the sale of the stories covered by the original contract amounted to many thousands more than the defendants reported. Hence this suit in equity to set aside the settlement, and for a full accounting. The plaintiff's main contention has been that the firms stood in a fiduciary relation to each other, not only by reason of a common partner, but also because of the contract itself; and that, although a settlement had been made, the burden of proof was on the defendants to show that their account, which had been attacked, was just and fair. The Court below, at both the Special and General Term, held that there was no fiduciary relation between the parties to the royalty contract, and that the plaintiff was limited to an action at law. The present appeal is, therefore, from the judgment of the Special Term, affirmed at General Term, dismissing the complaint.

INJUNCTION AGAINST THE WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY REPRINT.

AN injunction has lately been issued by Judge McCormick, of the United States Circuit Court for the Northern District of Texas, against the sale of these reprint dictionaries, as follows:

"The defendant, the T. H. Robinson Stationery Co., its agents, attorneys, and workmen and each of them, be and they are hereby perpetually enjoined and restrained from directly or indirectly publishing, offering for sale or selling any reprint of the complainant's book entitled "Webster's Dictionary" of the edition of eighteen hundred and forty-seven (1847) or its improved edition of eighteen hundred and fifty-nine (1859) in such form or appearance as to resemble the revised edition of said dictionary of eighteen hundred and sixty-four (1864) as published by the complainants, or purporting to be a copy of said edition of said dictionary which the complainants now publish and deal in, or with the dates and devices thereon or descriptions thereof, which are used by complainants to distinguish the edition and dictionary so published by them, or from using or distributing any circulars or placards or publishing any advertisements containing any description or recommendations of such dictionary in such form as to induce the belief on the part of the public that it is the complainants' said dictionary of the year eighteen hundred and sixty-four (1864) or any edition thereof, and from describing the previous purchase price of said eighteen hundred and forty-seven (1847) edition of said dictionary as the sum of eleven dollars and fifty cents ($11.50) or any amount in excess of the sum of six dollars and fifty cents ($6.50)."

The court further directed the defendant to pay to the complainants the sum of one hundred and twenty-five dollars damages and the cost of the suit besides.

STATE LEGISLATION IN 1890.

THE University of the State of New York, through its Secretary, Mevil Dewey, has just issued at Albany a bulletin of State Legislation throughout the Union in 1890. This bulletin will be of inestimable value to legislators, students of law, and the editorial fraternity. In concise summary, and with full index, the laws of last year are classified under twenty-four heads — public morals, finance, charities, education, and so on. Citations, as a rule, are made by State, number of chapter, and date of approval. The bulletin will render easy a task heretofore of no little difficulty — reference to the vast mass of current State legislation. It will without doubt have influence on the quality of that legislation. When the promoters and opponents of a measure can with the minimum of labor know what other States have done, there will be a falling off in unnecessary diversity of law, and less repetition of useless enactments. The bulletin is sent for ten cents, including postage. (February, 1891, [No. 1.] 54 p. 8°, pap.)

HOW I STARTED IN THE BOOK BUSINESS.

BY CHARLES D. RAYMER.

I HAVE been much interested in the articles on "Bookselling as a Profession." They have "fired me with a desire" to say something on the subject. Not that I will be able to say much that would interest the "old heads," but there may be a few among the young men just starting to whom the narrative of the first experience of a young man in the business might be of interest.

I do not give this experience as advice, but just to show what resources there are in the trade for those who love the business well enough to make a great many sacrifices.

On October 15, 1885, I arrived in Minneapolis, Minnesota, with a small stock of books and less than $50 in cash. With this magnificent capital and a large stock of determination (and a little check) to not only succeed finally, but to make a record as a bookseller, I began to look around for a store. I looked the town over and over. "House hunting" was nothing in comparison to my trying to find a store with a good location that would fit my capital. Finally I was compelled, on the 23d of the same month, to take a small store at 236 Third Avenue south, four blocks from Nicollet Avenue, where all the booksellers, newsdealers and stationers are located. My store was in a poor location, but what could one expect to get for $18 a month? And so with lumber, paint, nails, hammer and saw, I was soon in the New and Old Book, News, Stationery and Circulating Library business, all this within a space of 12 x 18 feet and 9 feet between joints.

The store and capital both being small, I was compelled to "turn" the stock over often; and sometimes when it would not "turn" it was, to say the least, rather embarrassing.

My first scheme was to work up the news business, believing that although the profits were small, yet it gave the quickest returns; so I had some cards printed stating that I would deliver all kinds of periodicals to any part of the city without extra charge. This plan took with a great many and was the means of giving me a small income at once, and a good chance to advertise the other branches of the business—a opportunity which I never neglected.

My next scheme was to work up the circulating library business. This I did by having some circulars printed and properly distributed. This course I followed up a day or two after by personally soliciting subscribers, in doing which I met many obstacles, such as "How long is this library going to last?" "I subscribed in the Never Bust Library, and only received two books and then they moved away." "I never could get the book I wanted." These and many more; but when I had once got a subscriber I treated him so well that he was a living advertisement for me.

The following are the rules and circular I used:

THIS BOOK IS THE PROPERTY OF

C. D. RAYMER & CO.'S

CIRCULATING LIBRARY,

236 Third Ave., S.,

MINNEAPOLIS, - - - - - MINN.

BOOK No .....

Rules of Library.

Any person may become a subscriber by paying two dollars, which will entitle them to the use of books for the term of one year.

Any person not a subscriber may procure books from the Library at 10 cents a week by depositing the value of book.

Any subscriber retaining a book longer than 15 days must pay two cents per day for all overtime.

No subscriber is allowed to take more than one book, or get another while they yet retain one.

No subscriber shall lend any books procured from the Library.

Any book damaged or lost must be paid for by the subscriber.

CIRCULAR.

We wish to call the attention of yourself and family to the "RED COVER" circulating library, which is without doubt the cheapest in the world, giving more, better and purer reading for the money than any other. Eight hundred volumes, and we are constantly adding.

The works of the best authors, such as Chas. Dickens, Wilkie Collins, Hugh Conway, J. Fenimore Cooper, Bertha M. Clay, Miss M. E. Braddon, Miss Alexander, "The Duchess," and many American authors.

The subscription price is only two dollars a year, which is less than 4 cents a week, and only a fourth of a cent a book.

To introduce the Library we will for the next 30 days take all kinds of second hand books (as far as we can use them) in payment for subscriptions: thus you can get your reading one year for almost nothing.

The agent will call soon and take pleasure in explaining how we conduct the business.

If the agent does not call, please drop us a postal and he will do so at once.

The subscription price seems small, but it was a nice little income to a bookseller who was not overburdened with wealth.

When I had my library well under way I began to work on my "ideal," and commenced by making additions to my Bibliographical Library (an old trade list annual, much the worse for wear). My first purchase was the Trade List Annuals for 1885–86. Then the American Catalogue 1876–84; and then, by buying out a Nicollet Avenue competitor, I procured another set of the American Catalogue, some old English catalogues and several old Trade List Annuals. I have since procured a few more, and now my reference library consists of Allibone's "Dictionary of Authors;" Roorbach's, Kelly's, and a full set of American Catalogues; nearly a full set of Trade List Annuals; nearly all the English Catalogues; Lownde's "Bibliographical Manual;" Dibdin's Greek and Classic Manuals (large paper ed.); Moss "Classical Manual;" 15 vols. of Public Library Catalogues; about 20 vols. of bound catalogues of "old book" dealers; Cushing's "Initials and Pseudonyms;" set of Putnam's "Best Reading;" Caspar's and Clegg's directories of booksellers; and thousands of booksellers' catalogues arranged alphabetically in a set of drawers.

Should any of my bibliopolical friends look into my store at the present time they would say that I have "not labored in vain."

Let us have the testimonies of some other of our bibliomaniacal bibliopoles.

THE BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trustees of the above named Association, the following new members were elected:

With this large addition, the membership now numbers 1235 members.

The new constitution and by-laws of the Association is ready, and will be sent to any address, by applying to the Secretary, Wilbur B. Ketcham, 2 Cooper Union, N. Y. City.

COMMUNICATIONS.

THE REPRINTERS OF THE "AMERICAN COMMONWEALTH" EXPLAIN.

Chicago, April 18, 1891.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

Concerning the unprecedented action of The Publishers' Weekly in censuring us for "piracy," although it is a well known fact that the majority of American publishers are "pirates," we have no comment to make. We leave that to The Publishers' Weekly's conscience. But it is due to us that a statement should be made giving our reasons for reprinting "In Darkest England" and "The American Commonwealth."

It is true that we published an unauthorized edition of General Booth's book, and we are glad to inform The Publishers' Weekly that we sold nearly fifty thousand copies of it. Well-informed booksellers are aware that "In Darkest England" was published in England at 3*s.* 6*d.*, equivalent to about eighty-seven cents. The edition published by Funk & Wagnalls in New York was printed from a duplicate set of plates obtained from General Booth at a lower cost than a new set could be made in this country. Yet Funk & Wagnalls made the retail price of their edition $1.50! Was this not taking unfair advantage of the American people? Was this not worse than "piracy"? As soon as we learned the nature of General Booth's book, his purposes seemed apparent: first, to explain and defend the aim of the Salvation Army; second, to obtain money for the cause. This first purpose could be attained better by a cheap American edition than by that issued in New York. A royalty on the book would accomplish the second purpose. When we published our edition we offered payment to General Booth's son, his representative in this country. Our letter was not answered, and a second one likewise received no response. Therefore we fail to see in what respect we have injured General Booth; but by the wide circulation of our edition of the book we have helped the cause of the Salvation Army. And we fail to see that Funk & Wagnalls were entitled to any consideration. Their greed brought on their loss.

Every bookseller in the United States knows that for two years Macmillan & Co. have been robbing the American people by extorting the high price of six dollars for Bryce's "American Commonwealth." Macmillan & Co.'s flimsily-bound edition did not cost more than seventy cents to manufacture, yet they had the effrontery to make the wholesale dealer pay $4.50 for the work. Making liberal allowance for expenses and advertising, the publishers and author must have cleared seventy thousand dollars from the sale of this book in two years. If Macmillan & Co. were so solicitous concerning the author's interests as they pretend to be, the royalties paid to Mr. Bryce could not have been less than twenty-five thousand dollars. As there still remained the large markets of England and her colonies, Mr. Bryce would continue to derive an income from the book even if no further revenue came from America. We therefore decided that the time had come for the people to have their innings. They had been robbed long enough; they had the right, and should have the privilege, of obtaining this great work at a reasonable price. As with Funk & Wagnalls, greed caused Macmillan & Co. a great loss.

We have made money on "In Darkest England" and we are making money on "The American Commonwealth," notwithstanding The Publishers' Weekly's doubts; and we wish here to inform certain eastern publishers that we have our eye on other books which are sold at exorbitant prices, and unless the prices be speedily reduced we shall issue editions of these books for the people.

There remain several questions which we desire The Publishers' Weekly to answer:

If it is so heinous a crime to "pirate" books, is it not an equal crime to publish advertisements of these "pirated" books?

Are not the payments for these advertisements part of the spoils, and does not The Publishers' Weekly profit from these "piracies"?

If The Publishers' Weekly had refused advertisements of "pirated" books, would it now be in existence?

Is it worse to "pirate" a book now than to continue selling books which were "pirated" during the last twenty years? In reference to this question we respectfully request The Publishers' Weekly to examine the lists of nearly all the leading eastern publishers.

BOOK COVERS.

CHARLESTON, S. C., April 7.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly:

While you are publishing your interesting and instructive series of articles on the art of bookselling, I should be glad to make a suggestion to the publishers in regard to something they can do to help us, that I think needs but to be mentioned to be acted on. It is simply that all cloth-bound books should be sent out with good, heavy and neat paper covers, with the titles distinctly printed on them. The expense is but trifling, and the saving to the retailer immense.

The loss to the bookseller who tries to keep his shelves well filled with standard books is very large, as the deterioration is rapid from handling, especially in the better class of bindings which, I am very glad to say, the best publishers are now giving us.

Nearly all American publishers are now sending out some of their books neatly covered. Can they not see that it is to their advantage, as well as to ours, to make it a universal practice? At the same time I want to protest against the new and too prevalent fashion of white or very light-colored cloth bindings. Our most fastidious customers are the ones to protest the most, the books showing the ill effects of the most careful handling so soon. In regard to the paper outside covers, let the publishers remember that larger stocks will be carried and more books sold, with the expense of deterioration reduced.

SAMUEL HAMMOND.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

GEORGE MEREDITH will publish some translations from the "Iliad" with English hexameters.

ZOLA has decided to change the title of his next book from "La Guerre" to "La Debacle," or "Bursting Up."

TENNYSON has written a number of autobiographical notes to accompany a second edition of the Rev. Dr. Henry van Dyke's book, "The Poetry of Tennyson."

FREDERICK HARRISON has written a book on the Parthenon and its marbles, of which he has been a lifelong student. It will contain biographies of Phidias and Ictinus.

EUGENE FIELD is writing a novel, to be entitled "The Wooing of Miss Woppit." The scenes of the story are laid among the mining camps of Red Horse mountain.

S. R. GARDINER has sent to press the MS. of the third volume of his "History of the Great Civil War." It brings the narrative down to the execution of Charles I., thus concluding the work.

IT is announced, says the London Publishers' Circular, that Lanoe Falconer, the authoress of "Mademoiselle Ixe," is Miss Mary Hawker, whose name has long been familiar to many as a writer of short stories of varying merit.

JOHN LANE, who recently published a bibliography of Mr. George Meredith, is engaged on bibliography of the books illustrated by Mr. Walter Crane. Mr. Lane would be glad to hear from collectors of Mr. Crane's works — care of Mr. Elkin Mathews, Vigo Street.

DR. O. W. OWENS, of Detroit, Mich., according to the N. Y. Herald, makes the announcement that he has completed a perfect Bacon cipher in Shakespeare's works. He alleges that he has conclusive proof that Bacon wrote the plays, and says he will prove that Bacon murdered Shakespeare.

IT is announced that Melville Philips, editor of George W. Childs' "Recollections," and of Commodore George W. Melville's "In the Lena Delta," is engaged in the writing of a serial story of Washington life. The novel is written in collaboration with the wife of an United States Senator, and promises intimate glimpses of life at the National Capital. Before its issue in book form it will receive publication in a syndicate of thirty newspapers.

STANLEY LANE-POOLE hopes to bring out the final part of Lane's "Arabic Lexicon" in June. The whole of the letter Yé is already printed, and the Supplement, which completes the work, is in progress. Mr. Lane-Poole is also carrying through the press a selection from Lane's "Thousand and One Nights," which will form three volumes in Putnam's Knickerbocker Nuggets. The story of Aladdin, discovered by Mr. Zotenberg in the Paris MS., will be added in a fresh translation.

THE BALLAD OF "DANNY DEEVER."

"WHAT did you write the ballad for?" said Files-on-Parade;
"None of your blasted business!" young Rudyard Kipling said.
"Oh, tell me what you wrote it for," said Files-on-Parade.
"To add unto my boodle," young Rudyard Kipling said;
"For whatever stuff I scribble, the publishers will take;
And though I'm often brilliant, I fake, and fake, and fake,
And for the simple reason, I am upon the 'make.'
So I wrote this 'Danny Deever' t'other mornin'."

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

SILVER, BURDETT & Co., Boston, will publish on May 1 an "Elementary Handbook on Potable Water," by Prof. Floyd Davis.

THE Cassell Publishing Company have just concluded arrangements with the distinguished Spanish novelist, B. Perez Galdos, by which they become his publishers for all English speaking countries.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. have just ready, in the Eminent Actors Series, a sketch of the life of Charles Macklin, by Edward Albert Parry, the editor of the delightful "Letters of Dorothy Osborne."

THE HISTORICAL PRINTING CLUB, No. 97 Clark Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., offers in a limited edition "The Press of North Carolina in the Eighteenth Century," with a bibliography by Stephen B. Weeks.

A. M. THAYER & Co., Boston, will publish in May a "Story of the Union in Rhyme," with numerous illustrations. They will publish in the fall—in October, probably—a second edition of "Luther in Rome," revised and enlarged. "Butler's Book," the autobiography of Gen. Benj. F. Butler, will not be ready until November next.

WELCH, FRACKER COMPANY have just issued a new novel, entitled "Not to the Swift," a tale of two continents, by Lewis H. Watson (Lewis Harrison), author of "A Strange Infatuation," etc. They have in preparation a subscription book to be entitled "Ohio in Art," a collection of reproductions by etching, photogravure and wood cuts, of the notable works of the foremost Ohio artists. The letterpress will be by Francis C. Sessions.

THE THOMPSON PUB. Co., 225 S. 6th St., Phila., has recently issued a novelty of the "Pigs in Clover" variety, entitled "Muffed." It is a base-ball puzzle, to be played in a "lay-out" resembling a base-ball diamond. Being played with smaller pellets and a larger number than its predecessor, it of course calls for more skill and science than they. It is made in two sizes, one 5½ inches square, the other 8 inches square, and retails for 25 for the smaller and 50 cents for the larger game.

THE UNITED PRESBYTERIAN BOARD OF PUBLICATION, Pittsburg, will publish about the last of this month a book entitled "Psalm Anthems," being a collection of sixty-nine anthems by forty-one different authors and composers for voluntaries and special occasions of worship, compiled by W. A. Lafferty and A. B. Morton. Among the composers who will appear in this volume are George F. Root, L. O. Emerson, H. R. Palmer, James McGrannahan, J. B. Herbert, Charles Carter, F. Martintown and J. S. Brown.

"THE LEISLER TROUBLES IN 1869," an address by the Rev. A. G. Vermilye, D.D., opens the current Old New York, published by W. W. Pasko, Park Place, N. Y. This number contains fine steel portraits of Melville W. Cooper, John M. Tilford and John Castree, which are accompanied by biographical sketches. "Churches in New York in 1848" and the "Dutch Records of New York" are interesting contributions to the number. Mr. Pasko is putting much good work into this magazine and deserves encouragement. Its usefulness will probably be discovered when the publisher has lost his patience and money and been obliged to give up the enterprise.

"FRANCIS WILSON is a great book-lover, and a special student of Horace. It was Eugene Field's translation of Horace which made Wilson very desirous of meeting the poet, and an intimate friendship is the result. Now the actor is preparing to publish this spring, at his own expense, a little book containing all of Mr. Field's Horace translations. The edition will be limited to fifty copies, and the plates will be destroyed. The Latin text will be given on the page opposite the English rendering. The printing will be done in colored inks and the poems will have vignettes and tail pieces, the latter drawn by Mr. Field. A life of Horace, written in a vein entirely new to biographies of that ancient poet, will also be contributed by Mr. Field to the volume."—E. W. Bok.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. have in press the seventh volume of the new edition of Chambers' "Encyclopædia;" a subscription-book in two volumes, entitled "Regional Anatomy in its Relation to Medicine and Surgery," by Dr. George McClellan; a fifth edition of Dr. R. Bartholow's important work on "Hypodermic Medication;" a revised and enlarged edition of Frazer's "Tables for the Determination of Minerals;" a "Handbook of Industrial Organic Chemistry," by S. C. Sadtler; a new edition of Andrew A. Blair's "Chemical Analysis of Iron;" a work on "The Swiss Republic," by B. Winchester, late United States Minister at Berne; and the following novels: "Captain Blake," by Captain Charles King, with illustrations; "Diana Fontaine," by Algernon Ridgeway, and "Di," by Squier L. Pierce.

HOWARD LOCKWOOD & Co. (The Lockwood Press), 126 Duane Street, New York, have just issued Part 1 (A–Blanks) of an important work, entitled "The American Dictionary of Printing and Bookmaking," comprising references to all that is known of the art from the earliest to the present time—technical, historical and biographical. The work will be complete in about three years, and will contain over 600 small quarto pages handsomely printed and fully illustrated. The terms of art in German, French and Italian are included in the work in the regular alphabet. For the present the "Dictionary" can be obtained only by subscribing to The American Bookmaker, also published by the Lockwood Press. Six dollars for a three years' subscription to the Bookmaker will include the "Dictionary," which, when completed, will be sold at a price not less than $12. This is a liberal offer, indeed, as the Bookmaker alone is fully worth twice $2 per year to any live bookmaker.

CHAPMAN & HALL will publish this month George Meredith's novel, "One of Our Conquerors."

ELLIOT STOCK, London, has just published a new and enlarged edition of "The Second-hand Booksellers' Directory."

THE Kaufmännische Fortbildungsschule, of Berlin, has decided to include in its course a branch of education for booksellers. Two evenings in the week for the coming quarter will be devoted to instruction in bookkeeping for booksellers. The fee for the quarter will be 9 marks, about $1.25.

WE are glad to find another lie nailed to the counter. It was not Byron, according to Dr.

Smiles, who wrote "now Barabbas was a publisher," but Thomas Campbell, the poet; though the allegation that it was done in a copy of the Bible is not authenticated. The publisher to whom it referred was not Mr. Murray.

WM. HEINEMANN, of London, has just issued Robert Buchanan's prose book, "The Coming Terror." It consists, to no little extent, of controversial matter on subjects of the day, its chief object being to protest against over-legislation, especially in matters moral and literary, while showing at the same time that the modern gospel of self-culture may be injurious to society.

A NEW book which will appeal to the author, collector, printer and bookseller will be issued shortly by Mr. Elkin Mathews. It will be entitled "On the Making and Issuing of Books." The author is Mr. C. T. Jacobi, the manager of the Chiswick Press, who proposes to make the volume a specimen of typography rich in ornament. Three editions are in preparation, one of which will be on Japanese vellum.

F. A. BROCKHAUS, Leipzig, has just published a posthumous work of Dr. Heinrich Schliemann. The first portion was completed by the author just before his death. It describes the excavations made at Troy last year. In the concluding part, written by Dr. W. Doerpfeld, the first Secretary of the Imperial German Archæological Institute at Athens, full particulars are given of the various discoveries made, which in many respects confirm and complete Schliemann's already published accounts of the results of his indefatigable labors. In an interesting preface Madame Schliemann declares that she considers it her duty to bring to a conclusion which would be satisfactory to her late husband the excavations at Hissarlik.

"WHATEVER may be the ultimate consequences of the new American law of copyright," says the London Academy, "the first effect will undoubtedly be to produce a stagnation in the English publishing trade during the next few months. It is already announced that the promised edition of Mr. Ruskin's poems will be held back until after July 1, when the American statute comes into operation; and we hear that the issue of Mrs. Sutherland Orr's 'Life of Browning' will probably be delayed with the same object. Our popular novelists, who are destined to derive the largest benefit from the American concession, will also certainly be advised to wait. Altogether, May and June will be bad months for the trade."

HART & CO., Toronto, will issue shortly an important Canadian publication, entitled "The New Empire—Reflections upon its Origin, its Constitution, and its Relation to the Great Republic." It is written by O. A. Howland, who is not an "Imperial Federationist," but a believer in a united empire The aim of the author is to show that the Empire actually possesses a Federal Constitution, requiring rather to be declared than created, and easily susceptible of such amendments as seem to be required. The author suggests what these amendments are. He also traces the growth of the spirit upon which the modern Constitution rests to its beginnings in the struggle with the old Colonies, and shows how the modern Empire realizes the dreams not only of the U. E. Loyalists, but the best of the American Revolutionists.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLISHING TRADE.

NEW YORK, March 28, 1891.

To the Publishing Trade of the United States:

GENTLEMEN: By above date you will observe that I am writing this letter addressed to you on the anniversary of the issue of the 1000th number of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. The number has just reached me, and as is my custom, I took it up for perusal and study. I had proceeded in the task till I came upon the modest announcement, beginning: "To-day's issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the 1000th since its beginning, nearly twenty years ago." I finished it and paused before going further, for I remembered it well at that date and for the succeeding years. I was interested in watching its growth, knowing how deeply its founder was absorbed in its welfare. On making a mental comparison of its appearance then and now, I was startled to see that while the lists and reading matter have more than doubled since the first issue, the advertising pages seem rather to have decreased than kept pace with the enterprise of the journal.

Gentlemen, do you realize what this means? Can it be possible that you are oblivious to the fact that you owe a great debt to the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for the service it renders you? Can it be possible that you are oblivious to the startling truth that you, who derive the greatest benefit from it, are most remiss in the support of it? If you doubt the truth of this assertion I am ready to prove it and go further and state that there is no trade in existence that expects so much of its trade paper and gives it so little support in return, as does the publishing trade of the United States. Glance at the London Bookseller, The Publishers' Circular, or the American papers of the stationery trade; in fact, of the journals representing every other trade, and then glance at the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. A mere glance will suffice you, I think; if it does not, it ought to.

Gentlemen, what would you do if there were no PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY? You would rely upon your own means? Send out your own monthly bulletins and circulars? Are you aware of what good these do you? I claim they do you almost no good at all. All the labor and expense put upon them is just so much money thrown away. Can it be possible that you have no idea of what becomes of them? Are you oblivious to the fact that their fate is the waste-paper basket? Do you suppose for one moment that the retailer, upon whom you depend, relies on your circulars and bulletins for his information? If so, you ought to know better. No. He relies upon the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, which comes to him in a readable form, which he carefully files away and studies, and has handy for reference at all times. Did you ever stop to think how the retailer's mail is burdened with circulars from every publishing concern, big and little, from the entire United States? Did it ever strike you that they are of every conceivable size and shape, from the quarto double sheet to the envelope slip? What do you imagine the retailer can do with them? What would you do with them yourself, were you in a similar position? What system would you devise to keep them to be of use, supposing you had an ambition to be posted in your business? Probably you would keep an index-book, say a BB file. Very well; how would you put your hundreds of variegated slips away? By publishers, or title of books? Either way, how would you find them when you wanted them? You wouldn't, you couldn't begin to remember them. You would wear out the patience of yourself and customer in looking for the circular of the book of which you happened to imagine you had received a circular, but, for the life of you, you cannot recall it when wanted. I suppose you doubt this? Have you ever been there? You, my dear publishers, do not by your methods furnish the trade with a record of your publications! But the WEEKLY furnishes a most valuable one weekly, monthly, semi-annually, annually, every five years, and forever, and you barely pay for doing it; yet you would feel very badly if your publications were left out of it. As a retailer, with burden enough of the business, with the added horror of these slips, circulars and bulletins, I say, they are a nuisance and an eye-sore, and of no earthly good. Show me a retailer who says to the contrary!

Do you suppose your newspaper advertising is of advantage to the retailer, in so far as keeping him posted as to what you are publishing is concerned? If you do, you are again seriously mistaken. You advertise invariably when you are ready to publish. You expect the retailer to have the books on his counter ready to sell when you advertise. Where does he get his information from to prepare himself to labor on your behalf? From your monthly bulletins and circulars? Not at all. He gains it from the pages of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

Again, let me ask you, do you suppose your newspaper advertising in one or two issues of the daily papers sells your books? Ask any retailer how many people enter his store and ask for the book they saw advertised in the morning or evening paper. Then ask him how many he sold by showing the book and calling attention to it? Ask him if two-thirds of the same amount of money spent in circulars and the like, together with newspaper advertising, were put into THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY with liberal display, and week after week, would not do more good to the retailer and the publisher alike. I am firmly convinced that it would.

Let me tell you that I am a retailer of many years' standing. It may surprise you, but it is a fact nevertheless, that I take an interest, nay, a pride, in my profession. I have made a study of it. Therefore I consider that I know what I am talking about, and I say unhesitatingly, gentlemen, that your support of our most important trade journal is simply to your great disadvantage. Why?

Because, as before stated, THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the bookseller's mainstay.

It enables him to attend to his business intelligently and to find your books when he wants them.

By its aid he is able to aid you and himself by selling your books.

By studying its announcements he is able to know what is coming out, and to make up his mind what to order when the book is offered to him.

It enables him to reach his customer before publication, by notifying him that you are about to issue a book that will be of interest to him.

Is this not what you want?

As he keeps his WEEKLY on file, it is convenient to him to constantly study it, and you will be surprised perhaps to know how often he goes over your liberal quarter or half page, crowded to the hilt with everything you can get in it, evidently seeking all you can get for the money.

You know as well I do that, after all, you depend on us booksellers, as we do on you. You need us as much as we need you. Then why are you so blind to your own interests as to waste your time and money in circulars, bulletins and newspaper advertising, which may nevertheless be indulged in to a limited, a very limited, extent? Spend what you would save in this tion in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. That field for you to spend your money and gen Treat the retailer as you would the public, will represent you before them, never you He loves to read original advertisements; tles in this respect are gratifying to him. gentlemen would adapt yourselves to thi would be surprised by receiving orders fro tailers of whom you did not before kno existence.

Lastly, why is it that you insist upon adver only the books of immediate publication? has become of those of the past six months your edition exhausted, or are they withd from the market? Why do you not keep before us all the time? You must know th are anxious to sell anything, and that so books are coming out that those of a short past are soon lost to sight unless we get a c to see their titles. It will pay you to cater

Give us a PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY we c proud of, more than we already are. Let it to us with fifty or a hundred pages of adver from you every week. Repeat the book advertised, and it will come to pass that tailers will know something of your book you, and before you know it you will find keeping them in stock and trying to sell Give us display advertisements like the F trade papers, where you can see the titles wit and comfort, and that attract your attentio moment you look at them. Instead of w your money in printing and mailing your m ly bulletins and slips, which do you no put the same amount of money in the colum the WEEKLY. Keep your books constantl fore us, for it is by this means we can many a sale for you that would otherwise b for lack of knowledge. We want to help y this, for it helps us at the same time. I hon believe that I echo the sentiments in this m of every retailer in the United States. for a season, and see if the results do not out what I have said.

JUST READY:

The Co-operative Index to Periodicals for 1890.

This work is a key to the contents of nearly one hundred representative magazines and periodicals published in the English language in the United States and Great Britain. It has been prepared by W: I. Fletcher, of Amherst College (the editor of Poole's Index), who has had the co-operation of nearly forty members of the American Library Association.

To the literary worker its value can hardly be overestimated ; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field ; to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time ; and to the bookseller it is of the greatest practical value, as it enables him to look up at once any inquiries for magazine articles, no matter how the question is asked.

Now issued as an annual, the index to the whole year being in one alphabet, by title of article or subject, supplemented by an author index, the work has reached its most complete stage of development.

The price has been fixed at $2.50 in half morocco, $2.00 in paper.

NOTES IN SEASON.

CHARLES L. WEBSTER & Co. have just issued a collection of nineteen stories by George R. Sims, under the title "Tinkletop's Crime, and other stories," nearly all of which are of humorous character.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have just ready, the third volume of Sybel's monumental work on "The Founding of the German Empire." This volume is almost wholly occupied with the dramatic events that occurred between 1848, when King Christian of Denmark died, and 1864, when the preliminaries of peace between Denmark and Germany were signed.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready, in the Questions of the Day Series, "The Question of Copyright," a useful compilation already fully described in a previous issue; the second edition, thoroughly revised and extended, of W. Swan Sonnenschein's "The Best Books," a list of the best available books in every department of literature; an interesting and instructive sketch of the life of Charles Darwin in the Leaders of Science Series; and "French Ballads," printed in the original text, edited by T. F. Crane, which forms the 32d volume in their Knickerbocker Nuggets Series.

HARPER & BROS. will publish shortly a new volume by James Lane Allen, entitled 'Flute and Violin," and other Kentucky tales and romances. Mr. Allen is a native of Kentucky, having been born on a small farm in the neighborhood of Lexington several years before the war. His great-grandfather was one of the early pioneers of the State, and his family is related to that of Vice-President R. M. Johnson, and also that of Cassius M. Clay. His present home is in Cincinnati. Although he regards his forthcoming volume as the first-fruits of his studies in the art of writing short stories, readers of these stories will find them full of vitality, and by no means deficient in the marks which characterize mature and skilful workmanship.

D. APPLETON & Co. announce for early publication "We All," by Octave Thanet, with many illustrations, a new book in the successful series of Good Books for Young Readers; "Tourmalin's Time Cheques," a new story by F. Anstey, author of "Vice Versa," etc.; "The Maid of Honor," by the Hon. Lewis Wingfield, author of "Lady Grizel;" "From Sunshine to Shadow," a novel, by the Marquis of Lorne; "Consequences," a novel, by Egerton Castle; Baldwin's "Applied Psychology and Art of Teaching;" Herbart's "Psychology;" "A Descriptive Guide-Book to Canada," including full accounts of the opportunities for sportsmen and tourists, by Charles G. D. Roberts, the Canadian poet and litterateur; new and revised editions of Appletons' "Dictionary of New York," "Summer Resorts," and "General Guide to the United States and Canada;" and "North America," volume fifteen of Reclus' great work, "The Earth and Its Inhabitants."

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish immediately Mr. Fiske's work on the "American Revolution," in two volumes, which are marked by the same clearness, candor and indescribable charm which belong to Mr. Fiske's other historical works; "Colonel Carter of Cartersville," the remarkable story of a typical Virginian, which has been appearing in the Century; "Fourteen to One," a book of fourteen short stories by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, who is perhaps at the head of American writers of short stories. Her book will include "Jack the Fisherman" and "The Madonna of the Tubs," two stories which have had a very wide popularity. Two other books of short stories for the same date are "Balaam and His Master, and other stories," by Joel Chandler Harris, whom everybody knows and admires as "Uncle Remus;" and "Otto the Knight, and other stories," by Octave Thanet, whose "Knitters in the Sun" is one of the best books of short stories ever published in America. The May volume in the Riverside Paper Series is "A Girl Graduate," by Celia P. Woolley, which is a thoroughly good and readable story.

Ammen, Daniel. The old navy and the new; with an appendix of personal letters from General Grant. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1891. c. 553 p. por. O. cl., $3.

"During the more than half a century covered by this chronicle, so marvellous have been the changes in naval architecture and armament, in the development of means of locomotion both on shore and afloat, and in the establishment of rapid communication over the whole inhabited globe, that the intelligent reader can hardly realize that they have occurred within so brief an historical period of time. A principal object of the memoirs has been to note these mutations in their order, and to present a picture of naval life as affected by them. It has also been the author's intention to make the narrative as impersonal as possible, representative not only of his own experience, but also of that of many other officers, varying from his only in time and circumstances."—Preface.

Mr. Gustavus Adolphus Swann was an incorporator of the Hailfellows Club of New York. He had been a member for twenty years when he died. Immediately after his death several of his associates were stricken with fear at the sight of Uncle Gus' ghost in the club-rooms. Out of this incident grew a psychical experiment of Meldrum and Wadlow. By their methods they are enabled to witness the literary phenomena which is told in the story, and to their efforts may be traced the origin of a club whose enrolled members are a select few fitted by nature to belong to the "Enchanted."

*Cowperthwaite, A. C., M.D. A text-book of materia medica and therapeutics, characteristic, analytical and comparative. 6th ed., rev. and enl. Chic., Gross & Delbridge, 1891. 850 p. 8°, cl., $6; shp., $7.

Crane, T: F:, ed. Chansons populaires de la France: a selection from French popular ballads; ed., with introd. and notes, by T: F: Crane. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, [1891.] c. 39+282 p. il. T. (Knickerbocker nuggets, no. 32.) hf. cl., $1.50.

This collection was made for the general reader who is acquainted with French. All ballads are omitted in dialect or patois, as well as those whose freedom of tone relegates them to collections intended only for the scholar. As the editor's intention has been primarily to furnish a companion volume to the English and Spanish ballads in this series, he has restricted his choice mainly to narrative poems containing more or less of a story.

Dale, Mrs. —. Fair and false. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 282 p. D. (Seaside lib., no. 1806.) pap., 20 c.

Darwin, C: Geological observations on the volcanic islands and parts of South America visited during the voyage of H. M. S. Beagle. 3d ed. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. 13+648 p. maps, il. D. cl., $2.

Delitzsch, Franz, D.D. Biblical commentary on the prophecies of Isaiah; authorized tr. from the 3d ed. by Rev. Ja. Denney. In 2 v. V. 1. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, [1891.] 8+520 p. O. (Foreign Biblical lib.) cl., $2.50.

The clergyman and theological student will find in this commentary a work of surpassing interest. Isaiah has been called the Evangelical Prophet of the Old Testament, because of his many references to the Messiah, descriptions of His birth and death, etc. Therefore the book of Isaiah has always been one of the great points of controversy between the Christian and the non-Christian. The Christian minister must preach from Isaiah, must often go to Isaiah for the most brilliant prophetical utterances attesting to the truth of the religion of Jesus of Nazareth. The work of Delitzsch is scholarly, exhaustive, profound and reverent.

Dumas, Alex., (fils.) The Clémenceau case; (Memoire de la accuse;) from the French, by W: L. Marshall. Phil., Crawford & Co., 47 N. 9th St., [1891.] c. tr. 219 p. D. pap., 50 c.

Evans, Llewelyn J., and Smith, H: Preserved. Biblical scholarship and inspiration: two papers. Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1891. c. 126 p. O. pap., 50 c.

These addresses were prepared in view of the current attack on higher criticism and Biblical theology. The authors (professors of Biblical literature) suppose this attack to be based largely on misconceptions as to the nature of the higher criticism on the one hand, and as to the definition of Biblical inspiration on the other. The aim of the addresses is to call attention to the nature of the facts and arguments with which Biblical study must deal.

Eye and ear memory. N. Y., Ja. P. Downes, 243 Broadway, [1891.] c. 110 p. D. (The memory and thought ser., v. 1, no. 3.) pap., $1.

Includes chapters on eye memory and ear memory. Rev. Jesse L. Hurlbut, D.D., tells of his remarkable success with the "accretive method" set forth in the series of which this monograph forms part. Joseph Singer contributes the concluding chapter on memorizing music. A practical and suggestive number.

Fawcett, Edgar. A New York family: a novel: il. by T: Nast and others. N. Y., Cassell Publishing Co., [1891.] c. 5+277 p. D. cl., $1.

Fritz Eberhard, a German, began his career in America as a Hoboken grocer. Prosperity attended him, and he married Mary Smith, the daughter of a New York restaurant-keeper. Fritz soon Anglicized his name, and was known to the public as Frederick Everard. He then moved to New York, took a partner and set up the establishment of Everard & Flagler. The novel deals with the success and failures of the Everard family. The scenes are in well-known New York localities. The action is divided between the Everards and members of the Tweed ring. Some of Tweed's exploits are introduced. The personality of Tweed, Sweeney and others of the ring is described. Many of the characters are real personages, and the illustrations are in a number of instances actual portraits.

Fewkes, J. Walter, ed. A journal of American ethnology and archæology. V. 1. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. 4+133 p. il. maps, O. pap., $2; cl., $2.50.

This journal is one of the fruits of the Hemenway Archæological Expedition, and includes (1) A few summer ceremonials at Zuni Pueblo, by Prof. Fewkes, describing the rain dances and other semi-religious ceremonies of the Zunis, such as foot-races, rabbit-hunts, planting of prayer-plumes, and communal burning of pottery; (2) Zuni melodies, by Mr. B: Ives Gilman; and, (3) An archæological reconnoissance of ruins in or near the Zuni reservation.

Gillett, Omer T., M.D. How I became a sailor, and other sketches. Cin., O., Cranston & Stowe, 1891. c. 223 p. D. cl., 75 c.

The greater part of the book is taken up with the events that led to Grandpa Trumbull's appointment, when a youth, as midshipman in the United States navy, and a description of his cruises on the war-ships Fulton and Lexington. There are two other short sketches, "Vera" and "He gave his life for others."

"Vera" tells how a little cripple made a livelihood and benefited her young associates. "He gave his life for others" is a story of self-sacrifice.

Gladden, Washington, D.D. Who wrote the Bible? A book for the people. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. c. 3+381 p. S. cl., $1.25.

"The aim of this volume," the author says, "is to put into compact and popular form, for the benefit of intelligent readers, the principal facts upon which scholars are now generally agreed concerning the literary history of the Bible. The doctrines taught in the Bible will not be discussed. Its claims to a supernatural origin will not be the principal matter of inquiry. The book will concern itself chiefly with those purely natural and human agencies which have been employed in writing, transcribing, editing, preserving, transmitting, translating and publishing the Bible."

O'Connor, T. P. The Parnell movement; being the history of the Irish question from the death of O'Connell to the present time; with a sketch of the author by T: Nelson Page. N. Y., Cassell Publishing Co., [1891.] c. 7+370 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author is a noted Irish journalist and a famous leader in the English parliament of the Irish party. He was eminently fitted to write a book of the Parnell movement, as he has both watched it and taken part in it from its inception. This work is considered so dispassionate as to have been used both by the Liberals and the Parnellites as a campaign text-book in two successive campaigns. Beginning with the fall of the great O'Connell and an account of the Irish famine, the various events of the movement are noted down to the present time—this being the latest edition of the work. O'Connor is the author also of "Gladstone's House of Commons" and "The life of Lord Beaconsfield."

Sonnenschein, W: Swan. The best books: a readers' guide to the choice of the best available books (about 50,000), in every department of science, art and literature, down to 1890; with the dates of the first and last editions and the price, size and publisher's name of each book; a contribution towards systematic bibliography. 2d ed., with complete indexes. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. 1100 p. 4°, cl., net, $9; interleaved, net, $13.50.

The specialist as well as the "general reader," for whom this interesting bibliography was prepared, will find in it a volume of great usefulness and value. It is a most excellent general catalogue of books of permanent value on all subjects. The plan has been to group the books firstly into large classes, then into sections, subsections and paragraphs—with the result of obtaining all the literature of one subject in one list, and that of outlying subjects close at hand. Cross-references have been freely employed, while the author, title and subject indexes added to this edition make reference extremely easy. Mr. Sonnenschein states that there are twice as many books in this new edition as in the first (about 50,000 against 25,000), and a large number of new characterizations of books and bibliographical and other notes have been added—to former as well as fresh entries. The compiler has avoided confusing the seeker after information, by not including any very large number of books in each section, recording only such as are "best," the term being used in the most catholic sense. Its scope is further limited to books in print and obtainable in the ordinary course of trade.

Swan, Annie S., [Mrs. Burnett-Smith.] St. Veda's; or, the Pearl of Orr's Haven. Cin., O., Cranston & Stow, [1891.] 319 p. por. il. D. cl., 90 c.

Annie Erskine was called the Pearl of Orr's Haven because she was washed ashore from the Cornelian, which was wrecked in the Haven. Some fisherfolks, named Erskine, adopted her, and until she was 20 years old she supposed herself to be their daughter. The story tells how the knowledge that she was not, affected her; the romantic history of Annie's parents; her love for Sir Archibald Grant; how Janet Erskine's actions changed the tenor of her life, and how she came into the inheritance at St. Vedas.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Boston, Mass.—Bardwell, Blackmer & Co., publishers of subscription books, have dissolved partnership.

Chicago, Ill.—Neely Bros., booksellers and stationers, have been burned out.

Chicago, Ill.—The M. H. Kauffman Medical Publishing Company has been incorporated to publish physicians' and druggists' books and manufacture stationery. The capital stock is $50,000; incorporators, W. Bodeman, M. H. Kauffman and W. A. Dyche.

Cincinnati, O.—Alfred Warren, bookseller and stationer, wishes the trade to know that he has moved back to his old location, No. 217 Central Avenue, now occupied by "The Alfred Warren Company," of which he is President.

Cold Springs, Minn.—Straus & Schneider, dealers in books and stationery, have dissolved partnership.

Columbia City, Ind.—G. M. Nabur, bookseller, has sold out.

Columbus, O.—Geo. S. Cadwallader, bookseller and stationer, has made an assignment.

Detroit, Mich.—J. McLogan & Co., booksellers and stationers, have dissolved.

Fairfield, Ill.—Patterson & Morris, dealers in books and stationery, have gone out of business.

Leavenworth, Kan.—Wm. Coughlan, bookseller and stationer, has gone out of business.

Little Rock, Ark.—H. D. Parsons, bookseller and stationer, has sold out.

Madison, S. D.—McCormick & Noblett, book sellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

Oakland, Cal.—H. G. Webster has sold out his interest in the stationery and book business of J. L. Champlin & Co.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Fire on the 26th completely destroyed the five-story building Nos. 728 and 730 Cherry Street, occupied by J. R. Jones & Co., who conducted an extensive subscription-book publishing business, under the title of the National Publishing Company. The loss is estimated at $200,000, from one-third to one-half of which is covered by insurance. The fire originated in the basement from some unknown cause, and quickly destroyed the building, on the top floor of which 100 tons of paper were stored.

Philadelphia, Pa.—W. H. Hartley, 52 N. 5th St., executor for the estate of Thomas W. Hartley & Co., having filed his account of the estate, notifies all persons having claims that the account will be audited this month (May).

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The firm of Duncan M. McAllister & Co., of Salt Lake City, is now incorporated, and will hereafter be known as the "Utah Book and Stationery Company."

Seattle, Wash.—The Seattle Book Company has sold out.

Spokane Falls, Wash.—J. H. Mull has gone out of the book business.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 2, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

PUBLISHERS' RISK AND IMPRINT.

WE took occasion recently to differ with the editor of The Author, who persists in holding the opinion that no book need be published at a loss. On the occasion referred to we presented estimates to prove our position: that publishers not only run a risk, but very often meet with loss. It will perhaps add weight to what we have already said to quote proof from another source. In a volume recently published, under the title of "The Publisher and His Friends," is a letter written October 25, 1831, by John Murray, the publisher, to Washington Irving, from which we make the following extract: "The publication of 'Columbus' cost me, paper, printing, advertising, and author, £5700, and it has produced but £4700. 'Granada' cost £3073, and its sale has produced but £1830, making me a gross loss of £2250." The first point to note in this letter is, that though the publisher's gross loss amounted to £2250, the author was not called upon to share any of this loss; and the second point is, that this loss was incurred by the publisher in the publication of the works of an author of established reputation. We are quite confident, were the editor of The Author generous enough to give the publishers a fair hearing, many such risks as the one quoted above could be put in evidence by publishers on both sides of the Atlantic.

The following quotation from a recent issue of The Author should not be overlooked, not because of the weight which it would carry with an author who has gained popularity, but because of the possibility of its misleading the author who has yet a reputation to make: "Fortunately" (says The Author) "the public cares nothing about who publishes a book; it is concerned solely with the contents. Plenty of men — hundreds and thousands of men — are willing and anxious to step into any trade in which they can make money." Does the editor of The Author mean to assert that the reputation of an honorable and upright publisher carries no weight in introducing to the public the author, or in increasing the sales of his book? The publisher's imprint which it has cost time, money and expenditures in many ways to establish, must to a certain extent influence at least the sales of a book among the constituency that that trade has founded. Otherwise a drygoods house could as successfully issue a book, or the author himself. In the latter case, however, failure has almost invariably overtaken him. Let the public as well as the author consider that publishers of wholesome literature are doing a service for education as well as morality, at a cost and risk that involves not only their capital and their living, but that their recompense in the majority of cases is at least but a comfortable competency. That as a class they are just in their dealings and upright in their business transactions is, we think, beyond question; and because some of "those hundreds and thousands of men who are willing to step into any trade to make money" have brought disgrace upon the profession, the profession as a class should not be open to continual assault and unjust criticism.

DUTY ON REBOUND BOOKS.

THE United States Treasury Department and the Board of General Appraisers each have made a decision relative to old books that have been sent to a foreign country for rebinding. General Spaulding, Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury, claims the books should be entered free, while the General Appraisers say they were subject to duty.

Should the contention of the Board of General Appraisers be upheld by court it is believed that a great deal of dissatisfaction will arise among those who are making a collection of fine bindings. Under the old law all foreign books published twenty years or more prior to their importation were allowed to enter free.

A great many old books are frequently sent to Paris and England for rebinding, and it has been customary to allow them to come in without the payment of duty. The Board of General Appraisers now decides that the new tariff bill changes all this, and that if a book is sent to a foreign country to be rebound a duty of 25 per cent. ad valorem must be paid before the book can be delivered. Thus a book may have been brought here fifty or sixty years ago, or longer but if the owner decides to send it to a foreign country for rebinding he will have to pay the duty on the whole book, for which, if it valued $500, a duty of 25 per cent. ad valorem will be collected.

The decision of the general board was rendered at the request of the Collector of Customs of New York, and is as follows:

"The appellants contended that the books having been printed and once bound more than twenty years since, were brought within the provisions of the free list of the existing law, which is as follows: Books, engravings, photographs, bound or unbound etchings, maps and charts, which shall have been printed and bound or manufactured more than twenty years at the date of importation, are on the free list, and could not afterward be excluded by a rebinding, which is in the nature of repairs."

The Board of General Appraisers contend:

"It will not be denied that the term binding includes rebinding, and it will seem from the whole paragraph that Congress intended that such books only should be entitled to free entry as are substantially in the same condition they were twenty years prior to importation.

"The word 'bound' is new matter added by the act of October 1, 1890, to previous legislation, and we cannot give effect to this additional language unless we find that Congress meant to embrace by it the entire condition in which books should be admitted to free entry.

"The appellants made an effort to pay duty on the cost of rebinding, which they had ascertained, but no provision exists therefor.

"We hold, therefore, that books entitled to free entry must be both printed and bound more than twenty years prior to importation, and that such binding includes rebinding where the same is entire, as in the present cases."

CONTENTION IN REBUTTAL.

General O. C. Spaulding, Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury, contends that the act of 1890 does not differ from the act of March 1883, as far as it relates to books which have been recently bound but have been actually printed and published more than twenty years are exempt from duty, notwithstanding the fact that they have been rebound and repaired within that period. And the Collectors will be justified in admitting them free.

"FORTY YEARS AMONG THE OLD BOOKSELLERS OF PHILADELPHIA."

UNDER the above title W. Brotherhead, the well-known antiquarian bookseller of Philadelphia, has published a little book which we recommend to all who have the slightest interest in the trade.

Mr. Brotherhead began selling old books in 1849 at the northwest corner of Sixth and Market Streets. His stock was worth about $60. As he had more shelf-room than books and as he, like nature, couldn't bear a vacuum, he added cigars to his stock and filled the empty shelves with cigar-boxes. These in a short time he took down, and in their place covered the empty shelves with Catlin's portraits of Indians. These being highly colored, made a good show.

He bought his books chiefly at auction—then carried on by G. W. Lord, at the southeast corner of Sixth and Decatur Streets. The old book trade was essentially different from that of to-day. American books were not so plentiful, and the English sales chiefly supplied the wants of the dealers in old books. Lumley, of London, sent over large invoices of miscellaneous books, most of them the trash of the London auction-houses. Mr. Brotherhead remembers seeing Lumley buying thousands of volumes at a time for the American market. Willis & Sotheran also supplied Philadelphia dealers with books, which, however, were of the best quality.

Americana, or books on America, were not much in demand forty years ago. In 1850 Mr. Brotherhead began importing English books, those that were rare and curious, among them many curious books on America. At that time there were but four men actively engaged in collecting Americana—E. D. Ingraham, the eccentric and witty bibliopole, Jabez Fisher, R. C. Davis and John McAllister, all dead now, we believe.

After importing for four years, Mr. Brotherhead found the mania for collecting books on America was gradually increasing. He instructed his agents to collect everything they could find either in books, engravings or autographs. The Americana fever, in fact, grew miraculously. Ingraham died; his collection of books, comprising over 17,000 volumes, was sold at auction. Every nook and corner of Ingraham's house had been packed with books. Among his books were quite a number that were claimed by different persons, owing to an idiosyncrasy of Ingraham's, namely, to make "forced loans" when he could not obtain a book in any other way. His penchant was first to buy—if the persons would not sell, he would borrow and never return, for the book he must have at any cost, even at the risk of his honor. The Ingraham sale gave the first serious impetus to the mania for collecting books on America; Philadelphia being then the principal source of supply, Menzies, Bailey, Myers, John Munroe and John Allen among the most enthusiastic collectors.

In January, 1857, Mr. Brotherhead commenced the publication of American Notes and Queries, the first American magazine devoted to this subject. He issued only four numbers—500 copies each, which are now very scarce—the support for such a journal being then as scant as it is to-day.

At that time Philadelphia, with its 300,000 inhabitants, had a greater number and more active old booksellers than it now has, with a population of over a million. In the 50's Philadelphia had fifteen well-appointed antiquarian bookshops doing a good business; to-day there are not more than twelve that are worth mentioning.

In 1859, Mr. Brotherhead conceived the idea of making a book containing fac-simile letters of each signer of the Declaration of Independence, and other matters pertaining to them. This he accomplished, and in 1860 published it. He had a number of subscribers—several from the South. Dr. Gibbes, a well-known writer and historian, was a subscriber; in 1860, when the late rebellion was in its first throes, when South Carolina became hotly belligerent, when she first organized her rebellious forces, when everything was red hot, Dr. Gibbes paid a last visit to his old friend, Dr. Samuel Jackson, in Philadelphia. He also called on Mr. Brotherhead and paid for his copy, adding that "it would be the last money he would pay as a citizen of the United States." He lived to see his mistake. As a mark of his worth the Rebel Government made him Surgeon-in-Chief of the Confederate Army. He is now dead.

Another singular circumstance of the late war occurred: One of his subscribers from Norfolk, Virginia, a well-known book-collector, a minister of the Protestant Episcopal Church, desired him to send his copy by express, C. O. D. This was done, and the money sent by express—it was all in five-cent pieces—with a note stating he was sorry to send such small money, but war was afloat everywhere, and Virginia would soon be out of the Union.

As a mark of respect to Queen Victoria, Mr. Brotherhead had a folio copy of his book sent to her through the United States Minister at the Court of St. James, G. M. Dallas, formerly Vice-President of the United States, and of this city. When the courtly and highly-talented Minister returned to this city from England, he brought Mr. Brotherhead a letter of thanks from Lord John Russell, who was then Home Secretary.

In 1860 he commenced a circulating library at 218 South Eighth Street. From the large stock of old books which he had, he selected the nucleus of his library, and added to it the new books as they were issued. He still continued buying and selling old books, while the patrons to his library daily increased. The success of his library caused him to pay more attention to it than to old-book selling, and this business of the library was his chief care. The lease of the store at 218 South Eighth Street ended in 1863, and at that time, when the war absorbed every person and every action, he found it difficult to rent a suitable place. He, however, rented 911 Locust Street, and added such alterations as he deemed necessary.

In 1867 he bought the property No. 205 South Thirteenth Street. He pulled the old building down and erected a new house, and made the first story for his library, and to it he moved in November, 1867. He still continued old-book buying and selling, and used the basement of his house for that purpose. At this time he had 50,000 volumes in his library, which in number of volumes and first-class literature had not, at that time, its equal in the United States as a circulating library.

In addition to his library in Philadelphia, he opened branches in Pottsville, Wilkesbarre, Washington, D. C., Elkton, Md., and Dover, Del. These were all in existence for years, until the persons with whom he had made arrangements either died or changed their business.

About 1877 commenced the issue of cheap literature; the Lakeside Library was commenced in Chicago; the Seaside followed, with numerous other issues that affected all libraries like Mr. Brotherhead's.

In 1878 he met with a serious accident by falling on the ice, and injured his spine. For several months he was seriously sick under Dr. Brinton's care—at least he advised him to go to Europe, as his nervous condition was so shattered by the fall. He sold out his business, first at private sale, and afterwards at auction. He spent most 1878 and 1879 in England, and felt somewhat better, but it took five years before he fully recovered his health.

In 1875, when the Centennial was the talk of the day, and everything was in active preparation for the next year, 1876, he decided to issue a second series of his "Book of the Signers." This second series was supplementary to the matter in his first book, the fac-simile letters being new, and the historical matter new and more complete. His loss in money on this enterprise, exclusive of labor and time, amounted to over $5000. This harassed him pecuniarily so that he never fully recovered from it.

"All this patriotic devotion and irksome labor," to quote Mr. Brotherhead, "elicited only plain, bald sympathy, but not a particle of material aid. I still live comfortably and humbly, and though I cannot boast of my thousands of dollars, yet my books will live as long as the Republic exists—nay, they can never die while an historical scholar lives or our grand libraries exist. This is poor consolation in a money point of view, but the poor scholar looks to a brighter future not tinged with the dross of gold."

After his return from England in 1879, he again got quietly into business with about 1000 volumes of old books. He chiefly sold to booksellers in different parts of the country by catalogue and otherwise; but his health being gradually restored, he opened his present bookstore, 1440 South Street, with a very limited stock. Though now in his 67th year, Mr. Brotherhead claims that he still feels vigorous, and hopes to die in harness.

In his little book he sketches a few of his contemporaries in the old-book business, thus partially filling up gaps in the history of the trade that some future historian may find useful.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THE new Lord Houghton is a poet, it appears. He is about to publish a volume entitled "Stray Verses."

AMELIA E. BARR'S "Woven of Love and Glory," published by J. Clark & Co., London, is the same as her "Remember the Alamo," published by Dodd, Mead & Co.

LADY DUFFERIN will follow up her recent volume on her life with Lord Dufferin in London with one on their life in Canada, when Lord Dufferin was Governor-General. It will be entitled "My Canadian Journey, 1872 and 1873."

MRS. GRANT has concluded that she will not, for the present at least, publish the "Reminiscences of Gen. Grant," upon which she has been working for some time past. She will complete her work as a record to be kept by her children, and a mass of material which would in any event have been withheld, had her manuscript been printed, has been added to the written chapters, and the whole matter will be turned over to one of the sons for safe keeping. According to E. W. Bok all of Gen. Grant's love-letters and the most valuable comments on the war are embodied in the manuscript. Mrs. Grant will impose no restriction upon her children as to the disposition of the material after her death, but while she lives it is settled that the public will not have her "Reminiscences."

OBITUARY.

FREDERICK W. CHRISTERN.

By the death of Frederick W. Christern, at his home at 420 West 20th Street, New York City, the foreign book trade in the United States loses its oldest and perhaps most honored member.

Mr. Christern was born at Lauenburg in 1816, at that time a Danish possession, now an independent Dukedom under the dominion of Prince Bismarck. In his fifteenth year he was apprenticed to the firm of Herold & Wahlstab, in that day the leading publishers and booksellers of Lüneburg, Germany. Here he remained until 1836, when he entered the employ of a brother of Mr. Herold, at that time the leading retail bookseller in Hamburg. According to the custom of his day, that all journeymen should visit the principal centres of their special trades, Mr. Christern travelled through many cities, serving a longer or shorter time with many firms of note, and at one time being employed in Warsaw, Poland. In 1850 he was employed in Munich, Germany, waiting for an opening to establish a business of his own. In that day only a certain number of firms were permitted within a given city, and the chance waited for seemed most uncertain. At the suggestion of Rudolph Garrigue, now President of the Germania Fire Insurance Company of New York City, Mr. Christern came to America and began his career in this country in Philadelphia, then the centre of the book trade. He entered the employ of John Weick, and after a time established himself independently. In 1853 he came to New York to take charge of the retail department of the business of Rudolph Garrigue, who was then an importer and retailer of foreign books and also engaged upon the reproduction in this country of Brockhaus' "Iconographic Encyclopædia," with English text. They formed a partnership under the name of Garrigue & Christern, and did business for a time in the Astor House. After meeting with irreparable loss through fire, Mr. Garrigue decided to abandon the book trade and Mr. Christern established himself as retailer of foreign books at 763 Broadway. From that time until his death, Mr. Christern was a representative figure in his branch of the book trade, and the various locations of his store have kept pace with the northward development of the city. He moved to 763 Broadway in 1856; ten years later to 863 Broadway; then to 77 University Place; later to 37 West 23d Street, and finally to 254 Fifth Avenue, the present location of his well-known store. Mr. Christern has always conducted his business on a consistent conservative plan, and has held a leading position among his colleagues as a man of strictest integrity and enthusiastic loyalty to principle, often at most inconvenient pecuniary loss.

The present plan is to continue the business, but the details of management have not yet been settled.

Mr. Christern remained wholly German throughout his American career, and was always a leader in all schemes and charities to promote German interests in his adopted country.

He was an active member of almost every German organization of social or charitable importance in this city, and his loss will be distinctly felt throughout a large circle. At the time of his death he was a trustee of the German Hospital, a member of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the New York Historical Society, the New York Geographical Society, and many other organizations. His store has for many years been the rendez-vous of almost all scientific and literary men visiting this country, who almost invariably brought letters of introduction to Mr. F. W. Christern.

Mr. Christern leaves a widow and two daughters.

ROBERT G. WYNKOOP.

Robert G. Wynkoop, one of the oldest, best known and widely respected booksellers of New York State, died at his residence in Syracuse, on the morning of April 17, aged 75 years.

Mr. Wynkoop was born at Catskill, N. Y., in 1816. He prepared for a college course at Kinderhook Academy, but he resolved upon a business career, and went into the book trade at Hudson in 1836. From that city he removed to Auburn in 1842, and there continued the book business. In 1848 he went to Syracuse, where he has since remained. The firm of Wynkoop Brothers, booksellers, consisting of R. G. and J. G. Wynkoop, was organized on their taking up their residence in Syracuse, and continued for twenty-three years, when, in 1871, J. G. Wynkoop retired, and since then the firm has been R. G. Wynkoop & Co., Mr. J. S. Wynkoop being his father's partner.

Mr. Wynkoop's life has been that of an active business man and public-spirited citizen. He has been prominent and influential in many relations, and has enjoyed the confidence and respect of the community. He was for years first Vice-President of the Onondaga County Savings Bank, a Director in the Trust and Deposit Company and the New York State Banking Company, a Trustee in the Onondaga County Orphan Asylum, the Old Ladies' Home and the Oakwood Cemetery Association.

As a man and citizen he was able, faithful and influential—always doing his part well and willingly. His friendly, generous greeting and his warm friendship were characteristics that will be missed by the many persons with whom and himself close attachments existed.

In 1835 he married Miss Caroline C. Wood of Auburn, who died in 1870. He leaves three children, two sons, James S. and Robert G., Jr., and a daughter, Mrs. Charles T. Redfield.

CHARLES L. WEBSTER.

Charles L. Webster, of Charles L. Webster & Co., died at his home in Fredonia, N. Y., April 26.

He was a civil engineer by profession, and for some time previous to 1884 he was associated with Samuel L. Clemens ("Mark Twain") in the engraving business. In 1884 Mr. Clemens and Mr. Webster, who are related by marriage, Mr. Webster having married Anna Moffitt, a niece of "Mark Twain," formed the publishing house of C. L. Webster & Co., Mr. Webster also acting at that time as agent for J. R. Osgood & Co. The first book put out by the firm was Mr. Clemens' "Huckleberry Finn." The next publication was "General Grant's Memoirs," which brought Mr. Webster prominently before the public as a publisher. The memoirs were followed in 1886, by the "McClellan Memoirs," and shortly afterward the "Life of Pope Leo XIII." appeared.

In 1887 Mr. Webster visited Pope Leo, who conferred upon him the title of Chevalier of the Order of Pius IX. About three years ago Mr. Webster's health became so impaired through frequent and severe attacks of neuralgia that his physician advised his retirement from all active business. This advice Mr. Webster followed, and after travelling in Europe, returned with his wife and his children to Fredonia. His place in the firm was taken by F. J. Hall, who had been connected with the house ever since it was established, and who is now sole partner with Mr. Clemens.

BOOKS FOR PRINTERS.

A. HARTLEBEN, of Vienna and Leipzic, has just published two works of considerable interest to printers and publishers. One is entitled "Die Erfindung der Buchdruckerkunst," and deals with the discovery of printing. It has been written by Prof. Karl Faulmann, well known as the author of an illustrated "History of Printing," which was accorded a medal at the recent International Printing Exhibition in Vienna. The book is a handsome octavo volume with thirty-six illustrations, and a genealogical table of the Gänsfleisch-Gutenberg family. The second publication referred to is "Das Buch," a technological and practical introduction to the art of writing books. This work, which is by Herr J. H. Wehle, has already reached a second edition.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

I. H. BROWN & Co., St. Louis, Mo., will publish early in June a series of "Popular Dialogues," each of which will be sold at ten cents.

A NUMBER of publishers have presented Mr. R. U. Johnson with a loving-cup of solid silver, in token of their appreciation of his work for International Copyright.

PROFESSOR F. M. TAYLOR, of Michigan University, will shortly publish, in the Proceedings of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, an article on "Natural Law."

WM. CUSHING, 19 Ware St., Cambridge, Mass., has been employed during the last year in collecting brief biographical notices of Harvard graduates, which he hopes soon to publish under the title "Harvard Graduates Before 1860."

JOHN WILEY & SONS have in preparation a work on "Car Lubrication," by W. E. Hall, of the Penn. R. R.; "The Mechanical Engineer's Pocket-Book," by Wm. Kent, M.E.; also "The Transitive Curve Field Book," by Clinton R. Howard, C.E.

ROBERT CLARKE & Co. have in press a reprint, with notes by Lyman C. Draper, of Withers' "Chronicles of Border Warfare," first published in Clarksburg, Va., in 1831; and Venable's "Beginnings of Literary Culture in the Ohio Valley."

THE SALEM PRESS PUBLISHING AND PRINTING Co., Salem, Mass., will publish in June, "Salem Witchcraft in Outline," by Caroline E. Upham, a niece of Dr. O. W. Holmes. In August they will publish "Historic Storms," by Sidney Perley; an interesting account of the great storms, cold winters, hot summers, etc., from 1620 to the present.

GEBBIE & Co., Philadelphia, have published eight of twenty-five monthly parts of a subscription-book entitled "The American Continent and its Inhabitants Before Its Discovery by Columbus," by Annie Cole Cady, with illustrations by Henry N. Cady and others. The narrative is addressed to a group of boys and girls, and begins with the formation of the earth.

MACMILLAN & Co. will publish in the fall Lockwood Kipling's book, "Beast and Man in India." Lockwood Kipling (the father of Rudyard) writes from long personal experience of India. His work contains much valuable information concerning cattle raising, elephants, and the relations of the beast and bird-world generally to the people, and is profusely illustrated.

THE first volume of the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science will be shortly completed by the publication of the second part of Professor Meitzen's great work on Statistics. All statisticians and all persons interested in statistics will be glad to learn of this great addition to our English literature on this subject. Dr. Falkner's name as translator is a guarantee of a faithful rendering of this work.

J. G. CUPPLES, Boston, will be the publisher of a collection of about a score of sonnets and lyrics by the late Henry Bernard Carpenter, selected by James Jeffrey Roche, who preludes them by a study of the life and character of his old friend. The book will bear the title "A Poet's Last Songs." All the proceeds after paying for manufacture will go direct to Mrs. Carpenter.

ROBERTS BROTHERS will publish on May 9, "A Book o' Nine Tales," with Interludes by Arlo Bates, author of "A Lad's Love," "Albrecht," etc.; "A Question of Love," a story of Swiss life, translated from the French of T. Combe, by Annie R. Ramsey; "A Violin Obligato," and other stories, by Margaret Crosby; and "London of To-Day," an illustrated handbook of the season 1891, by Charles Eyre Pascoe, with additional text and illustrations.

ESTES & LAURIAT are making extensive improvements in their store, 301 to 305 Washington Street, and are fitting up the space formerly occupied by their publishing, subscription and wholesale departments with shelves, upon which they propose to display their old and rare books. The Washington Street store will thus be wholly devoted to the retail trade, including the furnishing of libraries, and the departments removed from it will find accommodation at the Estes Press Building, 301–305 Summer Street.

THE DUNLAP SOCIETY expects to issue this year a supplementary volume of Mr. William Winter's "Brief Chronicles," which will include an essay on the late Lawrence Barrett. Mr. William L. Keese is also preparing for the Society a memoir of the "Private Life of William E. Burton," to contain many interesting letters. Both of these, and a third volume not yet announced, will be illustrated. Mr. William Carey has succeeded Mr. Brander Matthews as Secretary, and his address is No. 33 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

GROSS & DELBRIDGE, Chicago, will publish June 15 next a new (sixth) edition of Dr. A. C. Cowperthwaite's "Text-Book of Materia Medica and Therapeutics, analytical and comparative." The most important new feature of this edition will be the omission of the brief "therapeutic range," and the substitution in its place of a complete résumé of the clinical uses of the drug, which, while comparatively brief, will cover the entire range of therapeutic action, together with the chief symptomatic drug indications in all important diseased states.

J. E. GARRATT & Co., London, have just issued a reprint of a curious and scarce pamphlet entitled "The Four Kings of Canada: being a succinct account of the four Indian princes lately arrived from North America, with a particular description of their country, their strange and remarkable religion, feasts, marriages, etc., with several other extraordinary things worthy of observation, as to the natural or curious productions, beauty or fertility of that part of the world." The four princes were Te Ye Neen Ho Ga Prow, Saga Yean Qua Prab Ton, Elow Ob Kaom and Oh Nee Yeath Ton No Prow, who went to England with Col. Nicholson, Governor of Maryland, to request the assistance of the Queen of Great Britain "to drive the French out from among them." The pamphlet was first printed by John Baker in 1710.

THE International Academy of Volapük is now completing the normal grammar of the "universal language." It will be at once translated and published simultaneously in fourteen languages: French, English, Russian, German, Danish, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Hungarian, Roumanian, Dutch, Flemish, Swedish and Japanese. The Academy of Volapük, founded in 1887 by the Munich Congress, and definitely established at the Paris Congress of 1889, is composed at present of thirty-five members, representing eighteen nationalities. The American members are Colonel Charles E. Sprague, of New York city; F. W. Mitchell, of Cambridge, Mass., and Lieutenant M. W. Wood, U. S. A., of Port Randall, Dakota. The publication of this normal grammar is designed to put an end to certain dissensions, "apparent," it is said, "rather than real," which now exist among the adherents of Volapük.

THE memoirs of Jennie Lind were published in London on April 25. They are edited by Canon Nollard and Rockstre from letters, documents and diaries belonging to her husband. The work comprises two very interesting volumes, which give her history up to the time of her marriage. The first chapter explains that the public is entitled to know only the artistic career of the singer, and not her domestic and private life. It appears that early in life she had a strong antipathy to a dramatic career. Writing to her father in 1842 she expressed the desire that God would save her from being obliged to sing on the stage. During her whole life there was a gradual increase of religious feeling, which doubtless induced her early retirement from the stage, although not through puritanical motives. The work includes accounts of the singer written by the Queen and Madame Schuman, and gives the cadenzas which she employed and her correspondence with Mendelssohn. A concise footnote gives an account of Jenny Lind's chief public appearances after her fateful journey to America, and with this the biography ends.

WORD comes from Paris that Littré's great dictionary of the French language is "threatened with a serious rival." Messrs. Delagrave, the publishers, have begun the issue, in parts, of what is called a "Dictionnaire Général de la Langue Francaise," by Messrs. Adolphe Hatzfeld, Arsène Darmesteter and Antoine Thomas. The first named is a professor at the Lycée Louis-le-Grand, and the others are professors at the Paris Faculty of Letters. In collaboration with them are a large number of learned writers whose names are set forth in the preface. The work has been in progress for twenty years, and their aim is said to have been "not only to give definitions, examples and etymologies, but to trace by successive quotations from writers at different periods of literary history the changes of form or meaning—often very curious—which different words have undergone." The compilers acknowledge their obligations to the labors of Littré, but they have access to a mass of valuable information which was not to be had in Littré's lifetime. Four parts of the new work, bringing it down to "Brou," have already appeared.

The Co-operative Index to Periodicals for 1890.

This work is a key to the contents of nearly one hundred representative magazines and periodicals published in the English language in the United States and Great Britain. It has been prepared by W: I. Fletcher, of Amherst College (the editor of Poole's Index), who has had the co-operation of nearly forty members of the American Library Association.

To the literary worker its value can hardly be overestimated; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field; to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time: and to the bookseller it is of the greatest practical value, as it enables him to look up at once any inquiries for magazine articles, no matter how the question is asked.

Now issued as an annual, the index to the whole year being in one alphabet, by title of article or subject, supplemented by an author index, the work has reached its most complete stage of development.

The price has been fixed at $2.50 in half morocco, $2.00 in paper.

"No more important historical work has appeared in the last decade."—Nation.

The Founding of the German Empire.

VOLUME III.

Based chiefly on Prussian State Documents, by HEINRICH VON SYBEL. Translated by Marshall Livingston Perrin, assisted by Gamaliel Bradford, Jr. Vol. III. 478 pages, with portrait of Von Moltke. 8vo, gilt top, $2.00; half morocco, $3.00. To be completed in 5 volumes.

The motto that marks the spirit of the third volume of Professor Von Sybel's great history is this: "He who sows the wind shall reap the whirlwind." The volume is almost wholly occupied with the dramatic events that occurred between 1848, when King Christian of Denmark—he who had so recklessly sowed the wind—died, and 1864, when the preliminaries of peace between Denmark and Germany were signed. In those days a great cloud of dust obscured the so-called Schleswig-Holstein question. Professor Von Sybel shows how simple the question really was, and in his most lucid and brilliant style he pictures the various exciting episodes of the Danish war. It is one of the most enthralling histories ever penned, and greatly enhances the value of the whole work.

The American Revolution.

By JOHN FISKE. With Plans of Battles, and a new Steel Portrait of Washingto a miniature never before reproduced. 2 vols., crown 8vo, gilt top, $4.00.

Readers of American history are to be congratulated on the opportunity of tracing the and course of the Revolution in Mr. Fiske's luminous narrative. This work gives a full a metrical statement of the principles involved in the Revolution, a complete history of the co and progress and facts of the long struggle; it portrays vividly the conspicuous figures in C and in the field, and it is so impartial, so clear, and so graphic that its value and its fascina equal and of the highest order.

Fourteen to One.

By ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS. 16mo, $1.25.

Fourteen admirable stories, among which are "Jack the Fisherman," one of the most sive and pathetic temperance stories ever told, and "The Madonna of the Tubs," which has enjoyed a very wide reading. The book will be a most welcome addition to the summer' literature.

Col. Carter of Cartersville.

By F. HOPKINSON SMITH. With illustrations. 16mo, $1.25.

Colonel Carter is a fine specimen of one type of the Virginia gentlemen of the passing tion. He is exquisitely courteous, high-minded, recklessly hospitable, with a vivid financial nation. Other typical Southern gentlemen and a charming aunt figure in the story; also faithful negro servant. Mr. Smith tells the story with great spirit and skill, and the illus supplement it admirably.

Balaam and His Master, and Other Stories

By JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, author of "Nights with Uncle Remus," "Ming Other Sketches in Black and White." 1 vol., 16mo, $1.25.

A charming summer book. Everybody knows the charm of Mr. Harris' narration, unsurpassed felicity with which he uses the dialect proper to the characters.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A WOODLAND QUEEN.

By ANDRE THEURIET. With 16 full-page illustrations by the eminent French artist, H. Laurent-des Rousseaux. One vol., paper cover, 50 cents.

This is a charming pastoral by one of the rising French writers of the day. The story is pure and wholesome, and will be a delight to many readers. The characters are well drawn, the plot interesting, and the descriptions beautiful. Indeed, the rare felicity of the author's portraits of woodland scenes will captivate the most jaded novel-reader. No novel was ever issued at the price with more artistic illustrations.

MASTERS AND MEN.

A Romance of Our Times. By EUGENE J. HALL, author of "Lyrics of Home Land," etc. One vol., paper cover, 10 full-page illustrations, 50 cents; cloth cover, $1.00.

A strong story of the rights and wrongs of labor, with a charming love-story interwoven. The felicitous characterizations, the abundant humor, and the strong plot combine to make this one of the best novels of the year.

HALL'S ORIGINAL RECITATIONS.

This series of Humorous and Dramatic Recitations consists of twelve numbers. They are neatly printed on fine paper, are richly illustrated, and substantially bound in paper covers. 10 cents each; 12 copies for $1.00.

PUBLICATIONS OF FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

For the second time within the brief period we have been established in New York City, our rapidly increasing business necessitates our removal to more commodious quarters.

Appreciating the kind reception of our publications and the extended favors from customers, old and new, we announce with much pleasure that we are now located at 30 Union Square, East, where, with a large and centrally located store, we shall have greatly improved facilities for attending to the demands of our many friends.

To be Issued Immediately:

PROFESSOR DRUMMOND'S ADDRESSES.

With brief sketch of the author by Rev. W. J. Dawson. 12mo, 144 pages, cloth, 75 cents.

Contents: I. Love, the Supreme Gift; The Greatest Thing in the World. II. The Perfected Life: The Greatest Work of the World. III. Dealing with Doubt. IV. Preparation for Learning. V. The Study of the Bible. VI. "First," A Talk to Boys.

The simple announcement of the publication in permanent form of these popular addresses is sufficient to insure a wide circulation.

HOW TO LEARN HOW: Addresses.

I. DEALING WITH DOUBT.

II. PREPARATION FOR LEARNING.

By Professor Henry Drummond. Issued in the "Popular Vellum Series," uniform with the previous addresses, in the anticipation that the same success will be accorded this volume that has attended its predecessors. 16mo, vellum paper covers, 20 cents.

HOPE, THE LAST THING IN THE WORLD.

By Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D. 16mo, chaste white vellum paper, 20 cents.

This brochure has been prepared to complete the series of articles on "The Triple Graces," to which Professor Drummond and Dr. A. J. Gordon are contributors, each aiming at the same central truth, but presenting views from different standpoints. The author has woven together from his storehouse of knowledge an intensely interesting article, conveying to our minds thoughts new and old, but introduced in such a way as cannot fail to win the reader.

THE GREATEST WORK IN THE WORLD.

The Evangelization of All Peoples in the Present Century. By Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D. 12mo, leatherette, gilt top, 35 cents.

This subject is an inspiration of itself, but this latest work on missions glows with the life which the Master himself has imparted, and Dr. Pierson has made a valuable addition to Missionary Literature which will be appreciated by his readers.

THE FIGHT OF FAITH AND THE COST OF CHARACTER.

Talks to Young Men. By Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D. "Popular Vellum Series." 16mo, 20 cents.

Readers of previous works by this author will welcome this later publication, and to those who have not yet become acquainted with Dr. Cuyler's original and brilliant productions it will serve as an acceptable introduction.

A DECADE OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By the Rev. Dwight M. Pratt, with an introduction by the Rev. Wayland Hoyt, D.D. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

The value of this interesting volume is enhanced by illustrations of Williston church and parsonage, Portland, Maine, well known to Christian Endeavorers as the birthplace of this world-wide organization. Dr. Clark, the President of the Society, has kindly consented to have his portrait inserted as a frontispiece. This book we are sure will be welcomed by thousands of his followers.

ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER: A Romance of the Cliff.

By Rose Porter. 12mo, cloth extra, $1.25.

This latest production from the pen of this gifted writer will be welcomed by old and young alike, and will prove a valuable addition to all Sunday-school libraries.

NOTES IN SEASON.

HARPER & BROS. will issue immediately a volume to be called "Criticism and Fiction," made up of the best things W. D. Howells has said from time to time in the "Editor's Study" of Harper's Magazine.

D. LOTHROP CO. publish this week "Rob," by Margaret Sidney; "There and Back," by George MacDonald; "The Heart of the Golden Roan," a poem by O. C. Auringer; and new editions of "Superior to Circumstances," by Mrs. Blackall, "My Uncle Florimond," by Sidney Luska, "Our Town," by Margaret Sidney, and "In War Times," by Mrs. M. E. M. Davis.

WARD, LOCK & CO. have just issued William Beckford's "History of the Caliph Vathek" and his "European Travels" as one of the volumes in their Minerva Library. The book contains a portrait of Beckford, from the original picture by Sir Joshua Reynolds, several full-page illustrations, and a biographical introduction by the editor of the series, G. T. Bettany, giving an interesting description of Beckford, the richest and most eccentric man of his day.

PORTER & COATES will have ready this week a story from the German of Marie Nathusius called "Elizabeth." The translator is Mrs. M. A. Shryock. The story is said to be very unlike the German novels usually selected for translation, being a sturdy, natural story of German home life. The plot, if it can be called a plot, begins with the courtship and marriage of Elizabeth's grandparents, who are of noble birth, and belong to the religious class named "Pietists."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS publish this week a new volume by the Rev. W. R. Huntington, the Rector of Grace Church, on "The Peace of the Church," which discusses the problem of church union from many points of view; "Our Common Birds, and How to Know Them," by John B. Grant, rich in illustrations, anecdotes and descriptions of the common birds of America; and "Rudder Grangers Abroad," embracing a number of new and amusing stories of old friends, by Frank R. Stockton.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING CO.'s new books are "The Friend of Death," an allegory adapted from the Spanish, by Mary J. Serrano, and issued in the Unknown Library; "There is No Devil," from the Hungarian of Maurus Jokai, by Madame F. Steinitz, and "Bras D'Acier," adapted from the French of Alfred Brehet, new novels in the Blue Library; and "Younger American Poets," edited by Douglas Sladen, a rich anthology of the efforts of our poets during the period between 1830 and 1890.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. announce as just ready the second volume in their new edition of James Martineau's works, which have been carefully revised by the aged author. It is devoted to the "Ecclesiastical and Historical Essays and Reviews." The next volumes will be volume third, "Theological: Philosophical Essays," and volume fourth, "Academical: Religious Essays." Among forthcoming new books are also mentioned "Save Me from My Friends," a novel by E. F. Knight; "Introduction to the Study of the History of Language," by Herbert A. Strong; "Greek Lyric Poetry," collected and arranged with prefatory articles, introductory matter and commentary by George S. Farnill; and volume two of "The Theory of Credit," by Henry Gunning Macleod.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY, of New York and Chicago, have ready this week an exceedingly attractive list of books. Prof. Drummond contributes two, one being entitled "How to Learn How," and the other a complete volume of his addresses, hitherto published in pamphlet form only; in the popular Vellum Series by other writers they have also "Hope, the Last Thing in the World," by Dr. Pierson, and "The Fight of Faith and Cost of Character, Talks to Young Men," by Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D. Other works of an interesting character are: "The Greatest Work in the World; that is, the Evangelization of All Peoples in the Present Century," by Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D.; "A Decade of Christian Endeavor," by the Rev. Wayland Hoyt, D.D.; "St. Martin's Summer: a romance of the Cliff," by Rose Porter.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Arnaud, C: A. de. The new era in Russia. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, [1891.] c. 166 p. D. (Peerless ser., no. 41.) pap., 25 c.

An aim is made to present an exact picture of the political and social conditions of Russia. To attain this end, and remove the effects of the misrepresentations of the past, facts bearing upon the subject from the time of Alexander I. to the reign of Alexander III. are given. A new era for the Empire is dated from the defeat of the Decembrists. The origin and policy of Nihilism is traced. Siberia is viewed in a new light. The position of Poland is described. The Propagandist discussed, and the action of Tolstoi and Stepniak introduced.

Beal, E. A., M.D. The information readers: No. 1, Foods and beverages. Bost., Boston School Supply Co., 1891. c. 281 p. S. (Boston school ser.) cl., 60 c.

The first number of a series prepared on a new plan. Contains reading-lessons on the various kinds of foods and their hygienic values; on grains, fruits and useful plants, with elementary botanical instruction relating thereto; on the effects of stimulants; and on a few other common subjects of interest and importance to all, old and young.

Beckford, W: The history of the Caliph Vathek; and European travels. N. Y., Ward, Lock & Co., 1891. 25+549 p. por. il. S. (Minerva lib., no. 24.) cl., 75 c.

William Beckford was born in 1759 at Fonthill, England. On attaining his majority he inherited one million pounds, besides an income of £100,000 a year, and this vast wealth, it is said, destroyed his really great literary talents. In 1781 he wrote "Vathek" in French, in a single sitting of three days and two nights. The fantastic and the sublime are combined in this piece of Oriental fiction. Vathek is supposed to be the grandson of Haroun Al Raschid, the hero of "The Arabian Nights." The series of "Letters" appearing in the volume were written during travels in the Low Countries and Italy in 1778; and his "Dreams, waking thoughts and incidents," and descriptions of ten days in Spain, have also been included.

Those for whom the work is designed are supposed to have an elementary knowledge of electrical science. Practical advice is given as to the selection of tools, metals and chemicals to be employed in obtaining good results in electro-plating. The history and origin of the dynamo is given, with the mechanical construction of Burgon, J. W. The lives of twelve good men. New ed. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1891. pors. 8°, cl., $5.

Cahill, Mabel Esmonde. Her playthings, men: a novel. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1891. c. 235 p. il. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The scene is in England. The characters all seem to play at cross-purposes. Lady Adelaide Heathmore and Rutland Borradale open the story as avowed lovers. A sensational episode separates them, and when next Rutland appears it as the avowed lover of an American heiress. The rivalry of these two women, and the intervention of several male characters, with the sensational action of the heroine and her friends, make the substance of the novel.

Caird, J: An introduction to the philosophy of religion. New ed. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 11+343 p. 12°, cl., $1.50.

California. Supreme ct. Reports of cases; C. P. Pomeroy, rep. V. 86, [1890.] San Francisco, Bancroft-Whitney Co., 1891. c. 7-32+724 p. O. shp., $4.

Contents: The captain's vices, by Francois Coppée; The house of tennis-playing cat, by Honoré de Balzac; The reverend Father Gaucher's elixir, by Alphonse Daudet; Croisilles, by Alfred de Musset

Crocker, Uriel H. and G: G. Notes on the public statutes of Massachusetts. 2d ed., with notes on the constitution. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1891. c. 16+859 p. O. shp., $7.

Cyclopædia of temperance and prohibition: a reference-book of facts, statistics and general information on all phases of the drink question, the temperance movement and the prohibition agitation. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1891. c. 671 p. O. cl., $3.50.

All branches of the topic—historical, moral, religious, fiscal, statistical, legislative, political, biographical, scientific, etc.—are treated. The most prominent merit of the Cyclopædia is the thoroughness with which the chief topics are presented. In such articles as "Adulteration," "Bible wines," "Compensation," "Constitutional prohibition," "Cost of the drink traffic," "Effects of alcohol," "High license," "Internal revenue," "Legislation," "Light liquors," "Liquor traffic," "Local option," "Medicine," "Moderation," "Non-partnership," "Benefits of prohibition," "Personal liberty," "Democratic party," "Republican party," "Prohibition party" and "United States government and the liquor traffic," the reader will find evidences of very patient labor. Numerous temperance and prohibtion specialists of eminent reputation have contributed signed articles.

Dole, C: F. The American citizen. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1891. c. 16+320 p. D. cl., $1.

The design of this book grew out of a smaller one, "The citizen and the neighbor," which, though intended for a very limited use, was so well received as to encourage the author to try to meet a larger need. He has had specially in view the large class of boys and girls in the upper grades of grammar schools and in high schools, or academies, as well as many adults who may wish to make a beginning in the study of citizenship.

Griswold, W: M., comp. A descriptive list of international novels. Cambridge, Mass., W: M. Griswold, 1891. 111-1644+8 p. O. pap., 50 c.

There are old and new novels, some by foreign writers, and some by English and American authors in this list. Its chief object is to direct readers to a number of good novels, easily obtainable, but which, in many cases, have been forgotten within a year or two after publication. It will be followed by other lists describing European, romantic, eccentric and fanciful novels and tales. The descriptive extracts which follow each title are taken from leading literary papers.

Griswold, W: M., comp. A descriptive list of novels and tales dealing with American city life; including some works descriptive of country life omitted from previous list. Cambridge, Mass., W: M. Griswold, 1891. 50-120+8 p. O. pap., 50 c.

See notice under preceding title. This list is a compilation of American novels.

Jennings, L: J: The Philadelphian: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1891. 3+301 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new series, no. 697.) pap., 50 c.

After the close of the late war, Col. Pendleton, of Virginia, comes to Philadelphia to look up a partnership he had before the war with a man there in the paper trade. This partner is honest, and has put aside Col. Pendleton's share of the profits each year, and the Colonel, to his great surprise, finds himself a wealthy man. With his daughter and his fortune he settles in England, where the story mainly takes place. The honest partner—"the Philadelphian"—plays a prominent part in it as an amateur detective in clearing up the mystery of a murder, and bringing the murderer to justice. There is also a false marriage, a couple of unscrupulous women who cause much mischief, and other events and characters. By the author of "The millionaire."

Spalding, J: F., Bp. Jesus Christ, the proof of Christianity. Milwaukee, Wis., The Young Churchman Co., 1891. c. 3-220 p. D. cl., net, $1.

The author believes that the facts of religion rather than its theories are needed to meet the demand of the present time. He advances the argument that Jesus Christ and his ministry is a pre-eminent fact, and a substantial proof and weapon of Christianity. He aims to make clear this line of thought by viewing Jesus Christ in the light of prophecy, his relation to the Scriptures, as the light of the world, the founder of Christianity, his divinity, etc., etc. A series of connected lectures written and delivered from a churchman's standpoint.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 9, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

"THE BEST BOOKS."

AMONG the contributions of recent years to systematic bibliography, Mr. William Swan Sonnenschein's guide to readers, under the title of "The Best Books," has been accepted as one of the most comprehensive and useful works of its kind. Those able to appreciate careful bibliography have been warmly enthusiastic over the patient labor expended by the compiler in attaining his object of affording a reader's guide to the choicest and best available books in every department of science, art and literature. A second edition of this valuable work, greatly enlarged and improved, has just been placed in the American market. It embraces double the number of books mentioned in the first edition—that is, fifty thousand against twenty-five thousand—and has been brought up to date in the way of new publications. As an almost invaluable work of reference for libraries, for booksellers, for students and readers generally, we direct attention to it.

It is one of the most interesting of bibliographies, and one of the least perplexing of any we have examined. While avowedly prepared for that almost extinct species, "the general reader," it is in reality a work that, even to a casual glance, recommends itself to the specialist in all departments of literature and science. The arrangement is admirable and delightfully clear and simple. Grouping the books first into large classes, and then breaking them up into sections, sub-sections and paragraphs, all the literature of a subject is obtained in one list, with outlying subjects close at hand. The classifications are very rich, covering, apparently, every known subject. No one class, however, is represented by a list of works, either bewildering in numbers or difficult of attainment. The aim has been to quote the "best" literature on each topic; the word best being used in a most catholic sense, and as the superlative of "useful" rather than of "good." While the scope of the work is limited to books in print, and easily obtainable in the ordinary course of trade—on occasions where the subject demanded it—the compiler has included books which are out of print, and even scarce. The bibliography is essentially one of English literature, that is, works in the English language, which, of course, includes American writers. In two departments, however, viz., Philology, Mythology and Folklore, it was found necessary to admit foreign books—these fields being occupied almost exclusively by German scholars. The date of the first and last editions, the price, size and publisher's name appended to each book, add largely to the practical usefulness of the work. The English price and the original English edition and publisher, naturally, are given with all English publications. American books—that is, books published only in America—are priced in dollars and cents, and of course appear with the American publisher's imprint. The author and subject indexes, prepared for this edition, make the finding of single works comparatively easy. The brief annotations, so useful in the first edition, are largely increased in this edition.

Many bibliographies seem made more to display their compiler's erudition than to assist the reader; but with "The Best Books" we feel that it was a labor of love with Mr. Sonnenschein to supply our needs. Next to having read the best books is the knowledge where they may be found, and this the present volume imparts in an impartial and judicious manner.

IN the same line of work with "The Best Books," but of much more modest proportions naturally, as being far less ambitious in intent, are the little descriptive lists of novels classified under subjects, which were begun by Mr. W. M. Griswold last fall with "A Descriptive List of Novels and Tales Dealing with American Country Life." This has just been followed by two fresh lists, one embracing "Novels and Tales Dealing with American City Life," and the other "International Novels." The titles are followed by quite full extracts from prominent literary papers, which cover both the scope or design of the novel and its literary merits.

In compiling his lists Mr. Griswold has not confined himself to recent novels or those that are the best known. His selection has been made on the basis of real merit irrespective of popularity. Thus he has included many excellent but almost forgotten works, his plea being that it is better to read a superior old book than an inferior new one. He justly remarks, "that for every new book of merit, there are in most libraries a hundred as good or better, unknown to the majority of readers." For the author's sake as well as the reader's we are glad to see some of the best efforts of our writers rescued from an unmerited oblivion. The rapidity with which books of all kinds are now being published sometimes entails great injustice upon a writer. One book follows so quickly upon the advent of another that the first often comes to an untimely end, simply because no one has had time to read or notice it. The author scarcely makes his bow to his public, when he is swept out of sight and forgotten. It is amazing, in looking through Mr. Griswold's lists, how many charming novels and tales are brought back to the memory—many only a few years old, but which are as utterly unknown to readers of to-day as if they had never been written. Does it not suggest the thought that publishers do not always make the best use of their opportunities? One good book at rare intervals, properly advertised and pushed, would do more, it seems to us, to build up a house on a firm and sure foundation than the feverish, unthinking rush of publications that has grown to be the daily method with the majority of our publishing houses.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Western Bookseller, a new trade paper, has been started in Chicago. The publishers are Messrs. F. J. Schulte & Co. and Charles H. Sergel & Co. The paper will appear every other Saturday.

THE May number of the Home-Maker contains the beginning of a new novel by F. Marion Crawford, called "The Three Fates." Also an article on "Bicycling for Women," delightfully written by a well-known New York expert, Mrs. Josephine R. Redding, editor of the Art Interchange.

THE Photo-American Review is the name of a new magazine of which we have received the first number, and which is published in New York City by Harry C. Jones, at 92 and 94 Fifth Ave. It presents itself "as a candidate for the suffrage of all literary and artistic people." The Review is the official organ of the American Photographic Conference, and of the Society of Amateur Photographers of New York. It will contain papers on photography from members of the Conference and other prominent amateurs, and will produce from month to month many good illustrations. A record of new books, with descriptive notices, and an alphabetical index giving publisher, price, etc., is to be a leading feature.

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM C. MARTIN.

THE death of William C. Martin, President of the Typothetæ, robs the printing fraternity of their oldest and most highly esteemed member. Mr. Martin was born in New Jersey on Febru- 12, 1811. He was the son of a country physician who died when Mr. Martin was an infant, leaving his widow and a large family in straitened circumstances. Mr. Martin's school education necessarily ceased when he was twelve years old, and he entered the employ of John C. Totten, a printer, at 9 Bowery, to help his share towards the family support. He served his time at the press as well as the case, and then became a journeyman, working both in Philadelphia and in New York. He began business for himself in 1835, and for some years published the New York Evangelist. In 1851 he established his printing office at 111 John Street, where it still remains, through all the changes that have taken place in the neighborhood. In 1885 he celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into his own business by giving a public dinner to his fellow-craftsmen. Mr. Martin married in 1839, and leaves a daughter. He died at his home at 155 West 21st Street, on Monday, May 4, and was buried on Wednesday, May 6.

Mr. Martin was a member of the original Typothetæ, and chairman of the printers' meeting held in the Astor House in 1873. On the reorganization of this body in 1883 he was chosen President, which place he held to the present. He took a deep interest in the development of the United Typothetæ, and was a delegate at the annual gatherings of this body.

ABRAHAM COLES.

A DESPATCH from California announces the death of the Rev. Dr. Abraham Coles, one of the best-known citizens of Union County, N. J. Dr. Coles was on the Pennsylvania Railroad Excursion Party that started April 14 for a six weeks' tour in Southern California, and left his home in sound health. Dr. Coles was born at Scotch Plains, N. J., in 1813. He early turned his attention to literature, and was the author of various works of medicine and science. He taught Latin and mathematics and studied law, and when graduated from Jefferson College devoted himself to medicine and surgery. In this branch he did excellent service in Paris during the Revolution of 1848. For nearly fifty years he pursued his literary studies and work and became proficient in Greek, Latin, Hebrew, Sanscrit and the modern languages. He translated into metrical verse the famous Latin hymn "Dies Iræ," and also the "Stabat Mater," the former translation giving him celebrity abroad. In 1886 he published the "Microcosm," a physiological poem. In 1847 he made public the first part of the "Evangel," a life of Christ in verse, with texts and notes. In 1868 appeared his Latin hymns, and in 1884 "Light of the World." His last important work was an edition of the Psalms of David versified. In 1871 Princeton made him a D.D. Dr. Coles was a Director of the Newark Library Association.

LAWSON VALENTINE.

LAWSON VALENTINE, who made a fortune as manufacturer of paint and coach varnish, a large portion of which he had invested in publishing enterprises, died at his country-place Farm, Orange County, N. Y., after three weeks. Mr. Valentine was bridge, Mass., in 1828, and at nineteen went to work in a paint and varnish business in Boston. In 1850 he became a partner in the house of Wadsworth, Nye & Co., and shortly after married Miss Houghton, of Cambridge. In 1852 the house of Stimson, Valentine & Co. was formed. In 1876 the house became Valentine & Co. About 1872 Mr. Valentine came to New York to live. In 1886, with the co-operation of Hadwin Houghton and David S. Skaats, Mr. Valentine organized the Lawrence Valentine Company of New York, a business in which he has been very successful. The company has large works in Hunter's Point, and Mr. Valentine has been the active business manager of the concern since its organization. Mr. Valentine was partner in the firm of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., into which he put a large capital in 1880. He owned about three-quarters of the stock of the Christian Union, and was President of the company. He was also President of the Rural Publishing Company.

REV. DR. THOMAS J. CONANT, one of the best-known biblical scholars of the Baptist Church, died at his home in Brooklyn, on Thursday, April 30, aged eighty-nine. He was born in Vermont, graduated from Middlebury College, and taught in several colleges renowned in his day. From 1851 to 1857 he filled the chair of Hebrew and Biblical Exegesis in Rochester Theological Seminary. He was an ordained Baptist minister, but seldom preached. From 1857 to 1875 he devoted himself to a translation of the Bible for the American Bible Union. Among his published works are "The Book of Job," "The Gospel by Matthew," "The New Testament," "The Book of Genesis" and "The Historical Books of the Old Testament."

ERNEST MORRIS, the author of several books on entomology, died in Indianapolis, Ind., Wednesday night.

COL. JOHN D. SHERWOOD, author of a "Comic History of the United States," died April 30, aged seventy-three years.

EDOUARD REUSS, the celebrated French theologian, died at his native city, Strassburg, May 1, aged eighty-seven years.

FERDINAND GREGOROVIUS, the German historian and poet, died in Berlin on May 2. He was born in Prussia in 1821.

COMMUNICATIONS.

THE DUTY ON REBOUND BOOKS.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

IT might interest some of your readers to read the following opinion from the Secretary away back in 1879:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3, 1879.

HENRY MILLER, ESQ., 82 NASSAU STREET.

SIR: The Department is in receipt of your letter of the 30th ultimo, in which you inquire whether books printed before 1859 and bound since that time, are liable to duty, and if so, whether the duty is applicable only to the binding or to the full cost of the book.

The free list of the Revised Statutes declares that books which have been printed and manufactured more than twenty years at the date of importation shall be exempt from duty.

This ordinarily would seem to require that the books should have been completely manufactured at the time referred to. If not entitled to exemption from duty, the duty would accrue upon the actual value of the books and not merely upon the cost of the binding.

By decision of the Department, dated March 5, 1872, it was held that books which had been rebound and repaired within twenty years, but which had been completely manufactured more than twenty years before the date of importation, were not debarred from free entry in consequence of rebinding or repair.

Very respectfully,

JOHN B. HAWLEY, Assistant Sec.

GOOD WORDS FOR THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

DEAR SIR: We have just read with interest the open letter to the publishers in the current number of P. W.

Our opinion as managers of a small public library is probably less important than that of the experienced "Retailer" who has written so truly. But we cannot refrain from saying that the libraries as well as the retailers wonder at and regret the failure of the publishers to keep as well posted as to all their books, new and old, through your convenient and well-ordered pages, which might be so much more useful to the libraries and the publishers, if the publishers would permit it. Very truly yours, etc., W. L. A.

"MOTHER, HOME AND HEAVEN."

THE following is contributed as a curious bit of bibliographical history:

In 1872, Phillips & Hunt, agents of the Methodist Book Concern, issued a square 16mo volume, entitled "Mother, Home and Heaven; Collection of Poems," edited by Mrs. J. P. Newman. Size 6 x 4½ inches.

In 1878 Mr. E. B. Treat issued a subscription volume, quarto, entitled "Golden Thoughts of Mother, Home and Heaven."

In 1884 Bryant, Taylor & Co. issued a subscription book, quarto, entitled "Treasury of Thoughts of Mother, Home and Heaven," etc.

In 1890, Hunt & Eaton, agents for the Methodist Book Concern, sold the plates of "Mother, Home and Heaven" to the N. D. Thompson Publishing Co., St. Louis and New York. This company has recently issued a work entitled "Golden Links in the Chain that Connects Mother, Home and Heaven," etc., which contains the original book published by the Methodist Book Concern.

It will be noticed that each work carries the title "Mother, Home and Heaven" as a second, with the exception of the one published by Phillips & Hunt, which is the original book, bearing the title of "Mother, Home and Heaven," and if there had been a copyright to protect the title, it would no doubt still be owned and held by the Methodist Book Concern as the original owners.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

THE fourth volume of "Book Prices Current," containing the prices at which books have been sold at public auction in London from December, 1889, to November, 1890, will be issued immediately by Elliot Stock, London.

C. N. CASPAR, 437 East Water Street, Milwaukee, Wis., has just published a Practical Catalogue of Law-Books, arranged by subjects, with a complete index to authors. The following table of contents will give a general idea of the catalogue: Standard Law and Text Books; Legal Periodicals; Books for Special States; American Reports, Digests, Statutes, etc.; United States Statutes and Reports; United States and State Court Reports; State Reports; Collections of State Reports; Lawyers' Co-operative Reports; National Reporter System; and English Reports. The list is compact and extremely practical. In every case the initials of the authors are given and the dates of the latest issue. The bibliographical arrangement adopted affords a clue to the entire domain of the present American law literature. Standard English books have also been included. Any book listed can be found at once, and also what publications exist on any given topic, stating edition, date and price. The publisher is indicated by a figure which corresponds to a similar one in a key to publishers which is supplied separately. An author index indicates what books are included by any writer, and where they can be looked up. (77 p. 16°, pap., per hundred, without imprint, $8; 500 copies, with dealer's imprint, $25.)

Catalogues of New and Second-hand Books.—C. W. Bardeen, Syracuse, N. Y., Rare books on pedagogy, to which is appended a list of 300 standard works always obtainable. (58 p. 16°.)—Robert Clarke & Co., Cincinnati, O., British Printed books on a variety of subjects. (12 p. 12°.)—Ginn & Co., Boston, Catalogue and announcements, 1891, High-school and College edition. (28+148 p. 16°.)—Otto Harrassowitz, Leipzig, Classische Philologie und Alterthums Kunde. (No. 172, 4394 titles.)—Historical Printing Club, 97 Clark St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Publications of the Club. (32 p. 8°.)—The Lawyers' Co-operative Pub. Co., Rochester, N. Y., The Co-operative Publications—Standard Reports. CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS are to first novel of Thomas Nelson Page, the Virginia writer of short stories. It is a tale of Virginia life before the war, and is to be called "On Newfound River: a story." This house is to have the American rights for the forthcoming great work on "The Great Capitols of the World."

DODD, MEAD & COMPANY will publish at once, in connection with Messrs. J. R. Osgood, McIlvaine & Co., of London, Oscar Wilde's new book. It is entitled "Intentions," and is made up of essays and criticisms of literature and life. They are said to be full of brilliant paradoxes, incisive comment, pungent wit and general insight.

BRENTANO'S will publish at an early date a new edition of Lloyd Bryce's "Romance of an Alter Ego," of which the title will be changed to "An Extraordinary Experience, or, the romance of an alter ego;" and also new editions of Foster's "Whist Manual;" Mrs. Carrica Le Favre's useful "Mother's Help and Child's Friend;" and Stebbins' "Yacht Portraits," which will contain sixteen additional plates.

MR. AMOS K. FISKE, author of "Midnight Talks at the Club," published last year—a little book which has had a very cordial reception among thinking people—has written another book which will be immediately brought out by Fords, Howard & Hulbert. It is on a subject which always has a peculiar attraction for many readers, speculation as to life in the other world. It is entitled "Beyond the Bourn: reports by a traveller returned from the undiscovered country."

THE announcement of a new novel by the author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland" will arrest the attention of the reading public. Messrs. D. Appleton & Co. will publish the new work immediately, and it will be found that "Maxwell Grey" continues to show the remarkable force which made "The Silence of Dean Maitland" so notable a book. The title of the new novel is "In the Heart of the Storm," and it is to appear at once in the Town and Country Library.

H. J. SMITH & Co., Chicago, have just issued the three following books: "The American Siberia," by Capt. J. C. Powell, being an account of the convict camps of Florida, of which Capt. Powell has been in charge for fourteen years; "The Voice of Labor," by S. M. Jelly, a fresh treatment of the vital questions affecting labor and capital, and including a full history of the origin, object and principles of the "Farmers' Alliance;" and "Wynema, a child of the forest," by C. Alice Callahan, presenting in story form the Indian's side of the Indian question.

LEE & SHEPARD have just ready "The Life and Works of Horace Mann," in five volumes, containing his life, by his wife, and his lectures, reports, essays and miscellaneous papers, by his son; "Struggles of the Nations," or the principal wars, battles, sieges and treaties of the world, by S. M. Burnham, in two volumes; "Marion Graham, or, higher than happiness," by Meta Lander; "Intimations of Eternal Life," by Caroline C. Leighton; and "Which Wins?" a story of social conditions, by Mary H. Ford, containing an account of the Farmers' Alliance movement in the West.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have in press "Gospel Criticism and Historical Christianity," by Orello Cone, a study of the gospels and of the history of the Gospel Canon during the second century, with a consideration of the results of modern criticism; volume third of "The Papers of the American Society of Church History," containing an important paper by Dr. Philip Schaff on the revival of learning and art in the 14th and 15th centuries; and "The New Theology," by Prof. John Bascom. In history the firm announces "Sir Philip Sidney, and the Chivalry of England,' by H. R. Fox-Bourne, in The Heroes of the Nations Series; "The Story of Portugal," in The Story of the Nations Series, and a second and cheaper edition of "Documents Illustrative of American History, 1606–1863," edited by Howard W. Preston. To their library of Economic and Political Science will be added "The Industrial and Commercial Supremacy of England," a series of lectures by the late J. E. Thorold Rogers; "Politics and Property, or, phronocracy," by Henry Slack Worthington; and "The Corporation Problem," by William W. Cook; and "Parties and Patronage," by Lyon G. Tyler. In travel and general literature they announce "A Year in Portugal," by George Bailey Loring; a popular edition of "To California and Alaska," by W. Seward Webb; "The Irish Element in Mediæval Culture," translated from the German of H. Zimmer, by Jane Loring Edwards; and "Application and Achievement," by T. Hazard Hartzell. New volumes of poetry will be "Sunshine in Life," poems for the King's Daughters; "The Vision of Misery Hill," by Miles T. Anson; and "The Merrimac River," by Benjamin W. Ball. "Eöthen" will be the next Knickerbocker Nugget.

OSGOOD, MCILVAINE & CO. will be the publishers of a reprint of Oscar Wilde's "The Decay of Lying," and other essays he has contributed to the magazines, which will be brought out in a volume entitled "Intentions."

BERNARD QUARITCH, London, has in preparation "The Poetic Books of William Blake," collected, with an explanation of their myth and meaning, by Edwin John Ellis and William Butler Yeats, in two volumes, containing more than 150 pages of fac-similes from poems engraved by Blake, with illustrations.

MR. TUER, of the Leadenhall Press, is going to issue a fac-simile of the copy of Charles Lamb's "Poetry for Children," for which he gave £34 at Sotheby's on Saturday, the 18th inst. The last copy that appeared in an auction-room was secured by an American collector. Mr. Locker-Lampson has a copy (? imperfect), but the Museum has none at all. Mr. Tuer hopes to supply an introduction and a fac-simile of the copper-plate frontispieces.

DAVID NUTT will publish this month the long-expected edition of "Pearl," the first of English "in memoriam" poems, edited by I. Gollancz, of Christ's College, Cambridge. It consists of the Middle-English text, edited with critical notes from the unique MS. in the British Museum, and gives modern rendering on the opposite side of the page. The volume is enriched with a prefatory quatrain by Tennyson, and a frontispiece drawn by Holman Hunt. The issue is limited to 500 copies, besides a few on Japanese paper. This will be the first of a series of pre-Tudor texts selected for their literary merit which will appear under the same editorship.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS NEW BOOKS

The Peace of the Church.

By the Rev. W. R. HUNTINGTON, D.D., Rector of Grace Church, New York. 12mo, $1.25.

Dr. Huntington discusses from many points of view—historical, critical, ecclesiastical, sectarian, social, etc.—the problem of Church Union in the United States, which is becoming more and more a "burning question" every day. The learning and the position of the author lend to the book great weight and importance.

Our Common Birds,

And how to know them. By JOHN B. GRANT. With 64 full-page Illustrations from Photographs. Oblong 12mo, $1.50, net.

The aim of Mr. Grant's volume is to describe, for purposes of identification, the common birds of America. Accompanying each illustration is a description of the plumage, habits, song, flight, etc., of each bird, with references to the legends, superstitions and other literary aspects of the subject.

Rudder Grangers Abroad,

And Other Stories. By FRANK R. STOCKTON. 12mo, cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

CONTENTS: Euphemia Among the Pelicans; Rudder Grangers in England; Pomona's Baby; Derelict; The Baker of Barnbury; The Water Devil.

The characters in some of these stories are the same as in "Rudder Grange," and will recall that book, the author's greatest success. He has written nothing more ingenious and humorous than these stories.

The Authority of Holy Scripture.

Inaugural address by Dr. C. A. BRIGGS on Accepting the Chair of Biblical Theology in the Union Theological Seminary. New Edition, with Preface and Additional Notes. 8vo, paper, 50 cents, net.

This address has been the subject of very general and warm discussion among all denominations.

Zadoc Pine,

And Other Stories. By H. C. BUNNER. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"Mr. Bunner tells capital stories—simple, clear, with interest always well sustained. These are stories of American realism, except one, which is an amusing fairy tale."—N. Y. Sun.

Gallegher,

And Other Stories. By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"The candor, humor and freshness of these stories are very alluring. There is a finish in the rounding of each theme that is suggestive of the French masters."—Brooklyn Times.

Spain and Morocco.

Studies in Local Color. By H. T. FINCK. 12mo, $1.25.

"We have but one fault to find with Mr. Finck's book, namely, that it is not longer. Of such books of travel we are never likely to have too many."—N. Y. Tribune.

NOTES IN SEASON.

CHARLES T. DILLINGHAM will publish at once a revised edition of Wm. Harrison Clarke's "The Civil Service Law; a defence of its principles."

THE UNITED STATES BOOK CO. will publish on the 18th Rider Haggard's new story, "Eric Brighteyes." The work will be illustrated with over sixty illustrations by English and American artists. Mr. Haggard when in New York finally revised the proof-sheets of the book.

D. APPLETON & CO. have just added to their Town and Country Library "In the Heart of the Storm," Maxwell Grey's new novel. They have also ready a timely volume entitled "La Grippe," by Dr. Cyrus Edson, of the Health Department of New York City; and the thirteenth edition of Appletons' Dictionary of the City of New York and Its Vicinity.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just issued a collection of Kentucky tales and romances, under the title of "Flute and Violin," by James Lane Allen, which are notable both for the originality of their conception and the attractive style in which they are written. With this they sent out Howells' "Criticism and Fiction" and "A Box of Monkeys," embracing four of Miss Grace Livingston Furness' popular farces.

MACMILLAN & CO. have just ready J. Marion Crawford's new novel, "Khaled, a Tale of Arabia," and a new book by William Winter, "Gray Days and Gold," a collection of his charmingly poetical descriptions of old world scenes. In their Temple Library the new volume is "Essays and Poems of Leigh Hunt," selected and edited by Reginald Brinsley Johnson, and they have ready the second volume of the reissue of the Cambridge Shakespeare.

GEORGE A. LEAVITT & CO., auctioneers, have fixed the date for the commencement of the Annual Spring Trade Sale on Tuesday, May 26, at 9.30 A.M. It will be continued daily in the order of the catalogue until all is sold. Among the publishers represented are Lee & Shepard, Worthington Co., Arundel Book Store, Belford Co., Humboldt Publishing Co., T. T. Neely, Oldach & Co., De Witt Publishing House, A. H. Smythe, M. E. Craigie, etc., and invoices of great importance. There will also be a large line of stereotype plates. Catalogues will be mailed on application.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. promise an armful of books next week—Miss Fanny Murfree's story, "Felicia," which attracted unusual attention while running in the Atlantic Monthly; "Lewis Cass," in the series of American Statesmen, by Prof. A. C. McLaughlin, of Michigan; Ryle's "Open Gate," a lively summer story of Long Island, by Mrs. Susan Teackle Moore, sister of Mr. F. Hopkinson Smith; "Whist in Diagrams," by G. W. P., the whist authority of Boston; "Under a Colonial Roof-Tree," by Miss Arria S. Huntington, a daughter of Bishop Huntington, who describes the old Phelps-Huntington home in Hadley, Mass.; new editions, revised for 1891, of Sweetser's excellent guide-books for New England, the White Mountains, and the Maritime Provinces; and a new edition of Mrs. Hawthorne's "Notes in England and Italy," with a portrait of Mrs. Hawthorne. On the 27th H., M. & Co. promise Mrs. Sutherland Orr's authorized "Life of Robert Browning," in two volumes, with a fine new portrait and a picture of Browning's study.

THE annual meeting of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association will be held on Wednesday evening, June 3, at eight o'clock, at the trade salesrooms of George A. Leavitt & Co., 787 Broadway, N. Y. It is desirable that as many as can make it convenient attend these meetings. These gatherings tend to renew and strengthen friendship and good fellowship among the members.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Lewis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); (Q. 4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.) D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fo. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Allen, Ja. Lane. Flute and violin, and other Kentucky tales and romances. N. Y., Harper, 1891. c. 4+308 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Contents: Flute and violin; King Solomon of Kentucky; Two gentlemen of Kentucky; The white cowl; Sister Dolorosa; and Posthumous fame. The scene of all these little gems of fiction is Kentucky, many years ago. The opening tale appeared in Harper's Magazine, the others in the Century.

American railroad and corporation reports; being a coll. of the current decisions of the courts of last resort in the U. S. pertaining to the law of railroads and municipal corporations [etc.]; ed. and annot. by J: Lewis. V. 2. Chic., E. B. Myers & Co., 1891. c. 7+809 p. O. shp., $4.50.

Architectural and building monthly (The); cont. a variety of practical designs and details of cottages, city and suburban houses, town hall, library, R.R. station, store fittings, etc., etc. Also complete specifications of a frame house, illustrated by plans, elevations, exterior and interior details, all drawings to scale. V. 2. N. Y., A. J. Bicknell, 1891. c. 13 p. 56 pl. F. cl., $3.50.

Atkinson, Rev. J. C. Forty years in a moorland parish: reminiscences and researches in Danby and in Cleveland. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 11+457 p. maps, 12°, cl., $3.25.

Barnard, C: First steps in electricity; designed for the entertainment and instruction of young people at home and in school. N. Y., C: E. Merrill & Co., 1891. c. '87, '91. 141 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.

Describes a number of simple and inexpensive experiments in electricity. The experiments are not difficult or dangerous.

Barr, Mrs. Amelia E. She loved a sailor. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1891. c. '90–'91. 3+459 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The action takes place in New York during the second administration of Andrew Jackson. Although the novel is based upon the love of Virginia Mason for Captain Marius Bradford, it has other interests, among which are scenes preceding and succeeding the financial crisis brought about by the failure of the United States Bank in Philadelphia, some realistic incidents of early abolition days, and the introduction of the personal and political movement of Andrew Jackson, Nicholas Biddle, the Tappans and others famous in United States history.

Barrett, Frank. Under a strange mask. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 149 p. D. (Seaside lib., no. 1828.) pap., n. p.

Bible. The Old Testament in Greek; according to the Septuagint; by H: Barclay Swete. V. 2, [Chronicles to Tobit.] N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1890. 15+879 p. 12°, cl., $2.25.

Booth, Mrs. Otto, ["Rita," pseud.] After long grief and pain. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 320 p. D. (Seaside lib., no. 1766.) pap., 20 c.

Bréhat, Alfred de. Bras D'Acier; or, on the gold-path in '49; from the French, by A. Estoclet. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1891.] c. tr. 4+252 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 69.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

This work was published in Paris in 1869. Gives a vivid picture of California when the gold fever was at its height. Pablo, nicknamed Bras d'Acier because of his steel-like arms, perfectly tempered muscles and unerring aim, was famous in the placers throughout the State, and was a born ruler among his fellow miners. The love-story is pathetic, but after many trials, hairbreadth escapes from death and attacks from the wild searchers after gold, the lovers settle down to a quiet life in Havana, far from the scenes of their conquered difficulties.

Brooks, W: K. The oyster: a popular summary of a scientific study. Balt., Md., The Johns Hopkins Press, 1891. c. 8+230 p. 14 pl. D. cl., net, $1.

Written for all who care for oysters, whether providers or consumers, or students of natural history. The author is well known in scientific circles. The larger part of his time, for more than ten years, he has devoted to the study of the oyster. He is professor of animal morphology in the Johns Hopkins University and director of the Chesapeake Zoological Laboratory. He was led to the preparation of this work because Maryland, after many years of plenty, is in danger of an oyster famine. His remedy for increasing the supply is by artificial means. To show what is possible for the propagation and protection of young oysters, he describes in the most interesting manner, in terms scientific enough to be accurate, not so scientific as to be hard of understanding, the life-history of the bivalve. The oyster's exposure to infantile dangers, its preferred home, its dietary habits, its susceptibility of culture, its wonderful fecundity, are vividly portrayed.

Bruce, Rob. History of Robert Bruce, King of Scotland; his contests and adventures. Phil., H. L. Kilner & Co., [1891.] c. 265 p. D. (Catholic lib.) cl., net, 50 c.

The story of the heroic and famous hero of Bannockburn is told with much spirit. The history of Scotland, England and Ireland is covered from the year 1300 until the accession of James VI. in 1603. The Reformation, under Henry VIII. and Elizabeth is treated from a Roman Catholic standpoint.

Callahan, S. Alice. Wynema: a child of the forest. Chic., H. J. Smith & Co., 1891. c. 169 p. il. D. (The silver ser., no. 1.) pap., 25 c.

Wynema is an Indian girl who has been educated beyond her surroundings by a clever teacher doing missionary work for the Methodist Church. The dealings of the United States with the Indians are sharply criticised.

Chase, H: S., M.D. Letters to farmers' sons on the questions of the day: being familiar talks on political economy. N. Y., Twentieth Century Pub. Co., 1891. c. 2+166+2 p. D. cl., 50 c.; pap., 25 c.

Professes to discuss from a purely ethical standpoint various subjects, such as banks, competition, a natural law of rent, debt, credit, labor and capital, land, labor unions, population, riches, taxation, etc. The writer is a beliver in single tax, in free trade and paper money; he objects to national banks, to the death penalty, to private ownership in land, to monopolies and trusts etc.

Clark, Mrs. C. More true than truthful. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 232 p. D. (Seaside lib., no. 1801.) pap., 20 c.

Conklin, G: W., comp. Conklin's handy manual of useful information and world's atlas: a handbook for ready reference; ed. for 1891. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1891. c. '88-'91. 442 p. maps, T. cl., 25 c.

A compilation of facts on nearly 2,000 subjects, being an epitome of matters historical, statistical, biographical, political, geographical and of general interest.

Cordellier-Delanoue, M. Jacques Cœur; from the French. Phil., H. L. Kilner & Co., [1891.] c. tr. 251 p. S. (Premium lib.) cl., net, 38 c.

Historical tale of the reign of Charles VII. of France, 1422-1461, describing the overthrow of Henry VI. of England, at that time considered king of France by a large faction. Jacques Cœur was an immensely wealthy silversmith who furnished funds for the wars. Agnes Sorel is introduced.

Daudet, Alphonse. Sappho. Chic., Nile Pub. Co., [1891.] 224 p. por. D. (Nile ser., v. 1, no. 5.) pap., 25 c.

Davies, R: N. Doctrine of the trinity, the Biblical evidence. Cin., O., Cranston & Stowe, 1891. c. 234 p. D. cl., 90 c.

The doctrine of the trinity as found in the Articles of Religion of the Methodist Episcopal Church is explained for young students of divinity who are just beginning their Biblical studies. The objections of those who reject the doctrine are specially answered.

Dix, Rev. Morgan. The authority of the church as set forth in the book of common prayer articles and canons: sermons preached in Trinity chapel, New York, during Lent, 1891. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young, 1891. c. 128 p. D. pap., 30 c.

Dowling, R: A baffling quest. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 374 p. D. (Seaside lib., no., 1884.) pap., 20 c.

Drummond, H: Natural law in the spiritual world. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 24+414 p. D. (Lovell's literature ser., no. 148.) pap., 30 c.

Euclid. Books 1 and 2; graduated and arranged in order of difficulty, with an introd. on teaching Euclid by Rupert Deakin. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 79 p. 16°, cl., 35 c.

Fisher, Fes. C., ["Christian Reid," pseud.] Carmela; reprinted from the Ave Maria. Phil., H. L. Kilner & Co., [1891.] c. 371 p. D. (Catholic lib.) cl., net, 63 c.

A Mexican story of a beautiful young girls's devotion to her parents and her church. Home life in Mexico and the beauties of nature are worked into a romantic picture. Reprinted from the Ave Maria.

Fiske, J: The American revolution. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. c. 2 v. 21+344; 12+305 p. D. cl., $4.

A large part of this work has already been given to the public through lectures and the pages of the Atlantic Monthly But the author wished it to be understood that it is in no sense "based upon" lectures, but that it has been used as a basis for lectures. In writing the story of the period which the work embraces, Prof. Fiske's object has been "not so much to contribute new facts as to shape the narrative in such a way as to emphasize relations of cause and effect that are often buried in the mass of details." "The critical period of American history," by Prof. Fiske, now stand as a third volume to this work, while "The discovery and Spanish conquest of America," just in press, and "American political ideas," and "The beginnings of New England" may be regarded as introductory works.

Ford, Mrs. Mary H. Which wins? A story of social conditions. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891. c. 312 p. D. (Good company ser., no. 9.) pap., 50 c.

After having related to him the story of the lives of two American young men of to-day, whose aims and aspirations are entirely opposite, the reader is asked the question "Which wins?" and is left to answer it himself. The one hero, nicknamed "Parsifal" by his intimates, is a visionary who believes in an equality of wealth and labor, and lives out his views in a life of self-sacrifice for others. The other man lives to gain wealth and power, finally obtains Parsifal's fortune and the woman he loves, and is prosperous and happy, when Parsifal is dying in poverty. Many discussions are introduced upon the deplorable condition of the Western farmer in consequence of the mortgage system, and an account given of the movement culminating in the Farmers' Alliance.

Fothergill, Jessie. Kith and kin. N. Y., The National Pub. Co., [1891.] 352 p. D. (Red letter ser. of select fiction, no. 81.) pap., 25 c.

Fothergill, Jessie. Kith and kin. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 352 p. D. (Seaside lib., no. 1843.) pap., 20 c.

French, Alice, ["Octave Thanet," pseud.] Otto, the knight, and other trans-Mississippi stories. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. c. 3+348 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Contents: Otto, the knight; The conjured kitchen; The first mayor; Sist 'Chaney's black silk; The loaf of peace; The day of the cyclone; Trusty, No. 49; The plumb idiot; The governor's prerogative; The mortgage on Jeffy. These stories deal with Arkansas life of the present day, and are told, to a considerable extent, in the dialect of that section. Octave Thanet is the author of "Knitters in the sun."

Friend (The) of death: a fantastic tale; from the Spanish, by Mary J. Serrano. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1891.] c. 163 p. nar. D. (The unknown lib., no. 4.) cl., 50 c.

Gil Gil, the son, grandson, great-grandson, great-great-grandson of the most renowned family of cobblers in Lisbon, presumes to love a noble maiden. He is at once snubbed by her guardian, and commits suicide. He becomes the special favorite of Death, and for six centuries remains near him, working out his forgiveness for the crime of suicide which debars him from heaven. Finally, the day before the Last Judgment, in the year 2316, he is permitted again to meet the spirit of his Elena, "and hand in hand they entered the Promised Land, forever exempt from sorrow and suffering, saved and redeemed and reconciled with God." A weird story, showing the weakness and impotence of man, and his great indebtedness to his best friend, Death.

Furniss, Grace Livingston. A box of monkeys, and other farce-comedies. N. Y., Harper, 1891. c. 3+257 p. S. cl., $1.

Contains four bright and cheerful farces: A box of monkeys; The Jack trust; The veneered savage, and Tulu. They are intended for amateurs and parlor presentation, and require no elaborate stage settings.

George, H: The land question; what it involves, and how alone it can be settled. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 87 p. S. (Lovell's political and scientific ser., no. 4.) pap., 20 c.

Georgia. Supreme ct. Reports of cases at the March term, 1890. V. 85. Peeples and Stevens, reps. Atlanta, Ga. G: W. Harrison, st. pr., 1891. c. 14+941 p. O. shp., $5.

Goepel, Paul. Das Urheberrechts gesetz (The law of copyright in den Vereinigten Staaten) gültig vom 1. Juli, 1891, an: der Englische text mit Deutscher Ubersetzung und Bemerkungen. N. Y., E. Steiger & Co., 1891. 22 p. D. pap., gratis.

Gives the law of copyright in English and German text, and remarks of practical bearing for publishers of foreign and especially of German books in America. Mr. Goepel's idea is that there should be a German central bureau in New York City, the central point of the United States, organized, if possible, by the "Borsenverein" according to the plan proposed by Theodor Adolf Ackermann in the Börsenblatt of January 12, 1891. This bureau should be under the direction of a lawyer who could get all contracts with authors and publishers into legal shape, and give all persons interested the confidence that their rights were properly looked after.

Grey, Maxwell, [pseud. for M. G. Tuttiett.] In the heart of the storm: a tale of modern chivalry. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 339 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 157.) pap., 50 c.

The author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland" introduces the Crimean War and the Siege of Lucknow in this study of four young lives, which by force of nature and circumstances become strangely entangled. Philip, the forsaken orphan, adopted and cherished by an old miller, the miller's pretty, gifted daughter, Claude, the petted son of Sir Arthur Medway, and Ada, the young frivolous beauty who later shows such strength of character and purpose, do not love as their elders plan they shall, and "in the heart of the storm" Claude takes matters in his own hands, and brings about an unforeseen ending. The author excels in dissection of motives.

Guenot, H: The Moor of Granada: from the French. Phil., H. L. Kilner & Co., [1891.] c. 273 p. S. (Premium lib.) cl., net, 38 c.

A historical tale of the overthrow of Moslem rule in Granada in 1499. Many of the characters are Moors converted to Christianity, notably two young girls who, after many stormy scenes, sought refuge in a convent, and there gave telling examples of attachment to the religion of Christ, striking in contrast to the religion of Islam.

Howells, W: D. Criticism and fiction. N. Y., Harper, 1891. c. 3+188 p. por. S. cl., $1.

Selected from the "Editor's Study" of Harper's Magazine. Mr. Howells pleads for intelligent and honest criticism, and fiction which is true to nature. He measures the scope and influence of criticism, points out the evils of anonymity in journalism, the relations between critics and authors, the differences between English and American fiction, the merits of the American short story and many other literary truths.

James, S: H. A prince of goodfellows: a picture from life; ed. by N. Warrington Crabtrie. 2d ed. N. Y., The American News Co., 1891. c. '90. 4-208 p. D. pap., 50 c.

In this novel aim has been made to present life in the far South as it really is. Therefore the landscape, social habits and vernacular of the cotton planter are introduced. The scene is Madison Parish, Louisiana. The hero is Dr. Brandon; in his virtues and vices, and in Mr. Crabtrie's satirical way of telling of them lies the interest of a story, which occurs in the time 1878-1882, and covers incidents of the yellow-fever epidemic, and an overflow of the Mississippi River.

Jelley, S. M. The voice of labor. Rev. and enl. ed. Chic., H. J. Smith & Co., [1891.] c. '88. 6+401 p. por. il. D. (The golden ser., no. 2.) pap., 50 c.

Contains special contributions by leading workingmen throughout the United States upon "Labor's rights, wrongs, remedies, etc.;" also, a history of the Knights of Labor, the Farmers' Alliance, etc.

Jenness, Mabel. Comprehensive physical culture. N. Y., C: T. Dillingham, 1891. c. 7+227 p. O. cl., $2.

Interesting chapters on horseback riding, rowing, swimming, fencing and dancing; hygiene of the skin and treatment of the complexion; bath; bending exercises; elongating exercises; the hand and arm; vocal gymnastics, throat, chest and bust; correct and elegant carriage.

Jerome, Jerome K., [pseud. for J. W. Arrowsmith.] Diary of a pilgrimage (and six essays): il. by G. G. Fraser. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1891. 6+360 p. D. cl., $1.25: pap., 40 c.

The "Diary of a pilgrimage" relates with much humor, and with the aid of many clever pictures, the incidents which occurred to two friends who went from London to Ober-Ammergau to see the "Passion Play." The play is treated seriously, an account of it, and the impression it made upon the writer, being embodied in the narrative. The six essays which follow this article have for their subjects, "Dreams," "Clocks," "Evergreens," "Ten-bottles," a "Pathetic story," and "A new Utopia." They all serve to display the author's wit, and characteristic humor.

Jókai, Maurus. There is no devil: a romance; from the Hungarian, by F. Steinitz. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1891.] c. tr. 7+307 p. por. D. cl., $1.

Maurus Jókai, now sixty-six years old, and considered to-day Hungary's greatest man of letters, is a financier, a statesman and a journalist as well as a famous novelist. He lives at Buda-Pesth. The hero of this story is instrumental in carrying out needed political reform in Hungary. His successful career leads many to say "He has sold himself to the devil." The descriptions of his monetary speculations, suicidal purposes, and moral cowardice during one episode of his eventful career are written with fire. "The only Devil was the demon in my own breast, long ago subdued by the more potent angels of love and peace. Good and bad fellow-beings are all human and material. There is no Devil."

Lee, Franklyn W. A shred of lace. St. Paul, Minn., The Price-McGill Publishing Co., 1891. c. 3+317 p. D. (Idle moments ser., no. 2.) pap., 50 c.

Rob Nichols absents himself for six years after promising to marry Mattie Dammon. She is prevailed upon to marry a wild young man, and reform him for his mother's sake. Upon Rob's return Mattie keeps him a long time in suspense, not having courage to confess her marriage. After the death of her husband, who proves a drunken tyrant, she summons Rob with a note enclosing "a shred of lace," and he seems very glad to get her even at the eleventh hour.

Murger, H: Scenes from the life of Bohemia (Scenes de la vie de Bohême.) N. Y., Gould Publishing House, 26-30 Frankfort St., [1891.] 31+333 p. il. D. (The Gould lib., v. 1, no. 1.) pap., 50 c.

This work first appeared in the Corsaire in 1848, the author receiving fifteen francs for each instalment. It is a series of sketches of real life. Rudolphe is Murger himself. He actually lived in the Latin quarter, and knew personally all his characters. Places as well as persons are copied from nature. The Bohemians are poor artists, obstinate dreamers, enthusiasts with strong convictions, young fellows who mistake fancy for a vocation, amateurs, etc., who speak a special language borrowed from the conversation of the studios, the jargon of the theatre, and the discussions of the editor's room. The name of translator is not given, but the work is well done.

Phelps, Eliz. Stuart, [now Mrs. Herbert D. Ward.] Fourteen to one. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. c. 3+464 p. D. cl., $1.25.

As a writer of short stories, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps has few equals. In this volume fourteen of her best efforts in this line are embraced. Among these are "Jack the fisherman," one of the most impressive and pathetic temperance stories ever told, and "The Madonna of the tubs," which has already enjoyed a wide popularity.

Porter, Luther H. Cycling for health and pleasure: a complete guide to the use of the wheel. 2d ed., rev. Bost., Wheelman Co., 1891. c. '90. 8+230 p. il. D. pap., 50 c.

The author has devoted the best years of his life to the management of the system of leasing convicts to do the hard work of Florida. The convicts are chiefly negroes of the lowest, most ignorant order. The discl-pline seems cruelly harsh. The horrors of Siberian convict-life described by Kennan seem to be duplicated, with the added horror of tracking fugitives with trained bloodhounds. Gives no alluring picture of Florida, but many facts about its natural resources, and the occupations of its inhabitants.

Pratt, Mara L., M.D. Francisco Pizarro: the conquest of Peru. Bost., Educational Pub. Co., 1890. c. 128 p. il. S. (Young folk's lib. of American history.) bds., 25 c.

The romantic story of Pizarro and the conquest of Peru is told in a simple, attractive way for young readers.

"The organism and the brain, as its highest representation, constitute the real personality, containing in itself all that we have been, and the possibilities of all that we shall be. The complete individual character is inscribed there with all its active and passive aptitudes, sympathies and antipathies, its genius, talents or stupidity, its virtues, vices, torpor or activity." This treatise is devoted to the exposition and discussion of morbid organisms.

Rooper, T. G. Apperception; or, the essential mental operation in the act of learning: an essay on A pot of green feathers. Syracuse, N. Y., C. W. Bardeen, 1891. c. 52 p. S. (School bulletin pubs.) cl., 50 c.

Treats of the art of mental assimilation of the impressions we receive from external objects. Does not deal with the origin of these impressions, or their physiological basis, but with the growth of knowledge by the mind working on impressions. The author was present at a kindergarten recitation, when the teacher held up a pot with ferns and asked what it was. One child said, "A pot of green feathers." This led the writer to a train of thought upon perception, which he has elaborated and worked into the present volume. R. H. Quick, the celebrated English pedagogue, speaks highly of this monograph.

Smith, F. Hopkinson. Colonel Carter of Carterville; il. by E. W. Kemble and the author. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. c. 5+208 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A typical Southern gentleman, a Virginian whose best days dated before the war, is personified in "Col. Carter." Living in New York with his faithful servant and former slave "Chad," he remains in spite of contact with that progressive, bustling city a "reb," a believer in slavery, whom nothing short of death can reconstruct. He and his friends are delightfully described. His poverty and lavish hospitality, his debts and high sense of honor are most amusingly contrasted. He has many visionary schemes for growing rich, and the reader is entirely in sympathy with him when coal is found in Cartersville, and through an English syndicate he is a wealthy man.

Mortimer Paget, Esq., the head and sole surviving representative of the once great ship-broking firm of Paget Brothers of London, is the agent, who sets in motion the sinister scheme which is the central motive of this novel. He has a beautiful daughter, who is loved by the only son of a country parson. It is he, Gerald Wyndham, who gives "a life for a love."

Stickney, A. B. The railway problem; with illustrative diagrams. St. Paul, Minn., D. D. Merrill Co., 1891. c. 7+249 p. D. cl., $2; hf. leath., $2.50.

A criticism of the Interstate Commerce law, with other laws of a similar nature, which grew out of the so-called "Granger" agitations of recent years. These laws are frankly presented, and examined in all their bearings and viewed from all points—from the people's standpoint as well as from the side of the railway magnate. The writer has for twenty years been interested in the construction and operation of railways, and is to-day President of the Board of Managers of the Chicago & St. Paul Railroad. He was early interested in all the "Granger" agitation, and finds much to commend in the Interstate laws, but he boldly and plausibly points out what he considers their defects, their shortcomings in failing to do what they claim, and the injustice they entail upon people and communities. In supporting his argument he offers many interesting and valuable chapters on the era of construction in railways, on the method of railway management, effects of discrimination, competition, tariffs, railway passes, rates, watered stock, etc.

The "Queen of the woods" is a sweet sensible girl who has been educated above her rustic station, but leaves all her opportunities to devote herself to a paralytic old man, whom she has always considered her father. Her country home, with its many duties, changing with the changing seasons, and the rare beauty of the woods of Southern France, are artistically drawn. Her love-story is rudely shattered by hearing from her confessor that she and the man she proposes to marry are children of the same father. She goes back to her devotion to the half-witted old paralytic, and in the end wins the love of a truly noble man.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 9, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proof and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

THE PROFESSION OF BOOKSELLING. IV.

TRADE PAPERS, LITERARY JOURNALS, CATALOGUES, ETC., AND THEIR STUDY.—I.

"The difficulty is not so much to know the law, as it is to know where to find it."—Judge Sharswood.

THE most perplexing problem which faces the bookseller, not only at the start, but daily, is how to keep pace with the current publications, advance announcements, and the doings of authors. besides keeping in mind all that already stands upon, or has at one time filled, his shelves. The bookseller's position, in this respect, is unique and trying. He must devote a certain amount of time every day or week to the study of his stock, or his usefulness as a bookseller becomes impaired. The great question then is, How may the retailer so manage it that he can gain the information necessary and essential for him? The subject is a perplexing one to the veteran. What must it be to the young recruit who for the first time looks upon the array of books about him, scattered in seeming confusion on shelves, on the tops of tables and under them in drawers, in bunks, and in bundles labelled with their contents; to say nothing of the stacks piled up here and there in the store and basement! While engaged in the survey, the apprentice sees parcels of new books just received, opened and their contents displayed on the tables, older books being removed to make room for the new arrivals. What becomes of the displaced books? the apprentice wonders. "Stock," of course. And shall I ever be able to keep track of these endless changes and, in addition, keep informed on what is to be published to-morrow, next week or next month!

No wonder the outlook to the uninitiated seems almost hopeless. But he will find in time that with a good memory and proper tools much o the difficulty can be overcome. We place memory first, for without that the best of tools would be worth little. Even a poor memory can by careful and persistent training be strengthened by methods that will work wonders, as those who have tried will testify. A total absence of memory, as a rule, indicates carelessness or senility, and neither of these qualities will help a man in the book business.

First among the bookseller's helps we place the trade journal that gives him the fullest information in the shortest intervals. As yet the American book trade has not developed sufficiently to warrant the issue of a daily journal such as the Germans have in the Borsenblatt. THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, being the only book trade journal in this country published regularly every week (the exceptions being the Fall Announcement [double] Number in September, and the "Christmas Bookshelf," also a double number, in November), may therefore be placed at the head of the list of the tools indispensable to the bookseller.

THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY should represent something more than a mere newspaper to the apprentice—it should be regarded by him as his text-book, to be carefully studied day by day, week by week, until he has thoroughly mastered its contents. How this may be done is best illustrated by the following system adopted by a practical bookseller for his own guidance and that of his assistants. We give his instructions herewith in his own language:

"On the receipt of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY we generally proceed as follows: First read slowly and carefully the publishers' advertisements Take each title and author, and endeavor to cal to mind what other works there are by the same author, as for instance: In Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s advertisement we find an advance announcement of "The Sister's Tragedy," by Thomas Bailey Aldrich. What else did Aldrich write? "Wyndham Towers," "Baby Bell," "Prudence Palfrey," "Story of a Bad Boy," etc., all published by the same publisher. By this mental discipline the forthcoming book will become fastened on the mind in connection with those with which you are already familiar. Now impress on your mind again, "The Sister's Tragedy," a new book of poems by Aldrich, date when to be issued, uniform with "Wyndham Towers," Houghton, Mifflin & Co., publishers. In Putnam's page we find "Pericles and the Golden Age of Athens." Note this as a new volume of the Heroes of the Nations series, same style as the Story of the Nations. The previous volume were Nelson and Gustavus Adolphus. The reviewers spoke highly of these when they were published, and they sold well for books of that class. They are issued in two styles of binding. In following this principle with the works of well-known authors and series, the mind will be greatly aided by making the comparisons as indicated. With new authors we have at first, of course, a little more difficulty, and we generally make an effort to detect some peculiarity about their books, as for instance, "The Quick or the Dead," by Amélie Rives. That is a singular title; what can be its purport? "What Ails the Baby?" is another curious title; what does it mean? In the effort to solve these questions we watch carefully advance literary notices and so at last discover that the one is a story to be published by the J. B. Lippincott Company, and the other a quasi-medical work in preparation by Brentano's. It is astonishing how much can be imbibed by such a process systematically followed up. The mere hasty reading of titles is so much time lost, and crowds the memory with material that cannot be digested, and that is never ready when wanted. Bear in mind the principal things to be remembered are title and publisher. Given these, you have the key to any further information that may be wanted.

"Next take up the Order List. Never mind the publisher's name, but read the titles, and question yourself as to who publishes them, because generally the Order List is a repetition of the advertisements. This will be found good practice, and will greatly aid in memorizing the numerous titles. Then we turn to the "Weekly Record of New Publications." To the study of this we give all the time we can spare, because it is literally the American bookseller's storehouse of information. It may not be an ideal list, nor a perfect one, but we do know that it is the best and most practical list offered the book trade of any country in the world. The lists in the book trade journals of other nations are composed of brief, condensed book titles. The book list in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is not only a record of the activity of the publishing trade, but a current history of the literature of this country as well. From THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY Record may be gained a fund of information that will enable a bookseller to talk intelligently even of books which he does not see, and perhaps never expects to handle, and which information without the aid of the WEEKLY he could never acquire, excepting possibly at the expense of a great deal of time and money.

"Having mastered the "Weekly Record," we make a mental memorandum of the brief list of English books, though to this we pay less attention, as all English books for which there is likely to be a demand in this country sooner or later find their way into the lists of some American publisher. Then we turn to the "Notes in Season," which often contain hints as to the character of forthcoming books, that cannot be found elsewhere. Then we scan the "Notes on Authors," a very important department, which we wish could be arranged on some monthly list plan, giving a record of author, title, publisher, and probable date of publication. The "Journalistic Notes" are looked over for important articles or serials, which are often called for as books long before they are completed in periodical form, and remembering their titles may save one considerable time and annoyance. The course is finished when we have read through the "Literary and Trade Notes," the general articles, original and contributed, and the editorials. Besides this we always make it a practice to read in every issue the columns of "Books Wanted" and "Books for Sale," marking off such books as we think we have in stock, or that may strike us as bargains. Books offered for sale, without giving the price, are not regarded, and we often wonder why they are so published. If a party has a bargain to offer let him publish it. If he wants bids he had better go to the auction room; so far as we are concerned his advertisement is wasted. Checking off the "Books Wanted" columns is good practice; besides keeping us posted on what is becoming scarce, it often helps us to get rid of books that we have become tired of seeing in stock.

"We keep two copies of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, one for the store and one for our home. Both are filed regularly. We think this a wise plan because it gives one an opportunity away from the surroundings of business to see the same thing in two different lights. Besides, we have found that it pays to spend fifteen minutes or half an hour in reading up at home not only the present issues but also the back numbers of the WEEKLY. Such time can always be spared and is never misapplied. This we consider the Meisterschaft system applied to the bookseller's text book, vade mecum, or whatever else you may choose to call the WEEKLY, and if conscientiously followed out, will assist the learner to become an accomplished bookman, so far as current and forthcoming books are concerned.

"As to keeping track of the publications of the past months we consider the issues of the WEEKLY containing the "Monthly Record" of the utmost value. These are excellent numbers for study and to test one's mental capacity. We generally hold this number in reserve till some evening when the day's labor has not been as trying as usual. Beginning at A we treat the matter fairly, and refrain from noting the publisher's name, keeping a thumb over that part of the column. We read the title, and ask when will book. Perhaps we know, and perhaps we do not. If after several efforts we cannot remember it, we take our thumb off the forbidden spot, and generally find to our surprise that it is by a publisher well known to us. We proceed in this manner to the end, and are confused and dismayed at the large number we had almost entirely forgotten. By doing this a number of times you will have gained information that will be valuable to you in more ways than you fancy. We cut out these "Monthly Records" and paste the titles alphabetically, (that is, the As, Bs, etc., for six months, until the issue of the "Trade List Annual" and the "Annual Summary Number,") in an indexed book. This gives us a complete record of books almost up to date, and easy of access."

We are not sure that many will have the enthusiasm and patience to follow the foregoing plan. But whatever system may be adopted it must be adhered to faithfully, or much valuable time will be squandered.

COPYRIGHT IN ENGLAND.—In the House of Lords on the 11th inst. Lord Monkswell's Copyright bill passed the second reading under a pledge that the bill should not be proceeded with any further during the present session of Parliament.

ENGLISH AND GERMANS PROTEST AGAINST THE NEW COPYRIGHT LAW.

THE London Chamber of Commerce has been circulating a statement against the new copyright law, describing it as "ruinous to the trades concerned in the production of books, chromos, photographs, and lithographs." The Chamber of Commerce also invokes support for a bill by which British copyright will be refused to books not set up and printed in the British dominions or in a country included in the Berne Convention.

Mr. Gladstone is reported to have written that he is not prepared fo say what steps should be taken in the matter of the American Copyright act; but whether in relation to the interests of labor, the dignity of authorship or the Nation's interests, he regards the act as highly unsatisfactory.

German publishers and authors through the Börsenblatt and other journals, have been unceasing in their protests against the "barbarity" of the manufacturing clause. Dr. Weidling, of Berlin, in a recent issue of the Juristischen Litteraturblatts, concludes a bitter protest with the following paragraph: "The one true legislative German answer to this American stroke of genius ought to be the exclusion of all American inventions from the protection of our patent rights. That the inventive Americans, who do not scruple to plunder us of our intellectual property in printed books, etc., cannot expect German protection for their property in inventions becomes a matter of course."

THE PAULIST FATHERS' PUBLISHING HOUSE.

BEFORE many months the Paulist Fathers, who have charge of the Catholic Church of St. Paul the Apostle, at Fifty-ninth Street and Ninth Avenue, will open, as already announced in these columns, an establishment the like of which is not in the United States. The Paulists believe that printer's ink is a fruitful means of spreading the gospel, and they are going to conduct a publishing house for their own use. The late Very Rev. Isaac F. Hecker, who founded the Paulist Order in 1865, was a firm believer in the efficacy of the press as an aid to the preacher. He imbued every member of his community with the same conviction. A few weeks ago work was begun on a building 55 x 31 feet, that is to be the Publishing House in Sixtieth Street, with three stories and a basement. The front has been designed to correspond with the church. It is to be of Collobar brick, laid in red mortar, with rock-faced Ohio stone trimmings. To provide a first-class workshop is the object of the Fathers. In the basement are to be storerooms, engines and heating apparatus; in the first story the presses, paper-cutter and general offices; in the second the manager's office, machines for binding and job presses, and in the top story the composing-room and superintendent's office.

Three periodicals are to be issued besides books, tracts, etc. The periodicals are the Catholic World, a monthly magazine; the Young Catholic, a weekly juvenile paper, and the Monthly Calendar, perhaps one of the most unique periodicals in this city. The Catholic World is in its twenty-seventh year and fifty-third volume. Father Hecker founded it, and until his death, a few years ago, was its editor. The present editor is the Very Rev. Augustine F. Hewit, Superior of the Paulist Order. He is assisted by Fathers Elliott, McMillan, Simmons, Hughes, and other members of the community. The business management is also in the hands of one of the priests, the Rev. William D. Hughes. The Paulists' juvenile publication, the Young Catholic, was established twenty-three years ago, and is said to be the pioneer of its class. Father Hecker always took a great interest in it, and during his life almost every issue contained lots of good advice from him to its young readers. The Young Catholic has readers in most parts of the world, even in the leper settlements of Molokai. When the new publishing house is ready the Young Catholic is to be made something like St. Nicholas in form. In large city parishes like the Paulists' the priests have found it difficult to make the congregation understand the announcements on Sunday. To overcome this difficulty the Paulists founded a newspaper on a small scale, and called it the Monthly Calendar. It is issued the first Sunday of each month. The number of pages which each issue contains is usually sixteen, but often there are twenty-four. The Rev. John J. Hughes is the editor. He describes it as a printed message from the pastor to his flock. Five thousand copies are distributed.

IN A MAGAZINE PIGEON-HOLE.—Poem: I wish to thunder I'd been rejected and cremated twenty years ago, when I first got here. War Paper: So do I. This being buried alive is fearful.—Life.

OBITUARY NOTES.

MADAME HELENE PETROVNA BLAVATSKY, the founder and great apostle of Theosophy, died at St. John's Wood, London, some time in April, the exact date of her death being unknown. Very little of her parentage and early life is definitely known. She is supposed to have been a Mlle. Hahn, and to have been born in Ekaterinoslav, a government of South Russia, on the Dnieper, in 1831. When seventeen years old, in a fit of pique, she married Nicephore Blavatsky, a councillor of state, then sixty years old. After three months the couple separated, and Mme. Blavatsky's wonderful career began. Making due allowance for exaggerations she must have seen a considerable part of the world during her wanderings. Her authentic history begins with her expulsion from Egypt in 1870, while trying to form a spiritualistic society, and her appearance in this country in 1873 together with the formation of what is known as the Mahatmic movement. In November, 1875, with Col. H. S. Olcott, a New York lawyer, and others, she formed the New York Theosophical Society, the object of which was to investigate the unexplained laws of nature and the psychical powers of man, and to promote the study of Aryan and other Eastern languages. In 1878 Mme. Blavatsky, accompanied by Col. Olcott, went to India, leaving the New York Society in charge of Wm. Q. Judge. In 1885 the London Society for Psychic Research investigated her institution in Madras, which gave rise to considerable scandal. About the same time Prof. Eliot Coues also wrote an expose of her methods. In defence of her opinions Mme. Blavatsky in 1876 published her first book, "Isis Unveiled," which had a remarkable sale. In 1877, when she settled in London, she started a Theosophical magazine called Lucifer, which she edited up to her death, with Mrs. Annie Besant. In France she was actively connected with three Theosophical reviews, Le Lotus, La Revue Theosophique and Le Lotus Bleu. In 1888 the first two volumes of Madame Blavatsky's greatest work, "The Secret Doctrine: the Synthesis of Science, Religion and Philosophy," appeared. This was followed in 1889 by "The Key to Theosophy; a clear exposition in the form of questions and answers of the ethics, science and philosophy for the study of which the Theosophical Society had been founded," and by a smaller work, "The Voice of the Silence; or fragments from the book of the Golden Precepts."

PROF. JOHN LE CONTE, eldest son of the late Lewis Le Conte and brother of Prof. Joseph Le Conte, all three being eminent naturalists, died April 30 at Berkeley, Cal. He was born in Liberty County, Georgia, on Dec. 4, 1818, and was the author of numerous lectures and essays. At the time of his death he was Professor of Physics in the University of California.

JOHN J. HALLENBECK, of the old firm of printers, Wynkoop & Hallenbeck, died April 30 at his home at Haddonfield, N. J., aged seventy-one years. He came to this city from his birthplace, Albany, when quite a young man, and entered the employ of Harper & Bros., with whom he remained until 1857, occupying nearly every place of trust in the printing department. Since 1857 he was a member of the firm which, with a few changes, has remained the same to this day.

OLD BOOK CHAT.

WHEN people advertise in the "Books Wanted" column of this journal for Sala's "Twice Round the Block," and for a quarto "Romeo and Juliet," beside a first folio Shakespeare, and state they only want the latter for the "title pages, illustrations," etc., it really seems time that something was done. Who will open a subscription to send these gentlemen to the Prague School?

I AM somewhat of the opinion that booksellers are like poets and journalists — born, and not made. There are certain individuals that might read the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY'S excellent articles on bookselling for ten years and finish up with a twenty-five year course at the before-mentioned Prague School and be no better off. But what a help these things are to the really bright young fellow who would rise to the top anyhow! They will smooth his way and add years, perhaps, of usefulness to his career. There is, however, such small money-return to be looked for in this old-book business that it is often said "the cleverest men in it are those who get out." Here is food for thought.

IN London recently was sold an uncut copy of Thackeray's "Virginians" for $150. It contained the following inscription in the author's hand:

"In the U. States and in the Queen's dominions
All people have a right to their opinions,
And many don't much relish 'The Virginians.'
Peruse my book, dear R.; and if you'll find it
A little to your taste, I hope you'll bind it.
"Peter Rackham, Esqre., with best regards of the author."

I HEAR a further and concluding sale of the late Mr. Brinley's books is to take place very soon in New York.

SOME of the Ives' books are being offered at a considerable reduction from the auction prices. Did some people burn their fingers, or what? Especially "what?"

YOUNG Mr. Quaritch, over here now, has been staying at the Victoria. He has on exhibition a very choice lot of books. He is a slightly built young man, with a keen appreciation of the beauties of a book, and is very conscientious in his strict attention to business details. With his training and opportunities he seems to have a bright future. He confesses to liking America and its people "very much indeed"—a very wise opinion to form, too. BIBLIOPHILUS.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MRS. OLIPHANT'S memoir of her namesake—Laurence Oliphant—will be published at once in two volumes, each of which is to contain a portrait.

GRANT ALLEN has returned to England improved in health. He has agreed to contribute a "fortnightly causerie" to be entitled "The Peripatetic Philosopher," to Black and White.

MR. ALBERT ROSS is at present somewhere among the hill towns of Massachusetts, engaged in turning out another of his wonderfully successful novels. The one to be issued next month will bear the strange title of "Moulding a Maiden," and is the story of the efforts of three guardians of dissimilar views—a lady and gentlemen—to mould the character of heiress left to their charge. It is said to be as bright as anything he has yet done.

DR. SAMUEL SMILES, though over seventy-eight years of age, is still at work on new books. To a correspondent of The Pall Mall he said recently: "I am just writing a book which I hope will be published before long, the life of Gasmin, a French poet, who died twenty years ago. He was a barber, and lived in the south of France. Very few of his poems are known even to the French, for he always wrote in Gascon, and so the few of his works that are known in France have previously been translated into French. Longfellow translated one of his most charming and pathetic pieces years ago. You know it, perhaps—'The Blind Girl of Castel-cuille.' But even in the village where he lived and worked and died, I could scarcely find a trace of him, or even of any one who knew he wrote. All they knew about him was that he was a barber." Dr. Smiles began life as a physician, then he became a journalist, and like the late M. Chatrian, he has had much to do with railways, having been secretary of two or three large companies. At first he wrote as a recreation after his secretarial duties were over for the day.

DR. JOHN CLARK RIDPATH, the historian, was recently tendered a reception at Greencastle, Ind., in recognition of his services as a historian and in honor of his fifty-first birthday. President J. P. D. John, of De Pauw University, delivered the introductory address, and Tucker W. Taylor, Dr. James N. Matthews, A. H. Davis, James Whitcomb Riley and Mary Hartwell Catherwood were among those who contributed to the entertainment. An autograph souvenir containing sentiments and expressions of good-will from 200 authors of the United States was presented to Dr. Ridpath. The letters were bound in two volumes, and comprise one of the most interesting collections in the United States. Dr. Ridpath, who was born in Putnam County, obtained his education at frontier schools. At nineteen he entered Asbury (now the De Pauw) University, where he graduated with the highest honors in his class. He was soon afterward made Principal of the academy at Thorntown, Ind. He held this position three years, and was then chosen to fill the Chair of Languages at Baker University, Baldwin City, Kan. In 1869 he was elected Professor of English Literature in Asbury University, and in 1879 became Vice-President. He received the degree of LL.D. from the University of Syracuse, N. Y., in 1880. Among the most important of Dr. Ridpath's published works are "Academic History of the United States," "Popular Historyof the United States," "Inductive Grammar of the English Language" and "A Cyclopædia of Universal History."

BUSINESS NOTES.

APPLETON, WIS.—A. Bartman intends selling out his stock of books and stationery.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—L. V. Brazer will open shortly a well-appointed book and stationery store in this town.

JOLIET, ILL.—Frank E. Brayton has disposed of his book business to F. W. Henley, an enterprising book man of Greensburg, Ind., who has just taken possession.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—M. H. Dickinson & Co., booksellers and stationers, who recently failed, have offered to settle their accounts on the basis of 25 cents in cash and 75 cents in three years, unsecured notes without interest.

LONGMONT, CAL.—J. I. Brown is closing out his book and stationery store.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—C. A. Rhode & Co. have removed to 300 Third Street (Metropolitan Block), one of the busiest thoroughfares in the city. They intend enlarging and improving their English department, and should like to receive regularly all new catalogues and announcements in this direction. They are also enlarging their stock of technical books, of which they make a specialty.

NEW YORK CITY.—Aiken, Lambert & Co. have removed to No. 19 Maiden Lane, a few doors nearer Broadway than the old stand. Their temporary office is at No. 23 Maiden Lane, while improvements are being made.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Kiggins & Tooker Company has secured the agency of the celebrated De La Rue diaries.

OMAHA, NEB.—Maurice Henger, of the firm of J. H. Henger & Son, booksellers, is dead.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Penn Publishing Co. has removed to 1050 Arch Street.

PITTSBURG, KAN.—R. T. Holmes, bookseller, has sold out.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—James H. Farrell, bookseller, is dead.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—The Whimple Book Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $8000, one-half of which has been paid up.

SANTA ANNA, CAL.—J. A. and P. H. Turner, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

TACOMA, WASH.—E. C. Vaughan & Co., wholesale and retail booksellers, stationers, etc., have been succeeded by Vaughan & Morrill.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

A. H. BULLEN, well known by his scholarly editions of the dramatists and song-writers of Elizabethan and Jacobean times, has started in business as a publisher in New Bond Street, London, in conjunction with H. W. Lawrence. The title of the new firm will be Lawrence & Bullen.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY PUB. CO., 7 Clinton Place, N. Y., will publish at once "Letters to Farmers' Sons on the Questions of the Day," by Dr. Henry S. Chase, being a collection of familiar talks on such subjects as Rent, Banks, Debt, Distribution of Wealth, Interest, Labor, Land, Maternalism, Paternalism, Wages, etc.

AN illustrated work entitled "Engravings: how to estimate their cost," will be issued soon by F. F. Burgin and Leon Barrett, of the New York Press. It describes the processes by which engravings are made for books, magazines and newspapers, with the cost, etc., and contains elaborate engravings and photogravure reproductions.

LAIRD & LEE, Chicago, announce for immediate publication "Mademoiselle Giraud, my wife," by Adolphe Belot, the famous novelist and playwright, who died a short time ago. The book will be handsomely printed with the original French illustrations, and will be sold at a remarkably low price.

WILLUR B. KETCHAM, of 2 Cooper Union, is the sole agent in New York City for the publications of C. W. Bardeen, of Syracuse, N. Y.; Willard Tract Repository, Boston, Mass.; Lorenz & Co., Dayton, O.; H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.; Patriotic Publishing Co., Chicago, Ill.; and also keeps in stock books published by E. J. Goodrich, Oberlin, O.

HENRY HOLT & CO. are about to issue, at the request of several eminent professors of philosophy, a translation of "A History of Modern Philosophy from Nikolaus von Kues to the present day," by Dr. Richard Falckenberg, of Jena University, said to be the most comprehensive sketch of the whole subject which has yet been written.

ACCORDING to the London Publishers' Circular, "'A Retired Publisher's Assistant' is preparing a volume of 'Memories,' which we understand will contain many interesting particulars concerning the literary methods of De Quincey. It will be remembered that 'The Opium Eater' was for years a voluminous contributor to Tait's Edinburgh Magazine, and the 'Assistant' in question was employed by Tait. Such parts of the 'Memories,' therefore, as refer to De Quincey will have the supreme advantage of freshness."

D. C. HEATH & CO. have almost ready "Comparative View of the Executive and Legislative Departments of the Governments of the United States, France, England and Germany," by John Wenzel, Assistant Librarian of College of Liberal Arts, Boston University, consisting of outlines of the four great constitutional governments, arranged in parallel columns in such a way that similar topics are grouped together. Prof. Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton, has examined the manuscript and made suggestions and corrections.

A. J. HOLMAN & CO. call the attention of the jobbing trade to their large line of quarto Bibles, of which samples are already on the road, in every variety of binding, of which many styles have been received from Europe. The parallel Bibles containing the King James and Revised Versions will in future be pronouncing Bibles, that is, every proper name will be divided into syllables and the proper accent placed on each syllable to be emphasized. They have also had the famous Hoffman Gallery of New Testament illustrations engraved for them and have included them in their quarto Bibles.

THE seventh volume of the new and improved edition of "Chambers's Encyclopædia," which is to be published in June by the J. B. Lippincott Co., will contain articles on Marlowe and Marston by Bullen, on Molière by Sainstbury, on Mysteries by Baring-Gould, on Cardinal Newman by Hutton, on the great Montrose by Groome, and on Father Parsons by Mr. Law. Mr. Blackmore discourses not only about orchards, but about peaches and pears; Stanley Lane-Poole writes about Mecca and Medina, Mr. Groome on Norwich and Norfolk, Mr. Ormsby on Novels, Dr. Head on Numismatics, Dr. John Murray on the Pacific, and Canon Taylor on Names; Prof. Nicholson treats of the National Debt, while Palestine engages two contributors, Mr. Besant and Prof. Hull. Sir E. Grey, M.P., furnishes an article on Mr. John Morley.

JUST READY:

The Co-operative Index to Periodicals for 1890.

This work is a key to the contents of nearly one hundred representative magazines and periodicals published in the English language in the United States and Great Britain. It has been prepared by W. I. Fletcher, of Amherst College (the editor of Poole's Index), who has had the co-operation of nearly forty members of the American Library Association.

To the literary worker its value can hardly be overestimated; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field; to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time; and to the bookseller it is of the greatest practical value, as it enables him to look up at once any inquiries for magazine articles, no matter how the question is asked.

Now issued as an annual, the index to the whole year being in one alphabet, by title of article or subject, supplemented by an author index, the work has reached its most complete stage of development.

The price has been fixed at $2.50 in half morocco, $2.00 in paper.

WILL PUBLISH ON SATURDAY, MAY 23:

Felicia.

A novel. By FANNY N. D. MURFREE. 16mo, $1.25.

Miss Murfree has succeeded admirably in a novel somewhat out of the beaten track. It deals much more with the perplexing conditions in married life than with those conditions which usually precede marriage. She reads and depicts character skilfully, she describes scenes vividly, and her touch is at once so firm and light that the reader is charmed.

Lewis Cass.

Vol. XXIV. of American Statesmen. By ANDREW C. MCLAUGHLIN, Assistant Professor of History in the University of Michigan. 16mo, gilt top, $1.25.

A book of real value on the long public career of General Cass, and the eminent public services he rendered as Military Governor of Michigan, and later as a Cabinet Minister, as Minister to France, and as a United States Senator.

Ryle's Open Gate.

A novel. By SUSAN TEACKLE MOORE. 16mo, $1.25.

A bright summer story for summer reading. The scenes and characters are of Long Island. The breezinss of the style may remind the reader of "Colonel Carter of Cartersville," written by Mrs. Moore's brother, Mr. F. Hopkinson Smith.

Whist in Diagrams.

By G. P. W., author of "American Whist Illustrated." 16mo, $1.25.

This book contains seventy-five hands played through, illustrating special situations. These are the hands of the best players of the world, the masters of Whist.

Under a Colonial Roof-Tree.

Fireside chronicles of early New England. By Miss ARRIA S. HUNTINGTON. With Illustrations. 4to.

This is an interesting book, largely about the Phelps-Huntington family of Hadley, Mass., and its home. The regicides figure in the narrative; a diary covers from 1763 to 1812; and famous men and great events, with fine illustrations, contribute to the engaging story of the ancient home.

American Guide-Books.

By M. F. SWEETSER. Carefully revised to date.

NEW ENGLAND. THE WHITE MOUNTAINS.
THE MARITIME PROVINCES.

With maps and plans, $1.50 each.

"Every whit as good as 'Baedeker.'"—The Independent (New York).

Notes in England and Italy.

By Mrs. HAWTHORNE. With a portrait of Mrs. Hawthorne. New edition. Crown 8vo, $1.50.

In this book Mrs. Hawthorne supplements very pleasantly the English and Italian note-books of Mr. Hawthorne, and includes charming glimpses of the home life of the family.

READY MAY 27:

The Life of Robert Browning.

By Mrs. SUTHERLAND ORR. With a new portrait of Browning and a view of his studio. 2 vols. crown 8vo, gilt top, $3.00.

NEW BOOKS

Thomas Nelson Page's First Novel—Ready June 4.

ON NEWFOUND RIVER: A STORY.

By THOMAS NELSON PAGE. 12mo, $1.00.

Mr. Page's first novel is deeply romantic, and the course of its sympathetic narrative, which deals with the simple but profound sentiments of human nature, is varied by several situations of genuine dramatic power. The scene is Virginia, the days "befo' the war," and the characters typical aristocrats, poor whites, petty politicians and darkies common to the time and place. The freshness of the theme and the brilliancy of the treatment will make it the novel of the summer, an immense sale being confidently predicted.

SECOND EDITIONS NOW READY OF

Gallegher,

And Other Stories. By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"The candor, humor and freshness of these stories are very alluring. There is a finish in the rounding of each theme that is suggestive of the French masters."—Brooklyn Times.

Zadoc Pine,

And Other Stories. By H. C. BUNNER. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"Mr. Bunner tells capital stories—simple, clear, with interest always well sustained. These are stories of American realism, except one, which is an amusing fairy tale."—N. Y. Sun.

The Old Navy and the New.

By REAR-ADMIRAL DANIEL AMMEN, U.S.N., author of "The Atlantic Coast during the Civil War." With an Appendix of Personal Letters from General Grant. 8vo, cloth, $3.00.

"The memoirs are very well worth reading; the changes of scene and action are so rapid and frequent that tediousness is out of the question. Besides this, the Admiral writes in a thoroughly genial kindly and wholesome spirit. He never says ill-natured things, or brings railing accusations against any one. His tone is manly, easy, natural, and as breezy as an old seaman s should be. In these and other respects he has written quite a model autobiography."—New York Tribune.

NOTES IN SEASON.

JOHN WILEY & SONS announce "Elements of Wave Motion Relating to Light and Sound," by Col. P. S. Michie.

THE WORTHINGTON CO. have just ready "The Rector of St. Luke's," by Marie Bernhard, translated by Elise L. Lathrop, a story which deals largely with the terrible remorse and unhappiness of a highly gifted artist, whose life was ruined by a hasty, passionate, youthful deed.

HARPER & BROS. will publish at once the "Memoir of Laurence Oliphant and of Alice Oliphant, his wife," by Margaret Oliphant W. Oliphant. The work will be in two octavo volumes. They also announce "A Flying Trip Around the World, in seven stages," by Elizabeth Bisland, and "What to Eat—how to serve it," by Christine Terhune Herrick.

MACMILLAN & CO. will publish in June, "Renascence," a volume of verse, with illustrations by Walter Crane. In addition to the regular edition, a limited number of copies will be printed on Japanese paper. They have in press the second edition of "Philomythus, an antidote against credulity," by Dr. Abbott, devoted to a discussion of Cardinal Newman's "Essay on Ecclesiastical Miracles," with a new preface.

JOHN C. WINSTON & CO., Philadelphia, have ready "A Cyclopedia of Family Medicine, Surgery, Nursing and Hygiene," by Dr. Henry Hartshorne, intended for daily use in the preservation of health and care of the sick and injured. It contains plain descriptions of the human body, chapters on homes, climate, food, drink, intoxicants and narcotics, illustrated with eight colored plates and nearly three hundred wood-cuts, all arranged for ready reference, and suitable for physicians as well as for family use.

D. APPLETON & CO. announce a summer series of light reading, each volume to be of a small, convenient size, daintily bound in half cloth, with specially designed cover. The first volume of the series is "Tourmalin's Time Cheques," the new story by F. Anstey, author of "Vice Versa," "The Tinted Venus," "The Black Poodle," etc. This will be followed by a novelette by the Marquis of Lorne, entitled "From Shadow to Sunlight." Miss Beatrice Whitby, author of "The Awakening of Mary Fenwick," and Miss Kate Sanborn, are among the other authors who will be represented in this series.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY will have ready soon "Elizabeth of Roumania," by Blanche Roosevelt, with two portraits; "Di," a story by Squier L. Pierce; "Quita," by the author of "The County," in Lippincott's Series of Select Novels; "Diana Fontaine," a novel, by Algernon Ridgeway, in the American Novel Series; and a third edition, entirely rewritten, of "Tables for the Determination of Minerals," by Persifor Frazer, based on the system of Professor Dr. Albin Weisbach. They have just ready, "Early Days Recalled," by Janet Ross; a new edition of the "Memoirs of Lady Hamilton," and Rear Admiral Daniel Ammen's "The Old Navy and the New."

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & CO. have in hand for early publication the following: "Famous English Statesmen," by Sarah K. Bolton, with portraits; "A Score of Famous Composers," by Nathan Haskell Dole, with portraits; "The Jo Boat Boys," a book for boys, by Rev. J. F. Cowan, D.D., editor of Our Young People, illustrated by H. W. Peirce; "An Entire Stranger," a book for young people, by Rev. T. L. Baily, illustrated; "What Girls Can Do, or, thrown upon her own resources," a book for girls, by Jennie June (Mrs. Croly); "Led in Unknown Paths," a prize story for young people, by Anna F. Raffensperger, illustrated; "Half a Dozen Girls," a book for girls, by Anna Chapin Ray, author of "Half a Dozen Boys," illustrated; "Making the Most of Life," by Rev. J. R. Miller, author of "Silent Times;" "Doctor Lamar," a story, by a new author; "Elements of Socialism," by Prof. Richard T. Ely; and vols. 4 and 5 of "The Founding of the German Empire by William I.," by Heinrich von Sybel.

Of these birds, sixty-four portraits have been given. The descriptions are brief but trustworthy. The aim has been to furnish sufficient data to serve the purpose of identification, while avoiding the danger of confusion. The plates are reproductions of photographs of specimens mounted by an expert taxidermist, and are very good.

Green, T: Marshall. The Spanish conspiracy: a review of early Spanish movements in the Southwest. Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1891. c. 406 p. O. cl., $2.

Contains proofs of the intrigues of James Wilkinson and John Brown; of the complicity therewith of Judges Sebastian, Wallace and Innes; the early struggles of Kentucky for autonomy; the intrigues of Sebastian in 1795-7, and the legislative investigation of his corruption. These proofs consist of General Wilkinson's letters to Miro, the intendant of Louisiana; of the confidential communications of the latter to the court of Madrid; of the official despatch of Don Diego Gardoqui to the same court; of John Brown's own letters and proved utterances; of the testimony and sworn evidence of members of the Danville Conventions of July and November, 1788; of Sebastian's own confession; of the testimony of members of the legislative committee which investigated Sebastian's corruptions in 1806; of the sworn evidence of Daniel Clark and Thomas Power; of the subterfuges, suppressions, concealments and misstatements to which the conspirators resorted to hide their guilt, and of the tergiversations of all their adherents.

Grey, Maxwell, [pseud. for M. G. Tuttiett.] In the heart of the storm: a tale of modern chivalry. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 339 p. D. (Seaside lib., no. 1839.) pap., 30 c.

Guérin, Georges Maurice de. Journal; ed. by G. S. Trebutien; with a biographical and literary memoir by Sainte-Beuve; from the 20th French ed. by Jessie P. Frothingham. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1891.] c. tr. 6+193 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The early American translations of this work have been out of print for a number of years. The work is a classic in its way, appealing to the best minds. It is a volume of meditations and observations finding their inspiration in nature, in which all lovers of nature will rejoice. Maurice and Eugénie De Guérin are names which represent two most interesting figures in French literature. They were both the possessors of rare gifts. Maurice was a poet, but he accomplished little, as his life was so short. Born in 1810, he died in 1839 of consumption. Sainte-Beuve's biographical notice of Maurice precedes the "Journal." From these two sources his early life may be learned, his education for the Catholic priesthood, his renunciation of the church, etc.

Guthrie, F. Anstey. Tourmalin's time cheques. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. 192 p. S. cl., 50 c.

An amusing and original device somewhat like those employed in "Vice versa" and "The tinted Venus" is the basis of this story. It is supposed to take place on board the P. and O. ship Boomerang, returning home to England from Sydney. The hero, Mr. Peter Tourmalin, is an engaged man under thirty, whose intended, to test his love, has sent him away on a probationary sea voyage. His awe of his future wife, a hot morning, and a heavy breakfast with curry, with an unsuccessful attempt to concentrate his mind on Buckle's "History of civilization," are responsible for the ridiculous incidents which begin with the second chapter.

The author is rector of Grace Church. He discusses from many points of view—historical, critical, ecclesiastical, sectarian, social, etc.—the problem of church union in the United States, which is becoming more and more a "burning question" every day.

Ibsen, Henrik. [Prose dramas, v. 3.] Hedda Gabler: a drama in four acts; from the Norwegian, by Edmund Gosse. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] c. tr. 272 p. D. (Lovell's foreign literature ser., no. 10.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Mrs. Hedda Tesman, born Gabler, is a bad woman. From her first introduction, wearied and bored with the man she has married without feeling a spark of love for him, till the last scene, when she blows her brains out, there is nothing to admire in her. Her character, however, is well depicted, and the intrigues of which she is the centre admirably indicated. The drama introduces the reader to home life in Norway among the educated and rich.

Contents: Bimi; Namgay Doola: The recrudescence of Imray; Moti Guj, mutineer: The mutiny of the Mavericks; At the end of the passage; The incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney; The courting of Dinah Shadd; The man who was; A conference of the powers; On Greenhow hill; Without benefit of clergy. A little less than half of these tales have been printed in America before in book form. The present combination, with as many more new tales, was made by the author himself, who prepared the volume under the present name for the house publishing it. The paper by Henry James is, though critical, highly appreciative.

Macdonald, G: There and back. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1891.] 634 p. D. cl., $1.50; pap., 50 c.

A story dealing in a fresh and attractive manner with a familiar motive—an abducted child who is the heir to a noble name, his experiences and his return to his heritage. There is an undercurrent of strong, pure, manly and practical Christianity, which especially recommends all of Mr. Macdonald's books to young as well as old readers.

Nathusius, Marie. Elizabeth; from the German, by Mrs. M. A. Shryock. Phil., Porter & Coates, 1891. 493 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The heroine is descended from a long line of ancestors devoted to the "pietist" faith. She falls in love with a dashing young cuirassier, and marries him amid much opposition. She is wilful and obstinate, her husband proud, irritable and unforgiving. They have misunderstandings, and her family, by injudicious interference, almost bring about divorce. The wise old grandparents supply the needed common sense, and after many realistic sketches of matrimonial discord, Elizabeth grows older, wiser and happier.

"This small book is an attempt at a selection that shall be fairly representative of all the many classes of poems [contained in the Greek anthology] except those that, for obvious reasons, are untranslatable, and in every case the translator has aimed at literal fidelity to the original. To have imitated the Greek metres would have been a rash experiment in English, and even if successful would have been monotonous. It has therefore been deemed advisable to use, instead of metres familiar to the ancients, those familiar to ourselves."—Translator's preface.

Redgrave, Gilbert R. David Cox and Peter De Wint. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1891. 12+120 p. il. D. (Illustrated biographies of the great artists.) cl., $1.25.

Cox and De Wint were both English landscape painters, and both possessed a genuine love of nature in its many moods, which each interpreted as he saw it. David Cox was born near Birmingham, April 29, 1783, and Peter De Wint at Stone, in Staffordshire, on Jan. 21, 1784. About twenty pictures are reproduced of these artists' best efforts, and the details of their lives are given. They both made a strong impression on English art, which deepens as time goes on. Their methods and styles are also dilated upon.

The scene is Paris, the heroine an American girl who suddenly attains prominence in the most select circles. Her antecedents are supposed to have been people of rank; she seems actuated only by a desire to enjoy the social pleasures which the gay capital affords; ostensibly her purpose is to secure a husband of rank by means of ill-gotten American money. Her plan of action takes considerable time, involves intrigues, the fate of two pairs of lovers, and the honor of some of the characters. These latter are with the exception of "the fair American" Parisians of note and rank.

An expansion of two articles by the editor on the younger poets of America, which appeared in the N. Y. Independent, serves as an introduction to a most interesting compilation. Ninety American poets who have lived during the past sixty years, and thirty Canadian poets of the same period, are represented. Some have only one poem quoted from their works, others as high as twenty-five. The work was first published in England, and is, the compiler tells us, "an attempt to make English readers know something more of the bright young poets whose names they see in the great international magazines—The Century and Harper's."

Appendix contains authentic accounts of the results of the adoption of an eight hours day by various firms who have tried it, and an extensive bibliography upon the subject.

The introduction by his Grace the Duke of Beaufort shows riding as a fine art, only acquired by constant untiring practice. The chapters are devoted to riding to hounds, the saddle-horse, training the young horse, hints on horsemanship, hands and seat, race riding, the Colonial horse, and the early history of horsemanship. The second half of the book treats of polo, and gives a portrait of Major-Gen. J. F. Sherer, "the father" of this now popular sport. This part is written by J. Moray Brown, and contains ten chapters. An appendix gives lessons in riding, a bibliography of riding, and a full index.

Winter, W: Gray days and gold. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. c. '90. 353 p. T. cl., 75 c.
The title is explained in the author's preface. The book, he says, "relates to the gray days of an American wanderer in the British Islands, and to the gold of thought and fancy that can be found there." This "thought and fancy" is woven into twenty-four essays on the lakes and fells of Wordsworth, on Shakespeare relics at Worcester, on rambles in Arden, on the home of Dr. Johnson, the beauties of the Highlands, and Sir Walter Scott, etc., and kindred subjects. Under the title "At vesper time" are 13 poems.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 23, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proof and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

A CASE OF BRITISH PIRACY.

WE remember no exhibition of finer frenzy than that displayed by the English press on occasions when American pirates were guilty of depredations in the domains of British literature. Again and again have we winced at the invectives hurled across the ocean, or the Canadian border, at this or that mean trick performed by some one in "the States," without being able to do more in the way of defence than to caution our assailants not to be "righteous overmuch." But our caution was in vain. Somehow, the mote in our eye was always more plainly visible to our British brethren than the beam in their own eyes.

Some of us have been guilty of shabby tricks. No one has ever denied it; on the other hand many of us have done our honest best to prevent the wrong, and tried to make reparation as far as possible. Can our English friends say as much? Have they not rather assumed that the wrong was all on our side? If we are right as to the latter assertion, we recommend to the attention of our British critics the following, which for meanness beats the worst of which we have any knowledge; and we trust they will deal with the case as it deserves:

Some weeks ago a leading American publishing house received a request from Miss Margaret P. Murray, editor of the Young Canadian, a weekly magazine published in Montreal, for its sanction to her reprinting as a serial Mrs. ——'s story of "—— ——." She said, in her application, "We find in Canada that when a high-class paper takes up a story in this way, it gives an immediate impetus to the sale of the book, which we feel to be some recompense for the want of copyright. At the same time we should like to have your special permission to insert as we propose." To this the firm replied that for business reasons it must object to such serial publication of a popular story, and begged her to refrain from using it. This elicited a sarcastic and impertinent letter, from which we quote the following: "In view of the fact that we could have used it without consulting you if we had chosen, and of the fact that the refusal has come to us from a country that has lived all its life from piracy, and that has faced the question of copyright only when it has seen it for its own interest to do [so], your remarks about the 'moral rights of authors and publishers where they have no legal protection' have afforded us no little amusement." Of this letter the firm took no notice, and it has now received the following refreshing communication:

"Referring to our correspondence regarding our inserting certain stories of yours, and your refusal to grant us the permission asked, I beg to say that we may probably insert them without your permission, and that it would be much better for you to grant it and have full credit, like other high-class publishers in the United States, than to have us insert without your permission."

The Young Canadian Co. give as their references the names of several gentlemen prominent in political and business life in Canada, and the American firm is improving the occasion to send each of them a copy of Miss Murray's letter, that they may see the character of the Company to which they have given their endorsement.

DARWIN'S WORKS IN AMERICA.

A CONTRIBUTION TO BIBLIOGRAPHY.

IN the London Academy for April 4, in a review of Herbert Spencer's "Essays, scientific, political and speculative," the reviewer makes the following statement: "Mr. Herbert Spencer's Essays have long been accessible in three series, published at intervals between 1857 and 1874; and those who are curious in matters of bibliography must have noticed that they were printed from American types. The truth is that Mr. Spencer, like De Quincey, has been more honored during his lifetime in the United States than in his own country. It was otherwise with Darwin, not one of whose works, we believe, has ever been reprinted in America down to this day. Mr. Spencer wisely accepted the inevitable. Through the good offices of his friend, the late Prof. Youmans, he was not only able to derive some profit from the American sale, but also to import into the country of origin sheets printed from the American plates —a fact worthy of consideration in the present state of the copyright question."

The italics are ours. In the issue of the Academy for May 2, D. Hutcheson, of the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., calls the attention of the editor to the fact that 'as for Darwin's works, several have been printed and published in America; such as, for example, his 'Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication,' issued by Orange Judd & Co., of New York, in 1868." To which the editor replies: "With regard to Darwin, what we said was, 'not one of whose works, we believe, has ever been reprinted in America down to this day.' Our belief was, it appears, erroneous; but it still seems to us notable that our well-informed correspondent does not mention an American reprint of 'The Origin of Species.'"

For the information of The Academy, Mr. Hutcheson, and others who may have any doubts on the subject, we print below a bibliography of the works of Mr Darwin that have been reprinted in this country. Strange as it may appear to the Academy's reviewer, Mr. Darwin's works were also introduced into this country by the same person who receives such handsome credit at the reviewer's hands for the service done Mr. Spencer—namely, the late Prof. Youmans. Further, we may add that, at least for all of the editions issued by D. Appleton & Co., Mr. Darwin received fair remuneration. This is corroborated by a letter from Mr. Darwin to Prof. Asa Gray, through whom, by the way, the first royalty was paid to Mr. Darwin in May, 1860. The letter to Prof. Gray appears in "Life and Letters of Charles Darwin" (p. 104 American ed.), and begins as follows: "Again I have to thank you for one of your very pleasant letters of May 7, enclosing a very pleasant remittance of £22. I am in simple truth astonished at all the kind trouble you have taken for me. I return Appletons' account. For the chance of your wishing for a formal acknowledgment I send one. If you have any further communication to the Appletons, pray express my acknowledgment for [their] generosity; for it is generosity in my opinion. . . ."

The first entry of Darwin's works that we find is in Roorbach's "Catalogue of American Publications, 1820–1852." It is as follows:

DARWIN, Chas. Voyage of a Naturalist. 2 v. 12°. cl., 90c ..... Harper & Bros.

In James Kelly's "American Catalogue," v. 2, 1866–1871, is the following entry:

DARWIN, C. Variations of animals and plants under domestication. 2 v., 12°, cl., $6... O. Judd & Co., 1868.

In the "American Catalogue" of 1876, issued by this office, we find the following entries without dates:

In the first part of the "American Catalogue," 1884–1890, just issued, we note entries under Darwin of new and cheaper editions of his "Descent of Man," "Formation of Vegetable Mould," "Voyage in the Beagle," and the following new titles:

DARWIN, C: Rob. Structure and distribution of coral reefs. 3d. ed., with app. by T. G. Bonney. map and pl., 12°, $2..... Appleton, 18[illegible]

THE HUMOR OF BOOK-TITLES.

F. M. Crunden in the Library Journal.

LIBRARY assistants and salesmen in bookstores find considerable fun in the mistakes made in the titles of books and in their curious collocations.

The following are a few examples of humors and blunders noted by assistants in the St. Louis Public Library. If a careful record were kept, it would form a list of considerable length each month.

Some of the errors are in pronunciation, as the other day when a man called at the reading-room desk for the "Journal of Episcopal Research," meaning Psychical Research. Others are mistakes in authorship, as in case of the young lady who asked for "Looking Backward," by Rider Haggard. During the Exposition of 1887 there were several calls for "Faust," by Gabriel Max; and Maggie Mitchell's "Fanchon" is always in demand.

Occasionally there is a mixture or distortion of ideas, which leads to such calls as these: "I want one of Twist's books—Oliver Twist's;" or "Give me Dickens by Little Dorrit." Dickens is known as "Dickson" by a good many people who have just heard of him and decided to try one of his books.

Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter" has been, not unnaturally, called the "Red Letter." "The Lady with the Rubies" has her wealth put in too doubtful form by a slight transformation into "The Lady with the Carbuncles;" and "Thrown on the World" becomes "A Throne on the World."

A few days ago a little boy asked at the reading-room desk for the same magazine he had the evening before. He couldn't remember the name of it, but thought it was "St. Peters" (St. Nicholas). In this list must not be omitted the young lady who called for a life of Spenser, and on being asked if she meant Edmund Spenser, replied: "No, Herbert Spencer, the poet."

Messengers sent for books often make odd mistakes. For example, a boy says his mother "wants one of Roe's books. She don't want 'Haint Got Any Home'" ("Without a Home").

But the greater number of amusing errors are furnished by the written applications handed in. Here are some samples. "Saracinesca" appears as "Cyrus and Eska;" "Zoroaster" "Zodoroster;" "Youth's Companion" as panyum;" "English Engineer" as "Engulis Engunire;" "Century Magazine" makes another change to the "Sensury Magizine;" while "Harper's Monthly" is called for as "Hopper's Monthly" by some one who says he is "stopin' at the Thomson House." A little boy applies for a "Picher Bok;" and a man writes the title of the periodical he wants, "Punch T. Jones."

The regu ar phrase, "I want a nice book," has occasional variations, as, for example, "Something sad or exciting, but not a novel." It is a relief to attendants when the applicants have definite ideas of their wants, as was the case with two little girls about 11 or 12 years of age, who called for "The Bride of the Tomb" and "Wilful Pansy; or, The Bride of a Week." They were induced to make a third choice in Miss Alcott's "Little Women," but probably went away with a poor opinion of a public library that did not contain such important works as those they had called for.

ODDITIES BETWEEN BOOK COVERS.

A REPORTER of the Chicago Morning News recently interviewed W. B. Sizer, the result of which was an interesting article, from which we take the following:

"The second-hand book-dealer often plays a part in dramas more thrilling than those of the sort portrayed with the aid of colored lights and vanishing scenery on the stage.

"We often read in story-books—English publications mostly, because 'old libraries,' 'vast estates,' 'ancestral figures' are staple goods with the English novelists—of queer treasures, such as wills, priceless miniatures and other more or less costly trinkets, found in books where they had been placed for safekeeping years and years before and thus forgotten. That trick of finding a codicil hidden away in an old Bible has been worn out at the knees long since by sensational writers. Yet the habit of keeping things in books is one of the commonest offences of the race. It frequently amounts to a crime.

"An impecunious young man sold his little library, and the next day came rushing into Sizer's to get a photograph which he said had been left in a volume of poems. The books had already been sold.

"'Good heavens, what'll I do?' gasped the young man. 'That was my girl's picture, and what'll she say when she finds I haven't it?'

"He was given the address of the buyer of his poems, and when he left, going north on State Street, one might have played solitaire with two decks on his coat-tails.

"Countless little keepsakes are found in old books. Bookseller Sizer has a regular curiosity box full of them. Locks of hair—golden, black, red, brown and even gray—coiled and tied with ribbon or silk thread; pressed flowers, love-letters and even bank-notes; memoranda, valuable receipts and sometimes government bonds—all casually placed in books or hidden away by design and forgotten entirely by the owner. It goes a long way toward proving the oft-asserted fact that the possessors of libraries do not read their own books.

"In a batch of books bought for a song, and concealed between the leaves of a large report of some sort, Mr. Sizer came upon a pamphlet that was a rare treatise out of print and worth many times the price paid for all the books.

"Within five years he has found two wills, one of which had a subsequent history suitable for a plot for a modern society drama. One day last summer he was asked by the executor of the Jephson estate to call at the north side residence and invoice an old library. They were works worth little in these days, having been collected by Mrs. Jephson during long years of widowhood in the Western States, where her husband had died years ago, soon after acquiring considerable wealth in the mines. There were no children, and Mrs. Jephson had now died, leaving an estate of over $300,000. No will could be found, and the nearest relatives instituted proceedings before Judge Kohlsaat for the proper disposition of the property.

"The division of the property was thereupon about to be made in accordance with the order of court when a stranger, giving his name as Gardner, arrived from the West with what he represented as the last will and testament of Mrs. Jephson. The lawyers and the court both examined it with suspicion, but could find no flaw in the signature, which was remarkably like the signatures of Mrs. Jephson on documents already exhibited in court.

"Gardner claimed that his son had nursed the old lady through a serious illness some years before, and thus it was explained how out of gratitude she might have willed the bulk of her estate to the young man, as in this will. The document cunningly provided bequests for numerous relatives, of whom Mrs. Jephson often spoke in high terms in her Western home. With the appearance of Gardner and his will all the court proceedings were upset, and, as Gardner demanded his alleged rights under the law, there was nothing to do but give in to him.

"This was the time when the library was sold. In examining the books after he had them unloaded in his store Mr. Sizer discovered a will duly signed by Mrs. Jephson and attested by the proper number of witnesses. Without knowing of the court proceedings and the Gardner will, the bookseller took the document to the executor of the estate, and another bitter wrangle in court at once followed. Gardner had his witnesses, who testified to having seen Mrs. Jephson acknowledge their will, and he refused to back out. Officers were sent to Denver, and one of the witnesses whose name was signed to the last will was found and brought to Chicago. The will found in the book was dated earlier than the other, but, it being incontestably one of the deceased's wills, established a point from which to act. It was shown by that will that Mrs. Jephson was not in the same part of the country at the time when Gardner claimed she was, and therefore the court decided in favor of the will last found."

THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary at the Bible House, N. Y., last week, from the 13th to the 15th inst. The annual report showed that the issues for the seventy-fifth year of Bibles, Testaments and portions were 1,497,637, of which 524,096 were for foreign circulation. The issues of the Society for the seventy-five years of its existence amounted to 54,233,712 copies. The year's receipts were $512,388.18 for general purposes and $6484.75 for investment. The expenditures were $587,023.69.

THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.

THE twenty-sixth annual report of the National Temperance Society and Publication House, just published, fills an octavo pamphlet of nearly one hundred printed pages. The work of the Society has been quite active during the year. Eighty new publications were issued, making 1933 on the catalogue. There were 14,900 new volumes of Sunday-school books published, making in all 472,031 volumes, containing 130,457,026 pages, since the organization of the Society. The erection of a permanent building, with sufficient room for the transaction of business, is urged. Preparations that are being made for the World's Temperance Congress in Chicago, during the Columbian Exposition, are also detailed. The Treasurer reports the receipts, including the balance on hand last year of $111.20, to have been $54,561.38, and the expenditures $53,703 29 leaving a balance in cash of $858.09.

A WRINKLE FOR WINDOW DECORATION.

TRANSFERRING PRINTS TO GLASS.

EVERY one, nearly, understands the method of transferring decalcomania pictures, which are printed on a paper made specially for the purpose of transfer to glass. It is not so well known that almost any kind of a chromo or monotint lithoprint, or even a letterpress print, may be transferred. The process may be useful to many who might occasionally desire to ornament their shop windows in this way, and an account of it will show how semi transparent advertisement tablets for sticking on to glass may be produced readily and at small cost. We are indebted for the following details to the Lithographer and Printer, which states that by the method described any chromo, or any picture, print, or even clipping from newspapers, any engraving, no matter in how many colors, or on what kind of paper, may be transferred to glass by different treatment of the various kinds of paper.

Proceed in the following manner: Place the object to be transferred face downward upon a larger sheet of manilla paper, prepare a solution of from one to three per cent. of nitric acid in water, according to thickness and strength of paper and how strong it was sized; ordinary newspapers and printings or engravings on unsized glaze paper require even less than one per cent. nitric acid. One of the purposes of adding nitric acid is to remove the sizing out of the paper. This solution apply with a sponge to the back of your object to be transferred. Be careful not to overdo it—you only want to render the paper soft, but not wet. Continue sponging with this solution until you see the printing plainly; that is, until the paper becomes quite transparent.

Laying down the paper, first adjust the right-hand upper corner to the mark on the plate, hold it there with the tip of your finger, and adjust the left hand lower corner, but be careful to avoid air bubbles. The practical printer and lithographer, of course, does not need this advice, but to the amateur it is very valuable.

To prepare the glass for transferring, proceed as follows: Clean the glass plate thoroughly with alcohol by means of a ball of clean cotton. Dry it well. Wash it with turpentine. Dry it off again. Place the glass plate upon a smooth elastic layer (for instance, flannel), and with this elastic layer upon a table—or, better yet, upon a rubber blanket—in the litho. hand-press. Now coat the cleaned surface with a thin coat of half turpentine and half Damar varnish; let it dry from ten minutes to one day, according to temperature and thickness of Damar varnish. The coating should not be allowed to dry entirely, it should be a trifle sticky (adhesive). Lay your impression face downward upon the glass plate: it is important that neither acid nor water touch the surface during the entire process. To properly lay down the impression, take it up with both hands by holding the left-hand under corner and the right-hand upper corner; be careful not to get any air bubbles under the sheet. This is best accomplished by marking upon the plate the exact position and size of the sheet, viz.:

Press the sheet to the adhesive Damar coat—this may be done in many different manners. It does not require a very strong pressure, but it should be observed that each and every spot has to be pressed repeatedly against the plate. We advise the use of a small rubber ruler, or a blotter ruler, or any similar instrument; you may also use the hand, but of course, not with such safety; or a dabber of cotton or rags, or an ivory paper folder. When the paper sticks quite smoothly to the plate, fan it perfectly dry, and then, with wet finger-tips, slowly rub off the paper. If this is done with great care, you will remove every vestige of paper, and the print, of whatever color or nature it may be, will remain on the glass plate. Upon this apply another coat of Damar varnish containing very little turpentine (with too much turpentine you run the risk of washing the entire picture from the plate again). If all our rules are followed a splendid picture will be obtained, which can be washed and cleaned with water the same as a window as often as desired, and the transfer will not be injured thereby. Such a picture will be visible from outside of the glass, day and night, the same as any glass-painting.

COMMUNICATIONS.

DEMAND FOR GOOD AND NEAT BOOKS.

CAZENOVIA, N. Y., May 14, 1891.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

DEAR SIR: The Messrs. Harpers' edition of Mr. Howells' "Criticism and Fiction" is an exquisite little specimen of American bookmaking, and it leads to the thought, "Would not a series of select novels of the same size, and printed in the same tasteful manner, meet with popular approval?"

Mr. David Douglass' Edinburgh edition of "American Authors," much the same size and style, in neat paper covers, has met a large sale on the other side.

There are doubtless too many novels published, and many of them are cheap and nasty in every sense of the word. My experience and observation as a retail bookseller is that the people desire not only good books, but neat and tasteful books, at fair prices, and we [illegible] would have the satisfaction (possibly nothing more) of doing good work in our line.

Now that we are to have International Copyright, can't we be honest all around?

Very respectfully, WM. WATKINS.

OBITUARY.

CHARLES W. BROWN.

CHARLES W. BROWN, for many years manager of the educational department of the publishing house of D. Appleton & Co., and recently connected with the American Book Company of New York died of pneumonia at his home, 211 West 122d Street, New York, May 19. He was born in Oswego County, N. Y., June 5, 1838. He received his early education in the common schools of his native county, and at the age of nineteen entered the academy at Homer, N. Y. After a year's study there he decided to make the profession of teaching his life-work, and engaged to teach a district school during the winter of 1858 at East Homer. He returned to the academy to complete his studies, and then entered the State Normal School at Albany. Having received a State certificate, he went to Queens County and again took up the work of teaching. After two years in the schools there, he was elected School Commissioner of that county and served one term. At this time he received an offer from A. S. Barnes & Co. to represent their school-book interests in New York State, which he accepted. He held this position until 1868, when he was engaged by D. Appleton & Co., with whom he remained until May, 1890. During the fourteen years of his connection with D. Appleton & Co. Mr. Brown held the responsible position of manager of their extensive educational business, which he conducted with marked ability and success. For the past year, and to the time of his death, he held a position of trust in the American Book Company, which absorbed the educational publications of D. Appleton & Co. Mr. Brown leaves a wife and two sons.

CAPT. JOHN WHITNEY, U. S. A., who died in New York City last week, was at one time quite well known in Boston and New England book-trade circles. He had been connected with Ticknor & Fields at the "Old Corner," with Little, Brown & Co., and with his uncle, George H. Whitney, of Providence, R. I. Later he was associated with Rickey & Carroll, of Cincinnati, O. On the breaking out of the Civil War he enlisted from Ohio, and served during the whole of the war, rising to the rank of Captain. He was own cousin to Howard, Benjamin and Thos. B. Ticknor—his father and W. D. Ticknor having married the Holt sisters.

OLD BOOK CHAT.

THE following note has been circulated: "The Latin-American Department of the World's Columbian Exposition is very anxious to obtain information concerning a copy of a little quarto published in Rome in 1493, containing the important bull of Pope Alexander VI. by which he divided the New World between Portugal and Spain. Only two copies of this pamphlet are in existence so far as can be ascertained. One is in the Royal Library at Munich. The other was sold in London at auction by Puttick & Simpson, auctioneers, on the 24th of May, 1854, and was bought by Obadiah Rich for 4 pounds 8 shillings, for some private library in the United States which he declined to name. It has entirely disappeared from the knowledge of bibliophiles, and no trace of it can be found. Any person having knowledge of the whereabouts of this historical treasure will be kind enough to notify the Department of State, Washington, D. C."

A MODEST dealer in autographs prints the following in his catalogue:

> Four years' work in conducting the largest autograph business ever done in this country has taught me something about autographs. With one exception I may claim to be the only dealer who has any expert knowledge as to the comparative rarity and value of autographs. In buying at sales I buy as carefully as if buying for myself, and do not pay the crazy prices which have recently been made by ignorant buyers. It is a doubtful question of policy whether a book or print dealer who knows little or nothing of autograph values should solicit commissions at sales on the pretence that he has full knowledge. They are paid for exercising judgment and discrimination which they do not possess. Experience alone can give it, and they have not had such experience. So long as wealthy buyers foolishly trust unlimited bids in the hands of such dealers, just so long will ridiculously high prices be paid at sales. It creates false values and will hurt the desire for collecting.

"Experience" after "four years" is a rather large term to use. The most remarkable thing in connection with the little sermon above is that its author has been the chosen medium of these "wealthy buyers," who have paid high prices for rare autographs. I showed the paragraph to another dealer, who laughed and said: "Poor little man! I was buying autographs years ago, when he was penny-a-lining!" After all the pen is a dangerous weapon in the hands of an excitable young person. BIBLIOPHILUS.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

IN the June number of Harper's Magazine, Walter Besant will begin a series of articles on London.

A REVIEW of the Nicolay-Hay biography of Lincoln, extending over thirty pages, has been written by Carl Schurz for the June number of the Atlantic.

THE greater part of the April number of Nord und Süd is taken up with the first instalment of the long-promised journal kept by Ferdinand Lassalle in 1840, when he was in his sixteenth year. Paul Lindau furnishes the introduction. The journal, so far as published, does not add much to our knowledge of the German Socialist; on the contrary, it presents simply the picture of a snappish, ill-bred youth. It appears that his name originally was Lassal, and that he Frenchified it by adding a final le in 1846, while living in France.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MARK TWAIN will sail for Europe on June 6, to settle in France for three years.

MISS OLIVE SCHREINER will shortly contribute to the Illustrated London News a number of illustrated letters on life in South Africa.

MARION CRAWFORD contributes to the May number of the Home Maker the initial chapters of a new novel, "The Three Fates," the scene of which is laid in New York.

MRS. EDMUND RUSSELL, the Delsartian champion, will shortly publish a book entitled "Yawning," which will take up the various phases of grace, vibrations, the breath and kindred topics.

Her "Delsartian Scrap-Book" has reached its sixth edition.

PROF. WIGGINS, the weather prophet, has written a story entitled "Jack Shuehard, or, life on Jupiter." One of its objects will be to prophesy "what the people of the earth will be like politically religiously and educationally at the end of the next twenty millions of years."

JOHN CURTIS, JR., of Philadelphia, is said to be engaged on a work pertaining to the Revolution, in which his aim is "to rescue, so far as may be, the countless documents, manuscripts and records which are scattered here and there throughout the country in private hands, so that they will not be permanently lost, and so that a more accurate knowledge of the springs that move men and events and the truth about all those things which were done shall be set forth."

BUSINESS NOTES.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—H. H. Otis, who has been located in the book business at 288 Main Street for nearly thirty-four years, and who enjoys the reputation of being one of the oldest and most popular booksellers in western New York, has just finished a complete renovation of the interior of his store. It has been refurnished and redecorated throughout, the old shelving replaced by handsome oak bookcases, and those in which books in fine bindings are kept are provided with plate glass doors. New and ornamental counters extend down both sides of the store, and at the end of each is a high square case, with books on four sides. These cases are quite a novelty, holding about 1200 volumes and taking up very little floor space. The front counters are occupied by showcases for fine stationery and leather goods. All the wood-work is of quarter-cut oak, antique finish. The ceiling and side walls are decorated in terra-cotta shades which harmonize with the oak furniture. Mr. Otis is to be congratulated on the great improvements made.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—In the fire in the Mohawk block, May 18, James Douglass, bookseller, sustained a heavy loss, only partly insured. The total loss on the block is estimated at half a million dollars.

NEW YORK CITY.—Chas L. Webster & Co. have removed from 3 East 14th Street to 67 Fifth Avenue—the recent temporary quarters of the Mercantile Library.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The correct address of The Penn Publishing Co. is 1020 Arch Street.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

THE PRATT INSTITUTE LIBRARY, Brooklyn, N. Y., has issued a unique catalogue of books suitable for children under fourteen years. In the introduction the compiler says the object of this list is to introduce to the young ones "some friends whose acquaintance they will find desirable. These friends, some of them take us back to the days when people first began to make up stories with which to please themselves, stories about trees, and clouds, and the ocean, and the air. We call these stories myths. Later on came the great Homer, whose language was Greek, and later still, Virgil, who wrote in Latin. These writers lived before the time of Christ. Several hundred years after Christ came the age of chivalry, in which knights and pages flourished. In our list we find a number of books telling about the people of that time, and about their lives and adventures. Then followed the days of the Italian poet Dante, and of the English Chaucer. The greatest writer of the next age was Shakespeare. Leaving the age of Shakespeare, we take a long stride, and reach the days of our modern writers, so that we travel, in reading our books, from the ages long ago, before the time of Christ, down to the days in which we now live." This is the scope of the list. Under the headings Myths, Homer to Pericles, Pericles to Virgil, Virgil to Age of Chivalry, Dante to Shakespeare, and Shakespeare to the Present are given brief explanatory notes and the titles of from six to a dozen books on the subject. Under the heading Present are given about one hundred books selected with excellent discrimination. Under the heading General, are given about twenty-five books. The catalogue itself is home-made, having been "printed" by a typewriter and "bound" with two McGill fasteners. The lists are printed on colored sheets representing the colors of the prism as nearly as they could be obtained in the material used, arranged in the order in which they occur in the prism. "Each color represents a period in the history of literature, the object being to associate the time and its writers with a color, as an aid to the memory." The catalogue is further made attractive by the insertion of four mounted photographs of Homer, Virgil, Dante and Shakespeare. The catalogue is a happy idea, and certain to attract children. A list on domestic economy for girls and one on manual training for boys is in preparation.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

DAVID NUTT will publish shortly a translation in verse by Grant Allen of the "Attis" of Catullus.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS are going to publish "the hundred books" recommended by Sir John Lubbock, and have made a beginning with "Herodotus" in Cary's translation.

COUNT ANGELO DE GUBERNATIS, the well-known Italian author, has just issued a "Dictionnaire International des Ecrivains du Jour." The book contains the biographies of 9152 contemporary authors, with complete lists of their works.

METHUEN & Co. will publish at once the work by Hannah Lynch, announced some time ago, entitled "George Meredith: a study." It will be issued in two editions, the one which is limited containing a photogravure portrait of Mr. Meredith.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have just ready, "Riding," a new volume of The Badminton Library. It contains chapters on Riding by Capt. Robert Weir, and on Polo by J. Moray Brown, and is illustrated with eighteen full-page [illegible]tes and forty vignettes from drawings by [illegible] J. S. Allan and G. D. Giles.

THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO. will publish in the first week of June the second part of the valuable Muret's "Encyclopædic Dictionary of the English and German Languages." Dealers who desire this work must place their orders at once, as no copies will be sent unless ordered. Part 2 and succeeding issues are not returnable.

HENRY FROWDE, London, will issue at once the "Guide-Book to Books," by Mr. Sargant and Mr. Bernhard Whishaw. The total number of books on all subjects recommended in the "Guide" is about six thousand. It is arranged by subjects, and gives, in addition to the titles of books, the prices, and in many cases brief descriptive notes.

AN enigmatical despatch from London, May 19, states that "the Attorney-General, referring to the Copyright bill, writes that the results of intellectual labors, whether of an author or of a mechanic, ought to be protected. The Solicitor-General has written a letter giving a strong opinion in favor of a measure for protecting English labor against unfair treatment by the American Copyright law."

AT the Niagara County Sunday-School Convention held at Lockport, N. Y., May 15, a controversy arose over books proper to be incorporated in a Sunday-school library. It was decided that the works of the late Rev. E. P. Roe were not fit for circulation from that source. Mrs. Holmes' works were also put under the ban. This will be a surprise to the many who were under the delusion that if Mr. Roe had a mission at all it was to cater to patrons of the Sunday-school library.

C. N. CASPAR, 437 E. Water Street, Milwaukee, Wis., has still on hand about 250 copies of his "Directory of the American Book, News and Stationery Trade and Kindred Branches of the U. S. and Canada." It is desirable that these remaining copies be taken up as soon as possible, in order that Mr. Caspar may see his way clear to preparing a new edition for publication two years hence. The deficit thus far is over $4000, which of course would be partly reduced if all the copies now on hand were sold. Besides the actual loss of money, Mr. Caspar has looked for and received no compensation whatever for the enormous amount of labor and the time he put into the undertaking. Impressed with the usefulness of his work, and trusting that it would meet with the support it deserved, he was quite prepared to make a sacrifice of time and labor that would have brought him better return in his bookstore. But to this his sacrifice ought to be limited, and he ought to be upheld so that his loss in money may be reduced to a minimum. As his Directory, with all its faults, will for some years to come be fully worth the price asked for it, every member of the trade not yet supplied with a copy should consider it a point of honor to subscribe at once.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers as a guarantee of good faith.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis, will find it to their advantage to put after their firm name the word [Cash].

A CYCLOPEDIA OF FAMILY MEDICINE, SURGERY, NURSING & HYGIENE

FOR DAILY USE IN THE PRESERVATION OF HEALTH AND CARE OF THE SICK AND INJURED.

Containing plain description of the parts of the human body and their uses; chapter on "Our Homes," Climate, Food and Drink, use of Intoxicants and Narcotics; special chapters giving important information for every woman. With clear and full information for assisting the skilful efforts of the doctor and for the treatment of accidents and disease. Arranged for ready reference to enable one to do instantly what can and ought to be done in emergencies to relieve suffering or save life.

BY HENRY HARTSHORNE, A.M., M.D., LL.D.,

Formerly Professor of Hygiene in the University of Pennsylvania, and Professor of Physiology and Diseases of Children in the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania; author of "Our Homes;" "Essentials of Practical Medicine;" "A Conspectus of the Medical Sciences;" Editor of the American Edition of "Reynolds' System of Medicine;" etc., etc.

WITH EIGHT COLORED PLATES AND NEARLY THREE HUNDRED WOOD-CUT ILLUSTRATIONS.

From D. Hayes Agnew, M.D., LL.D., Philadelphia, Surgeon to President Garfield.
"Anything which Dr. Hartshorne writes will always attract attention, and I know of no book on popular medicine comparable in value to this work."

From Theophilus Parvin, M.D., LL.D., Professor of "Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children," Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Pa.
"'Hartshorne's Cyclopedia of Family Medicine' is, in my opinion, an excellent and will prove a most useful work. I do not see how a better one relating to the subjects embraced in it could have been written."

From Thomas Chase, M.A., Litt.D., LL.D. — "Dr. Hartshorne has a peculiar talent for making a Cyclopedia of this kind. His medical knowledge is exact and comprehensive, and his judgment unerring. The book ought to be in every family in this country."

From Walter Lindley, M.D., President Medical Society of State of California.
"Dr. Hartshorne is one of the most noted physicians in Philadelphia, and his works occupy a place in almost every doctor's library. This book will prove a great blessing to every family that may possess it. No equal to it has ever been published."

Issued in one large octavo volume of 943 pages, with 283 engravings on wood, and 8 full-page colored plates. Price, in very handsome cloth, $4; in full morocco, $5.

FROM THE PRESS

OF

T. B. PETERSON & BROTHERS,

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

T. B. Peterson & Brothers would call the attention of their customers and all other book dealers to the fact that they are now publishing a number of cloth and paper-covered books in attractive style, including a series of 25 cent, 50 and 75 cent novels in paper covers, making them large books for the money, and bringing them before the reading public by liberal advertising. They are new and cheap editions of the works of the most popular American and foreign writers, and are presented in an attractive style, printed from legible type, on good paper, especially adapted for all bookstores and for general reading, hotel news stands, and railroad sales, and are furnished at such a low price that they will meet with a ready sale wherever shown and properly introduced.

Among the authors are Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth, Mrs. A. S. Stephens, Mrs. Lee Hentz, Mrs. F. H. Burnett, Mrs. Van Loon, Emile Zola, Alex. Dumas, Henri Greville, John Habberton, George Sand, T. A. Trollope, etc.

We shall be glad to receive your orders, as you can sell a large number of our popular and fast selling books, if you keep an assortment of them on hand to show your customers; which will be supplied at very low discounts.

Dealers sending us standing orders for our new books will have a liberal supply of show-bills and circulars sent them, and they are requested to send us the names of all newspapers and magazines in their vicinity, suitable to advertise in. (Do this at once, and oblige)

JUST READY:

The Co-operative Index to Periodicals for 1890.

This work is a key to the contents of nearly one hundred representative magazines and periodicals published in the English language in the United States and Great Britain. It has been prepared by W: I. Fletcher, of Amherst College (the editor of Poole's Index), who has had the co-operation of nearly forty members of the American Library Association.

To the literary worker its value can hardly be overestimated ; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field ; to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time ; and to the bookseller it is of the greatest practical value, as it enables him to look up at once any inquiries for magazine articles, no matter how the question is asked.

Now issued as an annual, the index to the whole year being in one alphabet, by title of article or subject, supplemented by an author index, the work has reached its most complete stage of development.

The price has been fixed at $2.50 in half morocco, $2.00 in paper.

CASSELL PUBLISHING COMPANY, 104 and 106 Fourth Avenue, New York.

Messrs. LAIRD & LEE take pleasure in announcing to the Trade their NEWEST PUBLICATIONS.

Out this Month, the following GEMS in Make-up, Illustrations and Contents.

1. Queen of the Woods, by Amand Fauquet, a magnificent volume of 255 pp., with 32 full-page half-tone engravings by famous artists. This book, as pure in conception as it is lovely in style and make-up, may be placed in the hands of all. The story has the charm of George Eliot's very best efforts. Price, 50 cents.
2. Mademoiselle Giraud, my Wife, by Adolphe Belot, treats of one of the most terrible moral dangers which assail young girls when confided to indifferent boarding-schools. The tale is truthful, powerful and dramatic. The book is gotten up with a luxury of illustrations never equalled in this country. It is a large 8°, printed on supercalendered paper and with a unique cover of hand-made paper, with untrimmed edges. It is the literary sensation of the year, in every respect. Price, $1.00.
3. Mauprat; or, The Bandit Nobleman, by George Sand, the great French authoress, whose renown grows with years. 241 pp. on fine paper, hand-sewed, and with ten illustrations from original etchings. This enthralling story has been translated into every civilized language. It is most excellent reading for all, and a treasure in every library. Price, 50 cents.

Our "Library of Choice Fiction" (50 cents per volume) holds its own among the Best Books out this year.

Lawrence L. Lynch contributes his thrilling stories: The Lost Witness; Shadowed by Three; Madeline Payne.
William H. Thomes has given his exciting works: A Gold Hunter's Adventures; A Whaleman's Adventures on Sea and Land; The Bushrangers.
Theophile Gautier's Mademoiselle de Maupin, and Alexandre Dumas, Fils', Camille, are works of universal fame.
H. de Balzac counted his Les Chouans among his greatest books, and P. Merimee's Chronicle of the Reign of Charles IX. is a fine historical novel.
Guy de Maupassant, one of the leaders of present French literature, furnishes us two capital stories: Pierre and Jean and Notre Cœur.
Edmond and Jules de Goncourt's masterly study, A Life's Deceit; Albert Delpit's poignant tale, Such is Life.
Lieut. Alvarado M. Fuller, U. S. N., has struck the keynote of the moment with his A.D. 2000; while Ernest Wichert represents worthily German fiction with his great book, The Youngest Brother.

Our "Library of Realistic Fiction" (25 cents per volume) contains the most famous works of the kind.

Emile Zola, and his series of novels entitled, The Fortune of the Rougons, The Rush for the Spoil, Abbé Mouret's Transgression, A Love Episode, Nana, Pot-Bouille (Piping-hot), The Ladies' Paradise, The Joys of Life, Nana's Brother (Germinal), La Terre, A Dream of Love, Human Brutes, Money (the great success of the season, and the only desirable translation out), also, Nana's Brother.
Count Lyof Tolstoi's great books: The Kreutzer Sonata, The Romance of Marriage, Labor (Toil).
George Moore, the leading English novelist of the day, with An Actor's Wife and A Modern Lover.
Alexander Dumas (fils) with the world-famed Clémenceau Case, and Alphonse Daudet, with his splendid book, Sappho.
Geo. W. M. Reynolds' captivating works: The Mysteries of the Court of Queen Elizabeth, Ada Arundel and Olivia.

Our "Pastime Series" (25 cents per volume) includes:

Bertha M. Clay's novels, Mrs. M. E. Holmes' novels, Edward R. Roe's books, the best of the Duchess' novels, and such books as General Booth's Darkest England, F. C. Valentine's Gotham and the Gothamites, Henry Greville's Wayward Dosia, George Ohnet's Peter's Soul, Nye and Riley's Fun, Wit, Humor, etc.

Don't Forget

Our Pinkerton Detective Series (25 cents per volume). Every book is a complete exposition of some real crime, which has been traced by some eminent operatives in the secret service.

From "Paris of To-day." (Copyright, 1891, by Cassell Publishing Co.)

Reading for the Country.

"And what is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days."

And with them come the longing to be in the country, to wander through the fresh clover, to rest under the shade of spreading trees and feast the eyes with the opening buds and blossoms, to lie on the cool green turf by the side of babbling brooks, or to seek the dim solitudes of forests, and for a time forget the troubles of business, the heartaches and disappointments that enter into all lives, and to find rest in new scenes, and consolation in the sweet unconscious ministrations of nature.

There is a witchery in these "perfect days," which makes vagabonds and Bohemians of the best regulated natures. The brilliant sunshine, the blue and tinted skies, the warm caressing air, the perfume of flowers which meets us on all sides even in the crowded city, stir the latent poetry that is to be found in the hearts of the least imaginative. Money seems but dross, and we have it in us to envy the tramp who basks in the park in the noonday sun, soothed by the music of the tinkling fountain. It is well all may have a share in these "perfect days"—from the millionaire to the pale little shop-girl — for mankind rebels wickedly against the restraints of necessity when they will not permit him to rejoice with the beautiful outside world, gay and glad in its holiday attire.

Guide books and maps are generally in order in June. Now is the time each one plans what he or she will do during the hot summer months. Routes are laid out and expenses computed, and trunks, big and small, dragged from their winter refuge, to be near at hand for packing.

We would like to assist in the packing of these trunks by placing some books or a book in each one of them, and thus assuring their owners the certainty of many additional hours of unalloyed pleasure—hours which often become wearisome even amid the most charming haunts of nature, for nature is capricious and changeable. It is singular that with the immense amount of articles thought necessary, even for the briefest absence from home, books are rarely considered. Indeed, if by chance a few are selected to accompany the traveller, they are generally at the last moment found to be the one thing too much for the elastic "Saratoga." One cannot do without the thousand extravagances of the toilet, without bonbons, without laces and ruffles and jewels—but books may always be borrowed. Such is the philosophy of a large majority of those who fill our summer resorts. Now do not depend on borrowing a book from a friend but buy your own books, and revel in the delight of anticipation and the joy of possession. Allow yourself the exquisite pleasure, for it is such, of visiting a convenient book-store, and of seeing and examining all the new books that cultured people are reading and discussing. Buy one of these books for some reason; it really does not matter a great deal what the reason is, as long as there is a purpose in the buying, whether it is for simple unadulterated entertainment or to obtain information. Learn the fascination of cutting leaves for yourself, and breathing the atmosphere of fresh print, and clean, sweet-smelling pages. We have seen a twenty-five cent novel, because it could be borrowed, go from hand to hand in the country house until the pages scarcely held together, and so dog-eared and dirty that the dust-heap, its final destination, seemed disgraced by it; and yet dainty fingers did not hesitate to handle it—fingers that sparkled with diamonds and would have shrunk from touching a hand half as soiled. This haphazard reading brings neither pleasure nor profit, and often is a sad blot upon the picturesque figure the beautiful reader imagines she is presenting. Take our advice and think a little about what you would like to read before you lock your trunk. Perhaps you have been seeking time all through the winter in a busy life to read a biography of some one of your ideals; perhaps you have a fancy to know flowers or birds a little more intimately than as a mere admirer; perhaps your fad is tennis, or boating, or fencing, or rowing; or perhaps you enjoy a novel simply because it is a novel; because its ideal presentment of life is a rest after the commonplace that is the general lot. Why not plan to indulge one of these desires, or all of them? Books are written on all subjects, and no matter how well posted you may think yourself there is always something still to learn. And how much cheaper for mind and purse to buy a good novel, than to borrow a trashy one.

Readers are referred to our lists to make their selections. They will find under "The New Novels" the cream of recent fiction. There are so many excellent novels among them, that it seems invidious to select any one or two for special mention. All the favorite writers of this particular class of literature have turned out new works during the year. Crawford offers two new novels. Kipling is represented by a half dozen volumes of his original stories. Mrs. Alexander, "The Duchess," Adeline Sergeant, Fenn, Fawcett, Rider Haggard, Howells, James, Bret Harte, and Harold Frederic, are names that carry a certainty of enjoyment, and they all appear on one or more title pages. "Description and Travel" embraces books of this class written within a year. There seems to have been a special charm in Alaska and Africa for the American travellers, as many of the volumes have these strongly contrasting countries for their subjects. But few parts of the globe have been neglected by enterprising investigators. Life under many skies is brought before readers by graphic writers. Manuals for out-door sports and exercises are still on the increase, and new methods for increasing or reducing the flesh or improving the muscle are plentiful. We have quoted the very latest.

The evening is generally a trying time in the country. People brought together through accident, and, very frequently, only for a short time, are not apt to have many thoughts in common. Conversation consequently languishes, and to kill the time, cards, round games, charades, proverbs, and so on, are resorted to, and grow in popularity each year. It would seem as if nothing new could be written about whist, but there are several fresh little books on the subject; also on other card-games, parlor theatricals and various other means for promoting sociability at the summer resort.

Botany and ornithology have been so popularized and simplified, that old or young may derive pleasure from any of the latest works in this field. They are delightful companions for the traveller, increasing his joys as they add to his knowledge. We place our riches at the feet of the prospective tourist, and beg him to make his choice. Whether it be a guide-book out of the almost innumerable ones to all parts of Europe and America, which our lists offer him, or a paper novel for his gripsack, he carries with them our best wishes for new life and health and strength, wherever or however sought, "in the leafy month of June."

SUMMER.

A FRAGMENT.

From Winter's "Gray Days and Gold." (Macmillan.)

High on the crest of the blossoming grasses,
  Bending and swaying with face toward the sky,
Stirred by the lightest west wind as it passes,
  Hosts of the silver-white daisy-stars lie!

I, looking up through the mists of the flowers,
  I, lying low on the earth thrilled with June,
Give not a thought to the vanishing hours,
  Save that they melt into twilight too soon!

Blossoms of peaches float down for my cover—
  Snowflakes that blushed to be kissed by the sun—
Blossoms of apples drift over and over,
  White they with grief that their short day is done!

Buttercup's lanterns are lighted about me,
  Burly red clover's warm cheek presses mine;
Powdery bee never once seems to doubt me,
  Tipping each chalice for Summer's new wine!

Tiny white butterflies ("Brides" children name them)
  Flicker and glimmer, and turn in their flight;
Surely the sunshine suffices to tame them,
  Close to my hand they will swing and alight!

Small timid breezes, than butterflies shyer,
  Just for a moment soft buffet my face,
Then fly away to the tree-tops and higher,
  Shaking down shadows o'er every bright space.

A Unique Corner of the Earth.

From Warner's "Our Italy." (Harper.)

THE United States has here, then, a unique corner of the earth, without its like in its own vast territory, and unparalleled, so far as I know in the world. Shut off from sympathy with external conditions by the giant mountain ranges and the desert wastes, it has its own climate unaffected by cosmic changes. Except a tidal-wave from Japan, nothing would seem to be able to affect or disturb it. The whole of Italy feels more or less the climatic variations of the rest of Europe. All our Atlantic coast, all our interior basin from Texas to Manitoba, is in climatic sympathy. Here is a region larger than New England which manufactures its own weather and refuses to import any other.

With considerable varieties of temperature according to elevation or protection from the ocean breeze, its climate is nearly as agreeable as that of the Hawaiian Islands, though pitched in a lower key, and with greater variations between day and night. The key to its peculiarity, aside from its southern exposure, is the Colorado Desert.

Only ten miles away on the east the summers are the hottest and only sixty miles on the west the coolest known in the United States (except on this coast) and between them is every combination that mountains and valleys can produce.

Taking People's Advice.

From Jerome's "Diary of a Pilgrimage." (Holt.)

I THINK it is always right to take other people's advice in matters where they know more than you do. It is the experience of those who have gone before that makes the way smooth for them who follow. So, after supper, I got together the things I had been advised to take with me, and arranged them on the bed, adding a few articles I had thought of all by myself.

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF RIVERSIDE.

From Warner's "Our Italy." (Copyright, 1891, by Harper & Brothers.)

I put up plenty of writing paper and a bottle of ink, along with a dictionary and a few other books of reference, in case I should feel inclined to do any work while I was away. I always like to be prepared for work; one never knows when one may feel inclined for it. Sometimes when I have been away, and have forgotten to bring any paper and pens and ink with me, I have felt so inclined for writing; and it has quite upset me that, in consequence of not having brought any paper and pens and ink with me, I have been unable to sit down and do a lot of work, but have been compelled, instead, to lounge about all day with my hands in my pockets.

Accordingly, I always take plenty of paper and pens and ink with me now, wherever I go, so that when the desire for work comes to me I need not check it.

That this craving for work should have troubled me so often, when I had no paper, pens, and ink by me, and that it never, by any chance, visits me now, when I am careful to be in a position to gratify it, is a matter over which I have often puzzled.

But when it does come I shall be ready for it.

I also put on the bed a few volumes of Goethe, because I thought it would be so pleasant to read him in his own country. And I decided to take a sponge, together with a small portable bath, because a cold bath is so refreshing the first thing in the morning.

B. came in just as I had got everything into a pile. He stared at the bed and asked me what I was doing. I told him I was packing.

"Great heavens!" he exclaimed. "I thought you were moving! What do you think we are going to do — camp out?"

"No," I replied. "But these are the things I have been advised to take with me. What is the use of people giving you advice if you don't take it?"

He said:

"Oh! take as much advice as you like; that always comes in useful to give away. But, for goodness sake, don't get carrying all that stuff about with you. People will take us for gypsies."

I said:

"Now, it's no use your talking nonsense. Half the things on this bed are life-preserving things. If people go into Germany without these things, they come home and die."

And I related to him what the doctor and the vicar and the other people had told me, and explained to him how my life depended upon my taking brandy and blankets and sunshades and plenty of warm clothing with me.

He is a man utterly indifferent to danger and risk — incurred by other people — is B. He said:

"Oh, rubbish! You're not the sort that catches a cold and dies young. You leave that co-operative store of yours at home, and pack up a toothbrush, a comb, a pair of socks and a shirt. That's all you'll want."

A FEW THINGS WHICH ARE INDISPENSABLE.

From "Diary of a Pilgrimage." (Holt.)

The Love of Knowledge.

From Murray's "The Man Who Minded It"

(De Wolfe, Fiske & Co.)

"I WAS born with the love of knowledge in me, John Norton—the love to know how things were made, and how things could be made. I used to open the nuts that I might know how the shells were constructed, and from what point the kernel started to grow. I used to split the apples open before I ate them, to find which way their seeds lay, and to learn how they grew round the centre. And I used to wonder what colours their skins, and made them so red and bright. I used to lie by the ant-hills in the warm sun, and see the little busy things come and go, and notice how they carried their loads; and longed to get inside of their mounds and see what they did—how they made their chambers, and kept their archways from falling. I have lain by the hour in the leaves, and seen the great yellow spiders weave their webs, and hang their filmy traps in the air that they might catch their food. I climbed a thousand trees and studied a thousand nests, and found that each bird had his own way and fashion of making his home, and saw that they could do things that man could not do; for I used to work for hours trying to place the hairs and the mosses, the bits of bark and the stolen string, as the bird would place them, and I found I could not do it, John Norton."

"No," said the Trapper; "the creeturs that the Lord has made be wiser than men arter their fashion.

"It is even so," said the man; "and as a boy I grew to know it. I did not know at the time that I was a student, but I studied much before I saw a book."

"I don't doubt it," said the Trapper. "Books is good enough in their way, but I never seed more than two or three men that had studied books that wasn't dreadfully ignorant."

"The first joy that came to my life, John Norton, was when I learned to read. An old pauper woman in the poorhouse taught me the letters; and the first book that I read was the Bible."

"It took me a year to read it through, but it made the year happy. I read it, not for its wisdom, but for the strange stories that were in it, and the things that delight a boy; but when I was done I knew how to read, and I had a longing to read—a longing I cannot describe. Did you ever long to know a thing, John Norton?"

"Sartin," answered the Trapper; "I run acrost a track in the snow last winter that made me oneasy; fur the track was the track of a panther, but it walked with the legs of a man; leastwise, it made but one track where it ought to make two. And the pups was oneasy, too; fur they wouldn't foller the thing. I trailed it fur two days, fur I had sot my mind on knowin' what the creetur was that the pups wouldn't foller, and whose track didn't tell me his name. And the second day, jest as it was gettin' dark, I come upon him; and it was standin' up like a man, and I must say it started me a leetle; fur I come on it suddenly, and met it face to face. But I drawed on it, fur I was sartin it wasn't anything human; and I lined the sights to send the lead atween the eyes. My finger was on the trigger, and the pressure was gittin' steady, fur I'd never seed such a thing afore, and I was determined to know what the creetur was, and"—

"What was it, John Norton?"

A WAGGON-LOAD OF NURSE MAIDS.

From "The Squirrel Inn." (Copyright, 1891, by The Century Co.)

The Baby, the Man, and the Mastery.

From Stockton's "The Squirrel Inn." (Century Magazine.)

THE young man drew the baby-carriage to the bench by the rail and, seating himself, gazed with interest upon its youthful occupant. This individual appeared to be about two years of age, with its mother's eyes and a combative disposition. The latter was indicated by the manner in which it banged its own legs and the sides of its carriage with a wicker bludgeon that had once been a rattle. It looked earnestly at the young man, and gave the edges of its carriage a whack which knocked the bludgeon out of his hand. Lodloe picked up the weapon, and, restoring it to its owner, began to commune with himself.

"It is the same old story," he thought. "The mother desires to be rid of the infant; she leaves it for a moment in the charge of a stranger; she is never seen again. However, I accept the situation. If she doesn't come back this baby is mine. It seems like a good sort of baby, and I think I shall like it. Yes, youngster, if your mother doesn't come back you are mine. I shall not pass you over to the police or to any one else; I shall run you myself."

It was now half past nine. Lodloe arose and looked out over the pier. He could see nothing of the young mother.

"I knew it," said Lodloe, unconsciously speaking aloud; "she hadn't the slightest idea of coming back. Now, then," said he, "I own a baby and I must consider what I am to do with it. One thing is certain, I intend to keep it. I believe I can get more solid comfort and fun out of a baby than I could possibly get out of a dog or even a horse."

Lodloe gazed with much satisfaction at his new acquisition. He was no stickler for conventionalities, and did not in the least object to appear at his destination—where he knew no one—with a baby and a carriage.

At this moment the baby gave a great wave with its empty rattle, and, losing its hold upon it, the wicker weapon went overboard. Then after feeling about in its lap, and peering over the side of the carriage, the baby began to whimper.

"Now then," thought the young man, "here's my chance. I must begin instantly to teach it that I am its master."

Leaning forward, he looked sternly into the child's face, and in a sharp, quick tone said:

"Whoa!"

The baby stopped instantly, and stared at its new guardian.

"There," thought Lodloe, "if is just the same with a baby as with a horse. Be firm, be decided; it knows what you want, and it will do it."

At this instant the baby opened its mouth, uttered a wild wail, and continued wailing.

The young man looked around him for assistance. The forward upper deck was without an awning, and was occupied only by a few men, the majority of the passengers preferring the spacious and shaded after-deck. Two of the men were laughing at Lodloe.

"That's a new way," one of them called out to him, "to shut up a young one. Did it ever work?"

"It didn't this time," answered Lodloe. "Have you any young ones?"

"Five," answered the man.

"And how do you stop them when they howl like that?"

"I leave that to the old woman," was the answer, "and when she's heard enough of it she spanks 'em."

Lodloe shook his head. That method did not suit him.

"If you'd run its wagon around the deck," said another man, "perhaps that would stop it. I guess you was never left alone with a baby before."

"If you could feed it," said one of the men who had spoken before, "that might stop it, but the best thing you can do is to take it down to its mother."

"That can't be done. The little thing has lost its mother."

The man who had last spoken looked compassionately at Lodloe.

"That's a hard case" he said, "I know all about it, for I've been in that boat myself. My wife died just as I was going to sail for this country, and I had to bring over the two babies. I was as seasick as blazes, and had to take care of 'em night and day. I tell you, sir, you've got a hard time ahead of you; but feedin' 's the only thing. I'll get you something. Is it on milk yet, or can it eat biscuit?"

Lodloe looked at the open mouth of the vociferous infant and saw teeth.

"Biscuit will do," he said, "or perhaps a banana. If you can get me something of the sort I will be much obliged;" and he gave the man some money.

The messenger soon returned with an assortment of refreshments, among which, happily, was not a banana, and the baby soon stopped wailing to suck an enormous stick of striped candy. Quiet having been restored to this part of the vessel, Lodloe sat down to reconsider the situation.

"It may be," he said to himself, "that I shall have to take it to an asylum, but I shall let it stay there only during the period of unintelligent howling. When it is old enough to understand that I am its master, then I shall take it in hand again. It is ridiculous to suppose that a human being cannot be as easily trained as a horse."

The more he considered the situation the better he liked it. The possession of a healthy and vigorous youngster without encumbrances was to him a novel and delightful sensation.

"I hope," he said to himself, "that when the country girl dresses it she will find no label on its clothes, nor any sign which might enable one to discover the original owners. I don't want anybody coming up to claim it after we've got to be regular chums."

"When I get the little bouncer to Squirrel Inn I shall be all right but I must have the relationship defined before I arrive there." And to the planning and determination of that he now gave his mind.

The Railroad Scheme.

[illegible]

[illegible] morning however there was a touch of genuine [illegible] in it. He rushed into the office [illegible] and the map, nearly upsetting the [illegible], who was balanced [illegible] his long legs over the desk [illegible] where town [illegible] rushed [illegible] hour with a fat body [illegible] by a [illegible] fringed about with gaiters.

He was the advance agent of that mysterious combination known to the financial world as an "English syndicate," an elusive sort of commercial sea serpent with its head in London and its tail around the globe. The "memory" which had so gladdened the colonel's heart the morning of the breakfast with Aunt Nancy had proceeded from this round negotiator.

The colonel had [illegible] started the road at Cartersville, and had gotten as far as the double-span iron bridge over the Devil when the rotund gentleman asked abruptly

"How far are you from Cartersville?"

The colonel lifted the point of his pen, adjusted his glasses, and pondered a [illegible] in the rumpled map within a hair's breadth of a black dot labeled "Cartersville."

HE-HE!

From "Col. Carter of Cartersville," copyrighted, [illegible] by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

"Right there, suh. Within a stone's throw of our locomotives."

Fitz looked into the hole with as much astonishment as if it were the open mouth of the mine itself.

The fat man communed with himself a moment, and then said suddenly, "I'll take the papers and give you an answer in a week," and hurried away.

Loosened from Fitz's pinioning grasp, the colonel, entirely oblivious to his friend's sudden interest in the coal-field, and slightly impatient at the delay, bounded like a balloon with its anchor cut.

"An answer from the syndicate within a week! My dear Fitz, I see yo' drift. You have kept the Garden Spots for the foreign investors. That man is impressed, suh; I saw it in his eye."

The room began filling up with the various customers and loungers common to such offices: a debonair gentleman in check trousers and silk hat, with a rose in his button-hole, who dusts his trousers broadside with his cane — short of one hundred shares with thirty per cent. margin; a shabby old man with a solemn face who watches the ticker a moment and then wanders aimlessly out, looking more like an underpaid clerk in a law office than the president of a crosstown railroad — long of one thousand shares with no margin at all; the nervous man who stops the messenger boys and devours the sales' lists before they can be skewered on the files — not a dollar interest either way; and, last of all, the brokers with little pads and nimble pencils.

The news that the great English syndicate was looking into the C. & W. A. L. R. R. was soon around the office, and each habitué had a kind word for the colonel, congratulating him on the favorable turn his affairs had taken.

All but old Klutchem, a broker in unlisted securities, who had been trying for weeks to get a Denver land scheme before the same syndicate, and had failed.

"Garden Spot bonds! Bosh! Road begins nowhere and ends nowhere. If any set of fools built it, the only freight it would get, outside of peanuts and sweet potatoes, would be razor-backs, hogs and niggers. I wouldn't give a yellow dog for enough of those securities to paper a church!"

Reine Among the Trees.

From Theuriet's "Queen of the Woods." (Laird & Lee.)

"WHAT shall I do? I do not care for hunting; I do not take any interest in the slaughter of innocent beasts."

"I understand that you do not like hunting for the sake of hunting. But the exercise in the open air, in the woods? Our forests are so beautiful! See, does not that speak a language of its own?" And she pointed from the height upon which they stood to the forest enveloped in a fairy-like and virginal robe.

"Yes, it is pretty," acknowledged Julien; "I have never paid any attention to such sights; it is you who have caused me to notice them for the first time. But," he added with a sigh, "as the sun rises higher, all that phantasmagoria will melt and vanish. The beauty is short-lived and it is an admonition to us not to place too much value on perishable things."

Reine glanced at him in astonishment.

"Do you think so?" she cried. "I am not learned enough to answer you. All that I know is that if God created those beautiful things, he did so for us to enjoy them. And that is why I admire our woods. Ah, if you could see them in June when the leaves are fully out! There are flowers everywhere: yellow, blue, crimson! There is music everywhere, too: that of the birds and streams; and everything smells so sweetly; the limes, the wild cherry trees, the bushes, red with berries! Whatever you may say, M. de Buxieres, I assure you that the beauty of the forest is not a perishable thing. It is renewed each season — in autumn when the wild fruits and leaves give it colors so rich; in winter, with its carpet of snow, from which the tall beeches rise so high. Look!"

They were beneath the trees; over their heads was an arch of interlacing branches, about them an almost religious silence.

"Is it not grand?" asked Reine, with animation. "One could fancy one's self in a cathedral! Oh, yes, I love the forest! I feel tempted to pray!"

Julien looked at her with uneasy admiration. She trod as if in a church — so softly. Her white hood had fallen upon her shoulders and her hair, slightly disordered, formed a brown aureole around her olive face. Her almond-shaped eyes sparkled beneath their long lashes and her delicate nostrils dilated. Among such surroundings she resembled a priestess of some mysterious temple of nature. At that moment she looked so true a picture of her name, "Queen of the Woods," that Julien, while moved by her peculiar beauty, shuddered superstitiously as he recalled the legends of his childhood. He asked himself if, like the Lamias and Dryads of old, that "Queen of the Woods" was not an elementary spirit embodied in the form of a woman, sent to ruin his soul.

He followed her fearfully at a distance. Suddenly she turned as if to bid him hasten. He then perceived that they had reached the end of the forest of old trees, and that before them the section spread its glades; among the trees rose a cloud of smoke which indicated the encampment of the wood-cutters.

REINE VINCART.

Reine proceeded in that direction and presented the new master to the workmen. They bowed awkwardly and glanced sharply at him in the manner of mountain peasants. The head woodman, replying to Reine's remarks, said in a familiar tone:

"Make yourself easy, Mademoiselle, they will act for the best."

An Old Forest Patriarch.

[illegible]

We took our coffee in the Tejo and I gazed attentively at that respectable patriarch of the vegetable world which was destined to play a certain part in my life. The enormous ragged trunk fantastically covered with moss, with its bark alive and sound in spite of age, easily supported the majestic branches of the giant of the Ría, as it was styled in poetic parlance by the writers and correspondents of the Madrid journals when they came to pass the summer there. The manner in which it grew and spread its foliage of an intensely dark green had something of Biblical impressiveness. It was impossible to look at the yew-tree without profound veneration, as a symbol of exuberant and maternal nature which had brought forth such a sovereign organism.

The ocean, enamored of the beauty of Galicia, embraces her lovingly with its waves, kisses and fondles her with its spray, surrounds her, caresses her, and extends towards her a blue hand eager to press the soft roundness of the coast. The spreading fingers of this hand are the Rías. There the air is purer, softer, and more fragrant, while the vegetation is more southern and luxuriant. That Tejo, king of all other trees, only on the border of a Ría, and on land enriched by its waters, could spread itself with such lordly pride. It was the real monument of that region. It gave a name to the country seat; it served as a landmark to the boatmen and fishermen when in doubt how to find their way back to St. Andrés. From its lofty summit one could overlook the surrounding country, and see not only the hamlets on the seashore, but also the group of islands, the famous Cassiterides of the ancient geographers, and the boundless extent of a sea almost Grecian in its quiet beauty.

In order to build the three balconies, one above another, which adorned it, neither great architectural science nor unusual skill was needed. All they had to do was to take advantage of the splendid horizontal position of its branches, and build on that strong foundation some circular platforms, guarded by a light balustrade, running around them.

The winding staircase found a natural support in the very trunk of the giant. Its foliage was so dense that no one, from the ground, could see those who were taking coffee or refreshments in the second story, nor those who were dancing in the first, while the person who climbed to the third had to come to the front of the balcony in order to be seen.

Each story had its name. The first was the ball-room, the second the supper-room, and the third "Bellavista."

An Author's Den.

[illegible] "Trials of a Young Writer" [illegible]

HAVING retired from active service, Mr. X. found that his pen was all he had with which to eke out a scanty income and earn a home for the wife and olive-branches. There were several of the latter now, and dollars flew from his hands faster than he could amass them. For a time there was a nook in the garret, a dark corner far aloft in the big house of an indulgent relation, where X. had a refuge and where he could work uninterruptedly, so long as he could stand the fumes of the kerosene lamp—there was no other light but a gas-jet in the shop—and between the gloom and the close atmosphere it wasn't the liveliest place for composition, but it was generally far above the danger of interruption, and that was the main thing for a fellow whose ideas did not flow spontaneously at all, but had to be dragged out by the roots, as it were. It was in this dark and gloomy, but most acceptable den that X. wrote and studied, grinding out a big book of some eight hundred pages for an Eastern publisher on some "Famous Battles" of history, and finding some happiness in the ten weeks' wrestle which resulted in the production of "Marion's Faith,"—the first sequel to "The Colonel's Daughter." Then we were able to move into rather pleasanter quarters as a household, though still crowded in the winters, while the summers were spent up under the beautiful bluffs of Lake Pepin, and at last—at last—came the time when the longed-for roost of our own seemed a possibility.

"What makes it loveliest of all," said Florenzor, as she glanced about her cozy little parlor and library ("Between the Lines" had furnished our pretty nook "from turret to foundation-stone"), "is that now at last you have your own den shut off from the rest of the world, and there you can work utterly uninterrupted."

It was alluring. It did look plausible. Aside from the deep, deep thanksgiving that filled his heart for such a bright, cheery, homelike nest for the wife and little ones, there was a heart-felt sense of gratitude that here he might be able to delve at the trade which force of circumstances had assigned him, and be free from the score of interruptions that beset him elsewhere. The selected "den" overlooked the children's playground at the back of the house. It also overlooked many of the neighbors' back yards, the tennis-court of our small club, the lake-side [illegible] of the metropolis, and beyond, the sparkling dancing waves of old Michigan. "There's inspiration for you!" was the daily declaration of the lady friends whom Mrs. X. delightedly brought up to show over the premises, and in course of time the test was to be made.

Aspirations.

From Butler's "Flute and Violin," [illegible]

ON his way down town he passed the little music store of Mr. Luba, which was one block this side of the Kentucky Hotel. He was all eagerness to reach the museum, but his ear caught the sounds of the violin, and he forgot everything else in his desire to go in and speak with Tom, for Tom was his lord and master.

"Tom, are you going to see the wax figures?" he cried, with trembling haste, curling himself on top of the keg of nails in his accustomed corner of the little lumber-room. But Tom paid no attention to the question or questioner, being absorbed in executing an intricate passage of "O Thou Fount of Every Blessing!" For the moment David forgot his question himself, absorbed likewise in witnessing this envied performance.

When Tom had finished, he laid the violin across his knees and wiped his brow with his shirt-sleeves. "Don't you know that you oughtn't talk to me when I'm performing?" he said, loftily, not deigning to look at his offending auditor. "Don't you know that it disturbs a fiddler to be spoken to when he's performing?"

Tom was an overgrown, rawboned lad of some fifteen years, with stubby red hair, no eyebrows, large watery blue eyes, and a long neck with a big Adam's apple.

"I didn't mean to interrupt you, Tom," said David, in a tone of the deepest penitence. "You know that I'd rather hear you play than anything."

"Father got the thousand-dollar prize," said Tom coldly, accepting the apology for the sake of the compliment.

"Oh, Tom! I'm so glad! Hurrah!" shouted David, waving his old blue cap around his head, his face transfigured with joy, his heart leaping with a sudden hope, and now at last he could get the violin.

But Tom had taken up the bow and was rubbing the resin on it. He used a great deal of resin in his playing, and would often proudly call David's attention to how much of it would settle as a white dust under the bridge. David was too well used to Tom's rebuffs to mind them long, and as he now looked at this resining process, the sunlight came back into his face.

"Please let me try it once, Tom—just once." Experience had long ago taught him that this was asking too much of Tom; but with the new hope that the violin might now soon become his, his desire to handle it was ungovernable.

"Now look here, David," replied Tom with a great show of kindness in his manner, "I'd let you try it once, but you'd spoil the tone. It's taken me a long time to get a good tone into this fiddle, and you'd take it all out the very first whack. As soon as you learn to get a good tone out of it, I'll let you play on it. Don't you know you'd spoil it, if I was to let you try it now?" he added, suddenly wheeling with tremendous energy upon his timid petitioner.

"I'm afraid I would, Tom," replied David, with a voice full of anguish.

"But just listen to me," said Tom; and taking up the violin, he rendered the opening passage of "O Thou Fount of Every Blessing!" Scarcely had he finished when a customer entered the shop, and he hurried to the front, leaving the violin and the bow on the chair that he had quitted.

No sooner was he gone than the little figure slipped noiselessly from its perch, and hobbling quickly to the chair on which the violin lay, stood beside it in silent love. Touch it he durst not: but his sensitive, delicate hands passed tremblingly over it, and his eyes dwelt upon it with unspeakable longing. Then, with a sigh, he turned away, and hastened to the front of the shop. Tom had already dismissed his customer, and was standing in the door, looking down the street in the direction of the Kentucky Hotel, where a small crowd had collected around the entrance of the museum.

As David stepped out upon the sidewalk, it was the sight of this crowd that recalled him to a new sorrow.

"Tom," he cried, with longing, "are you going to see the wax figures?"

THE PARSON AND HIS FLOCK.

From "Flute and Violin." (Copyright, 1891, by Harper & Brothers.)

"Of course I'm going," he replied, carelessly. "We're all going."

"When, Tom?" asked David, with breathless interest.

"Whenever we want to, of course," replied Tom. "I'm not going just once; I'm going as often as I like."

"Why don't you go now, Tom? It's so hot — they might melt."

This startling view of the case was not without its effect upon Tom, although a suggestion from such a source was not to be respected. He merely threw his eyes up toward the heavens and said, sturdily: "You ninny! they'll not melt. Don't you see it's going to rain and turn cooler?"

"I'll bet you I'd not wait for it to turn cooler. I'll bet you I'd be in there before you could say Jack Robinson, if I had a quarter," said David, with resolution.

All that long afternoon he hung in feverish excitement around the door of the museum. There was scarce a travelling show in Kentucky in those days. It was not strange if to this idler of the streets, in whom imagination was all-powerful, and in whose heart quivered ungovernable yearnings for the heroic, the poetic, and the beautiful, this day of the first exhibition of wax figures was the most memorable of his life.

It was so easy for everybody to go in who wished; so impossible for him. . . . Once with the courage of despair, he seized the arm of a lad as he came out.

"Oh, Bobby, tell me all about it!"

Barbara Shoeing Miss Brown.

From Macdonald's "There and Back." (Lothrop.)

"COME, come, missie," said the red-faced, white-whiskered, jolly old smith, "I'm king in my own shop, and you must do as I tell you!"

Thereupon Barbara, who had stood out only for the fun of the thing, put on the leather apron with its large bib, and set about her work.

Richard did not offer to put on the first shoe: he believed she had so often watched the operation, that she must know perfectly what to do. Nor was he disappointed. She proceeded like an adept. Happily Miss Brown was very good. She was neither hungry nor thirsty; she had had just enough exercise to make her willing to breathe a little; nothing had gone wrong on the way to upset her delicate nerves—for gentle and loving as she always was, she was apt to be both apprehensive and touchy; her digestion was all right, for she had had neither too much corn nor too much grass; therefore she stood quite still, and if not exactly full of faith, was yet troubled by no doubt as to the ability of her mistress to put on her shoes for her—iron though they were, and to be fastened with long sharp nails.

Richard was nowise astonished at Barbara's coolness, or her courage, or the business-like way in which she tucked the great hoof under her arm, or even at the accurate aim which brought the right sort of blow down on the head of nail after nail in true line with its length; but he was astonished at the strength of her little hand, the hardness of her muscles, covered with just fat enough to make form and movement alike beautiful, and the knowing skill with which she twisted off the ends of the nails: the quick turn necessary she seemed to have by nature. In her keen watching, she had so identified herself with the operator, that perfect insight had supplied the place of active experience, and seemed almost to have waked some ancient instinct that operated independent of consciousness. The mare was shod, and well shod, without any accident; and Richard felt no anxiety as he lifted the little lady to her back, and saw her canter away as if she had been presented with fresh feathery wings instead of only fresh iron shoes.

New York City in 1833.

From "She Loved a Sailor," (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

"WHAT have you seen to day, father?"

"The sunniest, breeziest, liveliest city under the sun. I have been down to the Battery, and across to Hanover Square. Nothing except an Italian sky could have been bluer than the sky above New York to-day; and the bright red of the brick houses, and the golden green of the trees, and all the stir and color of the Broadway crowd, was enchanting."

"I wish I had been with you, father."

"I stood on the Battery some time, and looked at the slanting sails of the great packets on the horizon, and the red and black smoke-stacks of the crafts puffing and paddling about the river, and the great ferryboats toiling between shores. Everything, everywhere, was moving—moving fast. Even the man calling 'ice-cream' was out of sight before I could get the twopenny piece I wanted to give him for the sake of the familiar cry."

"Yet Jane says more than three thousand people died from cholera last summer. I dar say they were not missed in the crowd."

"To the sight they are not, but the hear picks out the empty places. In many stores I found vacancies that represent broken homes, and losses never to be repaired. We left New York just in time to escape the epidemic and the presidential election."

"Are there many changes on Broadway?"

"Some new buildings, and I am told that Mr. Astor is going to pull down all the houses between Barclay and Vesey Streets, and build a grand hotel there. It is to cost him six hundred thousand dollars."

"Will it pay?"

"If he makes it splendid enough. Really, Virginia, New York is fonder of display than any Old World city we have visited."

"New York has plenty of money; she is open-handed, and likes to spend it. Were there many ladies out?"

"The lower part of Broadway was crowded with open carriages full of ladies shopping. And how pretty our women are! Under their large gay bonnets and bright-colored parasols their delicate faces looked like flowers. I stood at the Park awhile and watched them passing; it was easy to recognize those I know, for the carriages were constantly getting tangled up with the hurrying carts and drays, and the omnibuses racing and rolling up and down the crowded throughfare."

"Oh, the omnibuses! Are they still running?"

"They have been redecorated. The 'Lady Washington' and the 'Lady Jackson' outvie each other in pictured beauty in scarlet and yellow and apple-green. And the arrogance of their drivers is something wonderful. They think the street belongs to them. If we have an autocrat in America, the omnibus driver is the man."

"You forget King Andrew Jackson!"

"The cases are not comparable. As for Jackson being an autocrat, we had better have one autocrat than half a dozen. What could the country do with Clay, Webster, Calhoun, Benton, and Nicholas Biddle? We ought to be grateful that we have one man stronger than all of them, and able to keep them in order."

"Can Jackson do that?"

"He can do it. There is no living man whose 'yea' can stand against Jackson's 'nay.' But when he comes to fighting ideas instead of men, that is a different thing."

A Highly Cultured Fiancée.

From Anstey's "Tourmalin's Time Chequer." (Appleton.)

AT all events, when he met Sophia again, he had been able to convince her that her doubts of his constancy, even under the most trying conditions, were entirely undeserved. Now he was receiving his recompense; his engagement to Sophia was no longer conditional, but a recognized and irrevocable fact. It is superfluous to say that he was happy. Sophia had set herself to repair the deficiencies in his education and culture: she took him to scientific lectures and classical concerts, and made him read standard authors without skipping. He felt himself daily acquiring balance and seriousness, and an accurate habit of thought, and all the other qualities which Sophia wished him to cultivate.

Still, there were moments when he felt the need of halting and recovering his wind, so to speak, in the steep and toilsome climb to her side

He felt this particularly one dreary morning, as he sat in his London chambers, staring with lack-luster eyes at the letter he had that day received from his bethrothed. For, although they met nearly every day, she never allowed one to pass without a letter—no fond and foolish effusion, be it understood, but a kind of epistolary examination paper, to test the progress he was making. This one contained some searching questions on Buckle's "History of Civilization," which he was expected to answer by return of post. He was not supposed to look at the book, though he had; and even then he felt himself scarcely better fitted to floor the tremendous posers devised by Sophia's unwearying care.

The day before, he had had "search-questions" in English poetry from Chaucer to Mr. Lewis Morris, which had thinned and whitened his hair; but this was, if possible, even worse.

He wished now that he had got up his Buckle more thoroughly during his voyage on the Boomerang—and, with the name, his arrangement with the manager suddenly rose to his recollection. What had he done with that book of Time Cheques? If he could only get away, if but for a quarter of an hour; if he could really exchange all that for the sunniness and warmth and delicious idleness which had once seemed so tedious, what a rest it would be!

The first thing was to find the cheque-book, which did not take him long.

So, although he had little real confidence that anything would happen at all, he drew a cheque, and slipped it behind the frivolous and rather incorrect little ormolu clock upon his chimney-piece.

The result was instantaneous, and altogether beyond his expectations! The four walls of his room assumed the transparency of gauze for a second, before fading entirely away; the olive fog changed to translucent blue, there was a briny breath in the air, and he himself was leaning upon the rail at the forward end of the hurricane-deck of the Flamingo, which was riding with a slow and stately rise and fall over the heaving swell.

Color and Shape of Horses.

From [illegible] "[illegible] of Horses," [illegible]

At the present day, though certain men have prejudices with regard to the color of their horses, there are no hard and fast rules laid down by authorities as to what color should be avoided and what chosen. Three hundred years ago this was considered a very important point, it being supposed that, according to its color, a horse was influenced by the four elements—earth, air, fire and water—another quaint theory long extinct. Horses that had more of the earth than of the rest were by disposition "melancholic, heavie and faint-hearted, and of color black, russet, bright or dark dunne." The horse that was influenced for the most part by the watery element was most commonly white, and he, it was said, usually showed himself to be phlegmatic, slow and full. The bay, pleasant and nimble, was of the air; the bright sorrel was of the fire, and he was choleric and fiery, but seldom of great strength. The best colors were thought to be those in which the various elements mingled, an equal share of each making the best horse, and the colors of such animals were brown bay, dapple gray, black full of silver hairs or a fair roan; bright and dark bays were also thought to be particularly good. Black points were regarded as desirable, but very various qualities were supposed to be indicated by white markings, particularly on the feet. How the intricate ideas on this subject arose is a very curious consideration. Thus, horses were esteemed if they had a white off fore foot, or white near hind foot, or both hind feet white, but the white was not to be above the pasterns, "for that were an evil sign betokening diviance." The seven bad points were a white near fore foot, a white off hind foot, both fore feet white, two white feet on the same side, near fore and near hind, or the reverse.

As for shape, and the old writer, in some way seeming to contradict his theories, admits the obvious fact that a horse, however well colored and marked, is of little worth unless his shape be good—the ancient rules agree for the most part with the opinion of to-day. When perfect shoulders are described as "long, large and full of flesh," the term long and large probably implies well sloped; but the necessity of fulness of flesh is less apparent, nor is the "large and round breast" now considered essential; and again, the summary which states that "his whole head together should be like a sheep's head," is open to argument. The type is recognizable in many old pictures, but a horse's head is not now considered perfect the more closely it resembles the head of the sheep. A poet of the saddle, the late Major Whyte Melville, had a different theory. His perfect horse was to have

What Is Love?

From Crawford's "Khaled, a Tale of Arabia," [illegible]

"You must love me, as I love you, [illegible] would save me from destruction," said Khaled.

Though Zehowah could not comprehend the meaning of the words, she saw by his face that he was terribly moved, and she herself began to be more sorry for him.

"Indeed Khaled," she said, "I will try to [illegible] you from this hour. But it is a hard thing [illegible] cause you cannot explain it, and it is not easy [illegible] learn what cannot be explained. Do you [illegible] that all women love their husbands in the [illegible] you mean? Am I unlike all the rest?"

Khaled took her hand and held it, and looked into her eyes.

"Love is the first mystery of the world," he said. "Death is the second. Between them there is nothing but a weariness darkened with shadows and thick with mists. What is [illegible] A cinder that glows in the darkness for a moment and falls away to a cold ash in our hands when we have taken it. But love is a treasure which remains. What is renown? A cry echoed in the bazar by men whose minds are subject to change as their bodies are to death. But the voice of love is heard in paradise, singing beside the fountains Tasnim and Salsabil. What is power? A net with which to draw wealth to me from the waters of life? To what end? We must die. Or is power a sword to kill my enemies? If their time is come they will [illegible] without the sword. Or is it a stick to pummel the hides of fools? The fool will die also, like his master, and both will be forgotten. But those who love shall enter the seventh heaven together according to the promise of Allah. Death is stronger than man or woman, but love is stronger than death, and all else is but a vision seen in the desert, having no reality."

"I will try to understand it, for I see that you are very unhappy," said Zehowah.

She was silent after this, for Khaled's words were earnest and sank into her soul. Yet the more she tried to imagine what the passion of him could be like, the less she was able to understand it, for some of Khaled's actions had seemed foolish, but she supposed that there must have been some wisdom in them, having its foundation in the nature of love.

"What he says is true," she thought. "I married him in order to give my people a just and brave king, and he is both brave and just. And I am certainly a good wife, for I should be dissolved in shame if another man were to see my face, and moreover I am careful of his wants and I take his kefiyeh from his head with my own hands, and smooth the cushions for him and bring him food and drink when he desires it. Have I withheld from him any of the treasures of the palace, or stood in the way of his taking another wife? Until to-day, I thought indeed that this talk of love meant but little, but that he spoke of it because he desired an excuse for marrying Almasta who loves him. But when he said at a venture that he wished to make me jealous, he confessed the truth. Now all the tales of love told by the old women are of young persons who have seen each other from a distance, but are hindered from marrying. And we are already married. Surely, it is very hard to understand."

Studying Birds With Profit and Delight.

From Grant's "Our Common Birds." (Scribner.)

A THIRD, and for an indolent nature an extremely pleasant, method of studying birds is to seek some spot which possesses peculiarly attractive features for them, and whither they are accustomed to resort in great numbers, and there, properly sheltered, seat yourself and quietly wait for what may come within the range of your vision. I have in mind two localities that have always proved wonderfully rich in bird-life. One is a bluff, perhaps forty feet in height, rather steep, and with a number of good-sized forest trees growing upon its slope. Rolling fields spread backwards from its brow, and at its foot runs a line of shrubbery, somewhat thicket-like in character and forming a sort of natural hedge, which fittingly bounds a boggy meadow beyond. Several small springs issue from the sides of this declivity and trickle down in gentle streams until lost in the ditches which intersect the meadow. Meadowlarks, Blackbirds, Marsh Wrens, Bitterns, Bobolinks and an occasional Duck frequent the lowland. In the upland, the Cowbird, the Robin and the Song Sparrow disport themselves; into the trees and shrubs upon the bluff come Woodpeckers, Thrushes, Orioles, Catbirds, Flycatchers and Warblers, and all of these, and indeed more than I have named, take turns in visiting the springs and rivulets; now indulging in a hasty bath, now daintily slaking their thirst, now breaking forth into song, now making love, and now, must it be confessed, waging war, all utterly unconscious of the observer, who, reclining upon a mossy bank, or sitting motionless upon a log or stump, or leaning fixedly against the trunk of some friendly tree, is watching with intense interest the scenes of sylvan life unwittingly enacted before him.

Such is one of the favored spots. The other is an old, deserted and gone-to-ruin apple-orchard, far from any habitation, except a few scattering farm-houses. This orchard is skirted on three sides by forest trees,and on the remaining side by a swamp, which is a tangle of alders and other water-loving growths. Here may be seen the Orchard Oriole, the Black-billed Cuckoo, the Indigo-bird, the Summer Redbird, the Towhee, the Redstart, the American Goldfinch, Wrens, Thrashers, Vireos, and numerous other varieties of birds in great profusion. It was at this place that a friend of the writer pitched a tent, and, with his dog as his only companion, spent four delightful months, solitary, indeed, except for an occasional visit from a few of his acquaintances who were lovers enough of Nature to be willing to accept in her service the limited, but by no means comfortless, accommodations of a canvas house and a somewhat rudimentary couch. It was the writer's good fortune to be reckoned among the favored ones, and the days spent there in delightful rambles and the evenings passed in luxurious repose will linger long in the memory.

THE HOOT OWL.

From "Our Common Birds." (Copyright, 1891, by Charles Scribner's Sons)

Sheep Shearing.

From Roberts' "Down the O-Hi-O." (McClurg.)

SHEEP SHEARING, that annual spring harvest of the Southern Ohio farmer, was even at that early hour in brisk operation at Jazar Frost's.

There was a clicking of shears which might have been heard by a keen-eared listener fully fifty yards away from the ample barn, and indeed was heard; for Kit, her senses all alert, was soon attracted thither.

The wide barn floor had been swept of every vestige of dirt, and upon it knelt half a dozen men, each with a sheep before him, and each intent on separating the patient animal from the white wool which rolled from his shears in a less number of minutes than his comrades could effect the like feat.

Jazar Frost, himself occupying one corner of the floor, was engaged in folding and binding up the fleeces upon a large table — an occupation technically known as "tying wool." He was a broad old man, of perhaps sixty-five years, quite hearty and strong-looking, with a ruddy complexion and a very small tuft of sandy gray whiskers at either ear.

A grim smile played about his mouth as he folded the white wool into great squares, tied them securely, and carried them to be stored in the wool-room near by, meanwhile listening to and sometimes loosely answering the jests of the shearers.

"Tommy tried to catch an easy one this time," said one of the latter, slyly calling attention to a youthful and less experienced brother, who had indiscreetly selected an old ram from the flock at the door, and was making but slow headway in removing his yellow coat.

The speaker did not in the least slacken the play of his own shears, nor, apparently, take his eyes from his work.

"Did Tommy get a leather coat?" laughed another, forgetting himself for a moment in the enjoyment of the joke and pausing, but instantly resuming his work.

"Why, Tommy, I should have thought thee would have learned better than that at Paxallen's, thee won't make paying wages at eight cents a head. Tommy sheared 'most all Paxallen's sheep this year, didn't thee, Tommy?"

"Old David Paxallen told me," said another, "that he allowed to send Jennie away from home next sheep-shearin'; Tommy and a lot of these young fellows crowded in so early to shear his sheep that the old hands hadn't a chance, and the wool was put up too rough."

There was a loud chorus of laughter at this bit of fiction.

"I think Jazar intends to give me a quarter for this one," said Tommy, choosing the less disagreeable of the two topics of conversation, and speaking in a tone of well-assumed confidence.

"Give thee a quarter!" repeated Jazar, stopping midway between his table and the wool-room, with an immense square of white fleece poised on his extended hands, and with his accustomed grim smile. "Give thee a quarter! I should think I ought to charge thee a quarter for letting thee learn. See how thee has cut him too," he pursued, pointing to one or two spots where the sharp shears had slightly nipped the flesh. "How would thee like to have thy hide cut up that way?"

"That's the way with these old farmers," said Joe Aiken, the best and fastest shearer in the neighborhood, coming to Tommy's assistance; "they get a Vermont sheep with wool full of yolk, and three square yards of surplus skin, and as wrinkled as the devil, and expect a man to shear it in seconds of a minute, or at least seven cents, and never scratch him.

"I tell you, Joe, you'd be a lucky man if these as he used to of the old-fashioned, hard-fagged kind," said another, "that's what beats him."

"I hear that Joe used to shear ninety a day," said the first speaker.

"Well, it wasn't much to shear the kind of sheep they had then," was the rejoinder of a shearer; "the wool only grew on a little spot on the top of their backs, and they just pulled that off with their hands, didn't they, Joe? Never used the shears at all."

Joe disdained to answer this interrogatory, and turned loose a sheep he had shorn. With a despairing bawl it sprang completely over a stooping shearer, and ran toward a frightened group of denuded comrades huddled in the farther recesses of the barn-yard.

Jazar Frost, turning to look after the skurrying sheep, saw Kit standing at one side of the wide door-way—little Kit, in all the glory of auburn curls and blue ribbon, radiant in the consciousness of her very uncommon appearance.

I Prove Myself an Englishman.

From Harding-Gould's "In Provence."

I got into trouble at Narbonne.

As I was walking on the platform of the station, a man in plain clothes with very [illegible] came to me, touched his hat, and asked if I might be honored with a few words [illegible]. When we were by ourselves, "Monsieur," said he, "I must request you to show me your [illegible] and allow me to identify you. I am the [illegible] the secret police down here. Will you [illegible] my office and bring your luggage?"

"Certainly, delighted to make your acquaintance. I will get my Gladstone bag and my [illegible] of rugs in a moment. There is a—a hatbox—"

"I know there is," said the chef sternly; "is that vielle that is suspicious."

So all my luggage was conveyed to the office of the police. I showed no concern, but laughed and joked.

"What countryman do you say you are?"

"English."

"Impossible. You have not the English accent when you speak. It is rather German than anything else."

"You think I am a German?"

"But certainly. Your bag has a German address on it, written in German characters."

So it had. I had been in Germany before going to Rome, and had never removed the address, which, as he said, was in German characters. I explained, but the chef was unsatisfied. He was now convinced that he thought I was a spy.

"Here are German newspapers and a German book in your bag!" said the chef.

"Certainly. Why not? I have been in Germany."

"Yet you say you are English?"

"Here is my passport." I extended it to him. He looked at it, shook his head, and said, "It is a very old one of 1897." That was true, and I had not had it renewed since. "Then," said the chef, "this passport is for you and your wife. Where is the wife?"

"Minding the babies. Thirteen of them—a handful," said I.

I had to produce card-case, letters, all of which the chef examined carefully, and yet he was not satisfied. Then, suddenly, a bright idea struck me. "Monsieur," said I, "I see what you take me to be. It is true I have been sketching in Narbonne and along the whole coast. Would you like to see my drawings? Here is the result of my studies in Narbonne; a very remarkable profile of a Narbonnaise girl, the face of a lady carved in the Cathedral, of another in the Museum, some sketches of children's clay toys found in Roman tombs, and sundry Gaulish and Moravian bronzes; also! yes, see, a bone toilet-comb, discovered among the remains of the fortifications."

The chef laughed, especially over the beauties of Narbonne, ran his eye through the book, tossed it over to his assistant to look at and laugh over the wonderful girls' faces, returned it to me, and let me off.

"And the vielle," said I, "what do you think of that—"

"Mais! with the vielle over your shoulder, and that book of sketches and thirteen babies—assurément—you could only be an Englishman."

Alone in the Beautiful World.

From Bernhard's "The Rector of St. Luke's." (Worthington.)

ALONG the extreme edge of the park ran a narrow, secluded path; Annie walked along this until she came to a ditch, which was half filled with last year's dead leaves. A little, somewhat rickety bridge led across it and directly to a swollen latice door, which Annie's hands opened with some difficulty. Now she was alone, quite alone in one of the most remote, unknown parts of the park. Here there were no views, no temples and rustic summer-houses, but the solitary wanderer cared for none of these. Young birches stood at the edge of the path, and tossed their gay, green flags gayly in the mild May air; beyond were groups of large beeches and elms, and at her feet was a flowery white carpet. The wind-flowers, the lovely anemones in hundreds, kissed awake by the May sunbeams, formed it. Radiantly fresh and spotless they smiled up at the blue heaven, some still half unfolded, slowly loosening one petal after another from the bud. There were no other flowers blooming here; the green leaves of the Maybells stood in the deepest shade, but their blossoms were still tiny and light green; they had not yet opened their merry eyes. The air was permeated by a spicy odor of the fresh perfume of the young foliage, which, cooled by the night air, warmed by the sun, sent into the hearts of men the old, ever new announcement of spring, which promised to heal all wounds, alleviate all griefs.

Annie stooped and plucked a handful of anemones and fastened them in her gown. Ah, how delightful was the solitude in the midst of the budding nature! If only Hedwig, dear, sweet Hedwig, would not come to-day; if she only might be alone!

But no, she cannot. A noise disturbs the deep pervading silence, as if something drew near on a light trot upon the soft earth; a short panting, then he bent round the nearest group of trees, the handsome, intelligent Newfoundland; he stood still, laid his head a little on one side, and wagged his bushy tail, as if to say, "I know who you are, but let us wait a little."

"Ego!" With shaking knees, with pausing heart-beats, Annie gasped out the word. It is surely not possible, just to-day, here! Have her incessant thoughts, her longing, tormented heart, brought to her him who now slowly strides toward her?

As yet he does not see her; his broad-brimmed hat pressed down over his forehead, he comes along in deep thought, and starts when he sees the dog in the midst of the way.

But then ——

He forgot as a polite man to take off his hat to the lady. Violently he hurries up to her, seizes both her hands, looks her straight in the eyes, and softly calls her name: "Annie!"

She is no longer frightened and excited.

He is beside her, holds her hands fast in his, he looks at her unchangingly; they two are alone in the beautiful, enchanting May world—it should be so!

Darwin as a Father.

One might expect to find in a man whose life work was a constant fight against suffering, and who worked with a regularity that was almost unparalleled, a break or flaw at times in the evenness of disposition. But Darwin's life was wonderful in its patience and example of loving-kindness to all, with an exhaustless gentleness. His married life was perfect in its tender realization of all that comes from the indulging of well-adapted cares. To his children, Darwin was indulgent and kind, tender and sympathetic; he early gained their full love and confidence and always retained it. That he made them the objects of his scientific investigations is shown by his great work "The Expression of the Emotions;" yet that he had all the love and affection of the scientific parent, is seen in the following extract from a letter written to a friend: "He (the baby) is so charming that I cannot prevent to any modesty. I defy anybody to flatter us on our baby, for I defy any one to say anything in its praise of which we are not fully conscious. . . . I had not the smallest conception there was so much in a five-months' baby. You will perceive by this that I have a fine degree of paternal fervor." His son Francis states that he does not remember ever hearing his father speak an angry word, yet the children never thought of disobeying him. "I well remember," says his son, "one occasion when my father reproved me for a piece of carelessness, and I can still recall the feeling of depression which came over me, and the care which he took to disperse it by speaking to me soon afterwards with especial kindness. He kept up his delightful, affectionate manner toward us all his life. I sometimes wonder that he could do so, with such an unsympathetic race as we are; but I hope he knew how much we delighted in his loving words and manner. How often, when a man, I have wished when my father was behind my chair, that he would pass his hand over my hair, as he used to do when I was a boy. He allowed his grown-up children to laugh with and at him, and was generally speaking on terms of perfect equality with us."

How Ladies Play Whist.

Mrs. V. You can't do that; can she Colonel Graham.

Colonel G. It isn't customary.

Mrs. V. Oh, who wants to play the stiff club rules? I don't; there isn't any fun in whist if you are going to be so particular.

Mrs. T. Whose lead is it now?

Colonel G. If it isn't yours, it must be Mr. Talbot's, as you decide about that trick.

Mr. T. Then I'll lead a spade, and you can trump it.

Miss V. There, that's better than having that trump wasted on your ace.

Mrs. T. Did you ever play Stop? We played it last summer at Bar Harbor. It's a Western game, and you have chips, just like poker; and then you stop it if you have the stop cards; and sometimes you'll have the meanest little cards left in your hands, and if it is the ace of diamonds you have to pay five chips for the king, or the queen, or the knave, or the not so much of course, but it all counts awfully fast.

Mr. T. Why, that is ever so much like Sixty-six. Do you remember the time we tried play Sixty-six on the Bar Harbor boat Mrs. Vaughn?

Miss V. Oh yes, and Ethel Mott was so cross. She just could cheat, and there was no stopping her.

Colonel G. It is your lead Miss Vaughn.

Mrs. V. Oh, just wait a moment. I want to know if fourth best has anything to do with playing fourth hand?

Colonel G. Nothing whatever.

Mr. T. Oh, fourth best is one of those things they've put in to make whist scientific. For my part, I don't think there's any fun.

Miss V. That's just what I say. When I play whist I want to have a good time, and I feel as if I were going through an examination at a scientific school. Oh, did you know we are going to have a whist figure at Janet Graham's german, Mr. Talbot? Wont that be fun?

Colonel G. It is your lead, Miss Vaughn.

Miss V. Why, did I take the last trick? What shall I—oh, I know—the ace of clubs.

Mrs. V. The two spot of diamonds ought to be good for that.

Miss V. How horrid! now the rest of our clubs aren't any good. Well, any way, I can throw them away.

Mrs. V. Have hearts been led?

Mr. T. I'm sure I can't remember.

Miss V. (examining tricks). Yes, here's one heart trick.

Mrs. V. Well, I must lead it, and I'm sure I don't remember about it at all. I'll lead a small one. Was that right, Colonel Graham?

Colonel G. You might have led your knave.

Mrs. V. Why, how did you know I had the knave. I declare, it's like witchcraft, the way you keep run of the cards. I suppose you know where every card is. Who took that?

Colonel G. I did.

Mr. T. I ought to have trumped that, but I do hate to trump second hand.

Colonel G. But you played suit.

Mr. T. So I did. I forgot that.

Colonel G. (showing hand). The rest of the tricks are mine.

Miss V. Why, I have the king and queen of clubs, and you havn't a club in your hand.

Colonel G. That is why the tricks are mine. I can keep the lead to the end. I am very sorry Mrs. Vaughn; but I am suddenly attacked with a nervous headache, so that I cannot possibly go on playing. I shall have to ask to be excused.

Mrs. V. Oh, don't break up the game when we are getting along so well.

Colonel G. I am very sorry; but I must go. I have enjoyed the game extremely.

Miss V. I'm sure we didn't have anything on our side at all. I hate whist anyway; you have to be so quiet, and study on it so.

Mr. T. Yes, I think it's awfully hard work.

Colonel G. Oh, you'll have better luck next time. Good-by; don't rise.

[And the Colonel goes to the club to relieve his mind by a quantity of vigorous expletives, and then to settle down to an evening of what he calls real whist.]

Pomona and a Real Live Earl.

From Stockton's "The Rudder Grangers in England." (Scribner.)

"'WELL, my good woman', says he, a holdin' my open letter in his hand, 'so you want to see a lord, do you?'"

"What on earth did you write to him?" exclaimed Euphemia. "You mustn't go on a bit further until you have told what was in your letter."

"Well," said Pomona, "as near as I can remember, it was like this: 'William, Lord Cobden Earl of Sorsetshire an' Derry. Dear Sir. Bein' brought up in Republican institutions, in the land of the free—' I left out 'the home of the brave,' because their wasn't no use crowin' about that jus' then—'I havn't had no oppertunity of meetin' with a individual of lordly blood. Ever since I was a small girl takin' books from the circulatin' libery, an' obliged to read out loud with divided sillerbles, I've drank in every word of the tales of lords and other nobles of high degree, that the little shops where I gen'rally got my books, an' some with the pages out at the most excitin' parts contained. An' so I asks you now, Sir Lord—' I did put humbly, but I scratched that out, bein' an American woman—'to do me the favor of a short audience. Then, when I reads about noble earls an' dukes in their brilliant lit halls an' castles, or mounted on their champin' chargers, a-leadin' their trusty hordes to victory amid the glittering minarets of fame, I'll know what they looks like.' An' then I signed my name.

"'Yes sir,' says I, in answer to his earlship's question,' said Pomona, taking up her story, "'I did want to see one, upon my word.'

"'I suppose you represent the middle class in your country?' said his earlship.

"'I don't know 'zactly where society splits with us,' says I, 'but I guess I'm somewhere nigh the crack.'

"'Now don't you really believe,' says he, 'that you and the people of your class would be happier an' feel safer, politically speakin', if they had among em' a aristocracy to which they could look up to in times of trouble, as their nat'ral born gardeens? I ask yer this because I want to know for myself what are the real sentiments of yer people.'

"'Well, sir,' says I, 'when your work is done, an' your kitchen cleaned up, an' your lamp lit, a lord or a duke is jus' tip-top to read about, if the type aint too fine, an' the paper mean beside, which it often is in the ten-cent books; but, further than this, I must say, we aint got no use for 'em.' At that he kind o' steps back, and looks as if he was goin' to say somethin', but I puts in quick: 'But you musn't think, my earl,' says I, 'that we undervallers you. When we remembers the field of Agincourt, and Chevy Chase, an' the Tower of London, with the block on which three lords was beheaded, with the very cuts in it which the headsman made when he chopped 'em off, as well as two crooked ones a-showin' his bad licks, which little did he think history would preserve forever; an' the old Guildhall, where down in the ancient crypt is a-hangin' our Declaration of Independence, along with the Roman pots and kittles dug up in London streets, we can't forgit that if it hadn't a been for your old ancestral lines as roots, we'd never been the florurishin' tree we is.'

"'Well,' said his earlship, when I'd got through, an' he kind o' looked as if he didn't know whether to laugh or not, if you represent the feelin's of your class in your country, I reckon they're not just ready for a aristocracy yit.'

"An' with that he give me a little nod, an' walked off into another room."

Sweet William.

(McClurg.)

A GOOD child's book is always fascinating to older readers, and "Sweet William" by Margerite Bouvet has all the elements of this fascination. It is a poetically told tale of the old Normandy in the far away days of chivalry, always so interesting to young sympathies. There is a wicked Duke who slays his brother through jealousy, and two pretty motherless children who have a strange, eventful career. One is for many years kept a prisoner in the tower, the other is the delight of the old Norman court. In the end the children who read the story are delighted to hear that the Duke had by mistake imprisoned his own son. There is a bewitching little girl heroine, Lady Constance, who plays an important part in the lives of the little heroes and brightens the pretty tale with her sunshiny ways. The book is beautified with illustrations by Margaret and Helen Armstrong, which add much to the spirited text. Any one taking this book in her summer outfit and reading it to children some rainy afternoon, will find time slip by delightfully, and will make many little heads and hearts very happy.

LITTLE CONSTANCE.

From "Sweet William." (Copyright, 1890, by A. C. McClurg & Co.)

A Morning Bath at Nantucket.

[illegible]

The sun rose from the sea in golden pomp and wonder, somewhat after four o'clock of an August morning. The Island of Nantucket lay in his way, thrusting upon his more immediate attention the little village of Siasconset on its eastern rim. The sun, contrary to his impartial wont, appeared this morning to regard the island and the village with particular heed. To the casual observer from the bluff, it would seem that he rose for them alone, that his superb splendor was concentrated here. And with further specialty of intention, he singled out one cottage on the bluff-edge, one window in this cottage, one corner of the room to which the window appertained, and sent a dazzling refulgent beam of gold full in the face of a sleeping maiden. She stirred slightly, but slept on. The beam crescent, was redoubled, tripled, quadrupled. The maiden stirred again, and softly sighed. Still the beam grew and applied itself with five—with six-fold brilliance. Now at last, she woke; her eyes opened lazily; she emitted a half-yawn, and began as if to turn her back upon this radiant impertinence. But it was too late. The lifting of her fringed lids had let into her eyes the lustrous, golden glory of that morning sun.

With a bound, her slipperless feet touched the floor and she was at the window. She seized, passing, a thick chamber-gown of white and yellow, wherein she wrapped herself. The sun—satisfied with the revelation of her eyes, which he found the match of his own in color and as dazzling in their due proportion—spread his arms wide to the world once more, and went on with his proper business of making fine sunrises to the front, and fine sunsets to rearward.

The young woman whom he had roused from her slumbers, found the array before her ample compensation for her lost beauty-sleep. The gorgeousness of the gold gave place on either flank to the graver splendor of lavender, which deepened into purple at the bounds of the molten sea, and paled to pale heliotrope in the sky above.

The girl looked, drank it in, reflected its radiance on her radiant face. She sprang to her door and demanded "Martha!" Martha came. It was her bathing-suit she wanted, and shortly—with a run across the loose sand, a header into the low breaker—she was swimming out on the great swells, in the golden path the sun had prepared for his coming. Now forward with strong strokes, now idly floating, with happy half-closed eyes, she revelled in the coolness and the color, the solitude, the freshness of the early morning.

At the Swivvle Club.

[illegible]

Mr. BYZANTIUM, than whom a more pleasant and amiable and thoroughly unassuming gentleman is not to be found in literary circles, was on this August afternoon with his back to the wall stoutly defending his publishers against all comers.

"I grant there are wicked publishers," he remarked, "I grant that authors are frequently shamefully treated, for this reason have we not started a 'Society of Authors,' the members of which bind themselves by solemn oath never part with a manuscript unless they are guaranteed the entire profits, less five percent to the publisher's board and lodging? I grant much which my brother Swivvlers have said against the trade is true in substance and fact, but I still maintain that my publishers, Messrs. Chatter and Pumpus, are honest and fair dealing, and, what is more, extremely generous men."

There was a slight interruption in the corner of the room; a tall, intellectual looking young man of about thirty had risen to his feet, and insisted upon speaking. All eyes were turned in his direction. "Silence for Horsman Gaunt!" cried the Swivvlers. Thus encouraged, Mr. Horsman Gaunt delivered himself as follows:

"Gentlemen, I beg to endorse every word that my friend Walter Byzantium has said on behalf of his publishers, but I dare to add that they are equally generous. For my last novel, Messrs. Shortmans have paid me the magnificent sum of £5000; for my next work, which will deal with the adventures of a masher in Central Africa, and which will be called 'The Masher of the Eyeglass,' I am to receive £10,000. I have five new works now in my head, and I feel that these will bring me in at least £10,000."

There was a pause as though the entire assembly were silently working out a sum in mental arithmetic.

Then a handsome young fellow, over whose curly brown hair some five-and-twenty summers had passed, a lad whom none of the company knew, he having come in that afternoon as the guest of a member, who had never been there before, startled the company by exclaiming

"And will they all be about Africa?"

"All," replied Mr. Horsman Gaunt, "Ex Africa semper aliquid novi."

The Swivvlers laughed at the epigram, but the sarcasm told home.

Presently a gentleman connected with the Friday Review murmured under his breath, "I should have thought he had used up his Africa experiences by this time."

The words were spoken in a low tone of voice but they reached the ears of Horsman Gaunt.

"The last speaker surmises correctly," he exclaimed, a look of scorn curling his lower lip, "but my new books will contain my new experiences. I leave for Africa to-morrow, and my new works will all be written on the spot."

Going South.

From A. Mary F. Robinson's "Lyrics." (Stone & [illegible])

A little gray swallow
I fled to the vales
Of the nightingales
And the haunts of Apollo.

Behind me lie the sheer white cliffs, the hollow
Green waves that break at home, the northern gales
The oaks above the homesteads in the vales,
For all my home is far, and cannot follow.

O nightingale voices!
O lemons in flower!
O branches of laurel.

You all are here, but ah! not here my choice is:
Fain would I pluck one pink-veined bloom of [illegible]
Or watch the wrens build in our hazel bower

HENRY HOLT & CO.'S

NEW SUMMER READING.

"The most distinctly original American novel that has been published in ten years."—N. Y. World.

JERRY. By S. B. ELLIOT. 12mo, $1.25.

N. Y. Tribune says: "A really fresh, vigorous, and highly interesting story."

Life: "Opens on a plane of deep, emotional force, and never for a chapter does it sink below that level."

N. Y. Herald: "A remarkable story . . . should be read by all who like thoughtful stories, the end of which cannot be guessed from the beginning."

ON THE STAGE AND OFF. By JEROME K. JEROME. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 25 cents.

Tells with mild exaggeration, great good nature, and much vividness, the story of his failure as an actor. In "Stage-Land" (cloth, $1.00; paper, 30 cents) he describes the stage from the "front"; in "On the Stage—and Off" the reader is taken on "the boards" with him, and let into many of the occult mysteries of the profession.

SOUTHERN SILHOUETTES. New cheaper edition. Paper, 40 cents.

The Nation says: "Truthful even in their humor. The reader becomes acquainted with the whole neighborhood, and the neighborhood was the unit of Southern life, and still is."

ON THE HEIGHTS. By BERTHOLD AUERBACH. Cheap edition. Translated by F. E. Bunnett; paper, 30 cents. Cloth, translated by S. A. Stern. 2 vols., $2.00.

NEW BOOKS.

Monk and Knight.

An Historical Study in Fiction. By FRANK W. GUNSAULUS. 2 volumes, 12mo, $2.50.

This is a story boldly conceived and boldly executed. Upon the broad background of Europe, in the dawn of the Reformation, when men's minds were feeling the thrill and stir of the new ideas, the writer draws a vivid picture introducing such great figures as Erasmus, Sir Thomas More, Cardinal Wolsey, the Chevalier Bayard, Martin Luther, Aldus the Venetian printer, Rabelais, etc., and the magnificent monarchs Henry VIII., Francis I., Charles V. and Leo X.

The descriptions of the monarchs' meeting on the Field of the Cloth of Gold, of the battles of Marignano and Pavia, the grand Monastery of Glastonbury, the Palace of Hampton Court, of quiet and lovely scenes in cottage and castle, and of the brilliant court of Francis, will long dwell in the reader's memory.

With the Admiral of The Ocean Sea.

A Narrative of the First Voyage to the Western World. Drawn mainly from the Diary of Christopher Columbus. By CHARLES PAUL MAC KIE. Large 12mo, $1.75.

This book contains a new and wonderfully graphic narrative of the first voyage of Christopher Columbus, the voyage in which the great discovery was made which the world is about to celebrate.

It is an entirely new study of the whole subject from original sources; and in spite of the brilliant works of Washington Irving and others, the story has probably never been so thrillingly and attractively told, and this because it is now told largely in the language of Columbus and his companions.

Portraits of Men.

By C. A. SAINTE-BEUVE. With a Critical Memoir by William Sharp. Portrait, 16mo, cloth, 75 cents, net; half vellum, gilt top, $1.25 net.

Mr. William Sharp says of this matchless critic: "It is conceivable that the future historian of our age will allot to Sainte-Beuve a place higher even than that claimed for him by one or two of our ablest critics, Matthew Arnold in particular, and Mr. John Morley."

Portraits of Women.

By C. A. SAINTE-BEUVE. Uniform with above in styles and prices.

This volume contains sketches in the unequalled manner of this great writer, of Madame De Maintenon, Madame De Sévigné, and other women famous in French history.

"Down the O-hi-o."

By CHARLES H. ROBERTS. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

"It is a work full of clever sketches. . . . The horse-race is as dramatic and as vividly told as the chariot race of 'Ben Hur.'"—Chicago Tribune.

"It has somewhat of the charm of the three Hoosiers—Hay, Eggleston and Riley—and yet it is not quite like either, though the present author is a poet as well. The book is so native to the soil that it is almost worth the high praise of spontaneous or artless art."—Louisville Times.

From Timber to Town Down in Egypt.

By AN EARLY SETTLER. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"As a story it must rank above the best from the West. . . . Some noted people appear in the narrative under fictitious names. Among them is Peter Cartwright, who was quite as famous in his day as any President of the United States."—New York Herald.

NOW READY.

THE 13th EDITION OF

Men and Women of the Time.

A DICTIONARY OF CONTEMPORARIES.

Containing Biographical Notices of Eminent Characters of both Sexes. Revised and brought down to the present time

BY

GEORGE WASHINGTON MOON, Hon. F.R.S.L.

Large 8vo, 1024 pages, cloth, price $5.00.

Since the appearance of the Twelfth Edition (four years ago) three hundred and seventy individuals who were noticed in its columns have been removed by death. Their places are occupied in the present Edition by memoirs of seven hundred and forty-four persons whose names during the same period have come prominently before the public. The total number of biographies comprised in this new volume is two thousand four hundred and fifty.

In its essential features the work remains unchanged from preceding issues, but the title has been altered from "Men of the Times" to "Men and Women of the Times," the size of the page has been considerably increased, and a number of internal improvements have been made. As far as it was practicable, all the sketches, before they were put into type, were submitted to their subjects for revision, and thus they may be considered, to a large extent, autobiographical. The latest information was utilized up to the time of going to press, in order to bring the work down to the most recent date possible.

A greater space has been devoted in this Edition than in any previous one to American memoirs, which, as heretofore, have been prepared by an American biographer. In this respect, the Thirteenth Edition will be found, it is hoped, not less valuable than its predecessors.

SCOTT—ELIOT.

Edition de Luxe.

Limited to 1000 Numbered Copies.

This edition will contain all of the Waverley Novels, with voluminous historical notes to elucidate and explain the text; will be enriched with upwards of three hundred etchings and photo-etchings. It is the purpose of the publishers to secure the services of the most celebrated and artistic French etchers for ideal creations and historical studies illustrating the works, and to supplement them with reproductions of fine photographs from nature where the scenes of novels are laid in historic localities.

All of the illustrations will be Proof Impressions on Imperial Japanese Paper. The text paper will be manufactured especially for this edition, and will be a natural tint laid paper, made of the finest material, such as are used in hand-made paper, and containing no clay or other filling, making a volume of remarkably light weight.

The edition, set from new type, will be a marvel of typographical beauty, and will be printed in sumptuous style, with broad, handsome margins, by the celebrated University Press. The page and general manufacture will be the same as the Dickens and Thackeray issued by us.

The volumes will be bound in English vellum cloth, library style, with paper titles, gilt tops, and uncut edges.

The works, to be issued at the rate of about two volumes per month, will be sold only in complete sets of 45 volumes, at $2.50 per volume.

Rosehill Limited Edition.

Limited to 1000 Numbered Copies.

George Eliot's Complete Works, issued in this attractive library style, uniform with our remarkably successful Édition de luxe of Dickens, Thackeray and Bulwer, will meet the demands of the literary public more fully than any previous edition issued in this or any other country. The work will contain over one hundred and twenty-five original etchings and photogravures. The photogravures are reproduced from drawings by the most prominent American artists, among whom are Dielman, Harper, Sandham, Taylor, Garrett, Merrill and Champney. These are supplemented with photogravures from actual photographs of the localities described in the historical romances. All of the illustrations will be proof impressions on Imperial Japanese paper. This edition is printed from entirely new plates, set from new, large type, in a small page uniform with the Édition de luxe of Dickens, and will be complete in twenty octavo volumes, bound in English vellum cloth, paper titles, gilt top. It will be issued by subscription only, at the rate of two volumes per month, at $2 50 per volume.

A recent discovery in bookbinding enables us to put upon the market volumes that combine at the same time great strength and flexibility. The books will open flat without breaking the backs.

NOTES IN SEASON.

ROBERT CLARKE & Co. have just ready a work entitled "Beginnings of Literary Culture in the Ohio Valley"—historical and biographical essays on the early travellers and annalists, the pioneer press, early periodicals, the first libraries, pioneer schools and numerous sketches of literary men and women, by Dr. W. H. Venable; "Pronao: of Holy Writ—establishing, on documentary evidence, the authorship, date, form and contents of each of its books, and the authenticity of the Pentateuch," by Rabbi Isaac M. Wise; also "An Attempt at an Analysis of Music" by Helen M. Sparmann.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready a handsome volume entitled "Landscape Gardening," by Samuel Parsons, Jr., containing notes and suggestions on lawns and lawn planting, laying out and arrangement of country places, large and small parks, trees, shrubs, plants, rockwork, etc. The volume is fully and appropriately illustrated. They have also ready an American edition of Prof. William Peck's "Popular Handbook and Atlas of Astronomy," with four fine full-page plates and numerous other illustrations, diagrams, etc.; a selection of the essays of J. Hazard Hartzell, entitled "Application and Achievement;" and a paper on the Evolution of the Ordinance of 1787, with an account of the earlier plans for the government of the Northwest Territory, by Jay A. Barrett, forming the first of a series of seminary papers of the University of Nebraska.

MACMILLAN & Co. will shortly publish "Studies of the Gods in Greece at Certain Sanctuaries Recently Excavated," by Mr. Louis Dyer, formerly assistant professor in Harvard University. The book represents a course of lectures delivered by Mr. Dyer at the Lowell Institute, Boston; but the material has undergone very thorough revision, and notes and appendices have been added on special points. After an introductory chapter on Greek religion in general, Mr. Dyer deals successively with Demeter at Eleusis and Cnidus, Dionysus in Thrace and old Attica, Dionysus at Athens, The Gods at Eleusis, Æsculapius at Epidaurus and Athens, Aphrodite at Paphos and Apollo at Delos. They also announce "Browning as a Philosophical and Religious Teacher," by Prof. Jones, of the University College, which deals with Browning not simply as a poet, but as the exponent of a system of ideas on moral and religious subjects, which may fairly be called a philosophy.

HARPER & BROTHERS will publish this month "Jinrikisha Days in Japan," by Eliza R. Scidmore, a timely and important contribution to our knowledge of Japan, containing descriptions of the most interesting localities in that country, with chapters on a variety of entertaining themes connected with Japanese life and manners; "Unhappy Loves of Men of Genius," by Thomas Hitchcock, a volume of sketches which, on account of their connection with men and women celebrated for their gifts and accomplishments, are invested with peculiar interest, and are adapted to serve an additional purpose as materials for the study of love in its nobler and more refined manifestations; "A Group of Noble Dames," a collection of ten charming stories by Thomas Hardy; and a new popular edition of W. C. Prime's "I Go a-Fishing," which, first published nearly twenty years ago, is recognized as one of the most admirable pieces of literary mosaic produced in America, combining as it does in its composition all sorts of episodical incident, antique lore, curious bits of philology, poetry and story, and revealing a rare familiarity with the daintiest products of literature and art, and a heart-felt love of nature in her hidden ways. Messrs. Harper & Bros. have also nearly ready "Iduna," and other stories, by George A. Hibbard, whose short stories, recently published in the magazines, have attracted very general attention, on account of their intrinsic interest and no less than because of the artistic skill which marks every detail of their construction.

In Italy of late years there has sprung up a new school, which has studied the criminal rather than the crime—which has investigated his natural history. It is known as the school of criminal anthropology, or, as it is sometimes called, the neo-criminalistic school. The object of Mr. Fletcher's address is to give some account of the rise of this Italian school, and to state the opinions which its adherents hold in regard to the criminal.

The epoch treated in this novel is that immediately preceding the Reformation, when the whole of the then civilized world was in a ferment. As the story progresses a graphic view is unfolded of the pomp of kings, the pageantry of a toppling knighthood and the chicaneries of courts and of church conclaves, the marching of armies and the conflicts of ambitions. There is a large amount of authentic history for the basis of the romance, which is furnished by Gaspar Perrin and his lost child, and the latter's career through abbey, court, camp and battle.

Praed, Mrs. Campbell. The soul of the Countess Adrian. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 266 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 160.) pap., 50 c.

The restless, unsatisfied soul of the Countess Adrian after her death becomes a vampire spirit, and for a short time inhabits the body of Beatrice Brett, a talented young American actress "starring" in London. Lendon, her artist lover, suffers keenly from the change in Beatrice, until the mystery is explained and the evil spirit exorcized by Madox Challis, a magnetic mystic. Full of occult theories and attempted explanations. The volume includes Mrs. Alexander's short story, "Heart of Oak," and also an anonymous tale, "Sophy," which has a tragic ending.

Sparmann, Helen M. An attempt at an analysis of music. Cin., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1891. 61 p. sq. D. pap., 50 c.

The author was formerly Professor of Music at the College of Music, Cincinnati. The essay begins with an analysis of the statements that Leibnitz, Schopenhauer, Kant, Schelling, Hegel, Vischer, Lazarus and other philosophers have made on music. She claims there must be a model for music in nature. Sculpture and painting represent shape and color, and music represents motion, is a form of motion. Music is especially associated with emotions; emotions move and often produce vocal sounds, or make the sounds of the human voice more musical.

PICK-UPS.

"THE last shall be first" when lovely woman opens a new novel.—Puck.

IN a second-hand bookstore, the other day, we overheard this conversation between the proprietor and a young high-school student:

"Have you any Rhetorics?"

"Yes, here is Blair's, one of the best," handing down a duodecimo volume with time-worn leathern covers and time-stained yellow leaves.

"But haven't you a later one than that?"

"Oh," replied the connoisseur, "there's no need of newer works on that subject. Rhetoric isn't like electricity."—Educational Weekly.

MARK TWAIN told me a good story the other day. It illustrated his point that all the clerks in our bookstores are not well informed in literary matters. The humorist's wife and a friend recently went into a bookstore in a city of good size not many miles from New York. Accosting a clerk, Mrs. Clemens said that her friend desired to secure a copy of Taine's "Ancient Régime."

"Beg pardon," said the clerk, "what book did you say?"

Mrs. Clemens repeated the author and title of the book.

Going to the rear of the store, the clerk soon returned, only to inquire: "May I ask you to repeat the name of the author?"

"Why, Taine," replied Mrs. Clemens, becoming a little annoyed.

Assuming an air of superior knowledge, and looking at his customers with a piteous glance of sympathy, he ventured to Mrs. Clemens:

"Pardon me, madam, but you have the name a trifle wrong. You mean Twain—not Taine."—Buffalo Courier.

copyright on substantially the same basis as its own citizens." This clause applies undoubtedly to France; by law as interpreted by the best authorities and undoubtedly by practice to Great Britain; probably to Germany, and also to some other nations. The French copyright decree of 1852 protects authors without regard to nationality, providing only that formalities of deposit are complied with. It has been suggested, and the suggestion generally approved, that the cordial and positive co-operation given by the French nation to our efforts for international copyright should be gracefully recognized by the President by a special proclamation, the first to be issued, recognizing France on this basis, aside from her membership in the Berne Convention. This course would be further justified by the prompt action of the French Government in presenting its case under the law. It is known that, thanks to the co-operation of Count de Keratry, Minister Whitelaw Reid and the French Foreign Secretary, M. Ribot, the French Minister at Washington, M. Roustan, received his instructions some days ago, and it is understood that the French case, based on both alternatives, is already before the President for formal consideration.

The British case, however, is by far the most vital to American interests, and if it is not to be settled by an immediate general proclamation covering the parties to the Berne agreement, should receive prompt consideration so that its status may be defined before July 1. Unfortunately there has been a general misapprehension as to the law and practice in Great Britain, and the muddle has been increased by recent unfortunate utterances of certain British representatives. The misapprehension arises from the mistaken supposition that the decision of the Law Lords in the famous appeal cases of Boosey vs. Jefferys and Jefferys vs. Boosey decided the existing law. This was not the fact. This decision, to the effect that a person not a British subject or resident was not entitled to copyright because of first publication in England, construed the statute of Anne. Since this decision, the statute of 5 and 6 Victoria (1842) has been passed, and it alters the situation. The leading case on this act is that of Routledge vs. Low, in which the Law Lords, respecting Miss Cummins' "The Lamplighter," were called upon to decide only whether temporary residence on British soil assures copyright. They decided that it does, and in rendering the decision Lord Chancellor Cairns, supported by Lord Westbury, added specifically that first publication was the single necessity, and that copyright was not strengthened by residence. The following are the Lord Chancellor's words:

"The act secures a special benefit to British subjects by promoting the advancement of learning in this country, which the act contemplates as the result of encouraging all authors to resort to the United Kingdom for the first publication of their works. The benefit of the foreign author is incidental only to the benefit of the British public. Certainly the obligation lies on those who would give the term 'author' a restricted signification to find in the statute the reasons for so doing. . . . The act appears to have been dictated by a wise and liberal spirit, and in the same spirit it should be interpreted, adhering of course to the settled rules of legal construction. The preamble is, in my opinion, quite inconsistent with the conclusion that the protection given by the statute was intended to be confined to the works of British authors. On the contrary, it seems to contain an invitation to men of learning in every country to make the United Kingdom the place of first publication of their works, and an extended term of copyright throughout the whole of the British dominions is the reward of their so doing. So interpreted and applied, the act is auxiliary to the advancement of learning in this country. The real condition of obtaining its advantages is the first publication by the author of his work in the United Kingdom. Nothing renders necessary his bodily presence here at the time, and I find it impossible to discover any reason why it should be required, or what it can add to the merit of the first publication. It was asked in Jefferys vs. Boosey, why should the act (meaning the statute of Anne) be supposed to have been passed for the benefit of foreign authors? But if the like question be repeated with reference to the present act the answer is, in the language of the preamble, that the act is intended 'to afford greater encouragement to the production of literary works of lasting benefit to the world;' a purpose which has no limitation of person or place. . . . If the intrinsic merits of the reasoning on which Jefferys vs. Boosey was decided be considered (and which we are at liberty to do, for it does not apply to this case as a binding authority), I must frankly admit that it by no means commands my assent."

This remains the leading case, but the fact that this was an obiter dictum and not a direct decision, and that on this point Lord Cranworth objected, and Lord Chelmsford doubted whether this was good law, has left the law somewhat clouded. The Digest made by Sir James Stephen and reported by the Royal Commission states in article 6 that it is "probable, but not certain," that first (i.e., simultaneous or contemporary) publication secures copyright to aliens without temporary residence. The text of these portions is as follows:

ARTICLE 6. Who may obtain Copyright in Books.

In order that copyright in a published book may be obtained under the provisions of article 5, the book must in all cases be published in the United Kingdom. The author or other person seeking to entitle himself to copyright may be either—

. . . . . .

(b) A person who at the time of the publication of the book in which copyright is to be obtained owes local and temporary allegiance to Her Majesty by residing at that time in some part of Her Majesty's dominions.

It is probable, but not certain, that an alien friend who publishes a book in the United Kingdom whilst resident out of Her Majesty's dominions, acquires copyright throughout Her Majesty's dominions by such publication.

ARTICLE 7. Previous and Contemporary Publication out of the United Kingdom.

No copyright in a book published in the United Kingdom can be obtained under article 5, if the book has

3. Not later than the day of publication of each book or other article, in this country or abroad, two complete copies of the best edition issued must be delivered, to perfect the copyright, or deposited in the mail within the United States, addressed

LIBRARIAN OF CONGRESS,

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The freight or postage must be prepaid, or the publication inclosed in parcels covered by printed Penalty Labels, furnished by the Librarian, in which case they will come FREE by mail (not express), without limit of weight, according to rulings of the Post-Office Department. In the case of books, photographs, chromos, or lithographs, the two copies deposited must be printed from type set or plates made in the United States, or from negatives or drawings on stone, or transfers therefrom, made within the United States. Without the deposit of copies above required the copyright is void, and a penalty of $25 is incurred. No copy is required to be deposited elsewhere.

The law requires one copy of each new edition wherein any substantial changes are made, to be deposited with the Librarian of Congress.

4. No copyright is valid unless notice is given by inserting in every copy published, on the title-page or the page following, if it be a book; or if a map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, engraving, photograph, painting, drawing, chromo, statue, statuary, or model or design intended to be perfected as a work of the fine arts, by inscribing upon some portion thereof, or on the substance on which the same is mounted, the following words, viz.: "Entered according to act of Congress, in the year ——, by ——, in the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington," or, at the option of the person entering the copyright, the words: "Copyright, 18—, by ——."

The law imposes a penalty of $100 upon any person who has not obtained copyright who shall insert the notice, "Entered according to act of Congress," or "Copyright," etc., or words of the same import, in or upon any book or other article.

5. The copyright law secures to authors or their assigns the exclusive right to translate or to dramatize their own works.

Since the phrase all rights reserved refers exclusively to the right to dramatize or to translate, it has no bearing upon any publications except original works, and will not be entered upon the record in other cases.

6. The original term of copyright runs for twenty-eight years. Within six months before the end of that time, the author or designer, or his widow or children, may secure a renewal for the further term of fourteen years, making forty-two years in all. Applications for renewal must be accompanied by explicit statement of ownership, in the case of the author, or of relationship, in the case of his heirs, and must state definitely the date and place of entry of the original copyright. Advertisement of renewal is to be made within two months of date of renewal certificate, in some newspaper, for four weeks.

7. The time within which any work entered for copyright may be issued from the press is not limited by any law or regulation, but the courts have held that it should take place within a reasonable time. A copyright may be secured for a projected work as well as for a completed one. But the law provides for no caveat, or notice of interference—only for actual entry of title.

8. A copyright is assignable in law by any instrument of writing, and such assignment is to be recorded in the office of the Librarian of Congress within sixty days from its date. The fee for this record and certificate is one dollar, and for a certified copy of any record of assignment one dollar.

9. A copy of the record (or duplicate certificate) of any copyright entry will be furnished, under seal of the office, at the rate of fifty cents each.

10. In the case of books published in more than one volume, or of periodicals published in numbers, or of engravings, photographs, or other articles published with variations, a copyright is to be entered for each volume or part of a book, or number of a periodical, or variety, as to style, title, or inscription, of any other article. But a book published serially in a periodical, under the same general title, requires only one entry. To complete the copyright on such a work, two copies of each serial part, as well as of the complete work (if published separately), should be deposited.

11. To secure copyright for a painting, statue, or model or design intended to be perfected as a work of the fine arts, a definite description must accompany the application for copyright, and a photograph of the same as large as "cabinet size," mailed to the Librarian of Congress not later than the day of publication of the work or design.

The fine arts, for copyright purposes, include only painting and sculpture, and articles of merely ornamental and decorative art are referred to the Patent Office, as subjects for Design Patents.

12. Copyrights cannot be granted upon Trademarks, nor upon names of companies or articles, nor upon an idea or device, nor upon prints or labels intended to be used for any article of manufacture. If protection for such names or labels is desired, application must be made to the Patent Office, where they are registered at a fee of $6 for labels, and $25 for trade-marks.

13. The provisions as to copyright entry in the United States by foreign authors, etc., by act of Congress approved March 3, 1891 (to take effect July 1, 1891), are the same as the foregoing.

The right of citizens or subjects of a foreign nation to copyright within the United States is not to take effect unless such nation permits to United States citizens the benefit of copyright on the same basis as to its own citizens; or unless such nation is a party to an international agreement providing for reciprocity in copyright, to which the United States may become a party. The Librarian of Congress can enter copyright for foreigners only after a proclamation of the President of the United States, certifying the existence of either of the foregoing conditions.

The right of Americans to secure copyright abroad is unchanged by the new law, pending new legislation in foreign countries, or international agreements as to copyright between their governments and that of the United States.

14. Every applicant for a copyright should state distinctly the full name and residence of the claimant, and whether the right is claimed as author, designer, or proprietor. No affidavit or witness to the application is required.

A "THEATRE LIBRE" FOR BOSTON.

THE production of the play of "Margaret Fleming" in Chickering Hall, Boston, has resulted in plans for the building of a theatre that, writes a correspondent to the N. Y. Tribune, "comes nearer to the idea of the Theatre Libre, of Paris, than any that has yet been contemplated. Among the people who have discussed the plans for the new house are W. D. Howells, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Professor Hamlin Garland, Louise Chandler Moulton, Miss Aldrich, of The Home Journal, and many other well-known writers. Three wealthy men have been interested in the matter, and they have professed themselves willing to put up all the money needed. A block will be built somewhere in the Back Bay containing a theatre capable of seating between 800 and 1000 people. This theatre will be a distinctively American one, for the production of new American plays, and will be built in time for next season. 'Margaret Fleming' will be the opening production. Subscription tickets are to be placed on sale, and a certain amount has already been subscribed."

THE BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION.

THE twelfth annual meeting of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association of the United States was held at the rooms of George A. Leavitt & Co. on the evening of June 3. The meeting was well attended, over one hundred members being present. The President, Mr. Dillingham, called the meeting to order, and in a few words introduced the order of business. After reading the minutes of the previous meeting the Secretary, Mr. W. B. Ketcham, in behalf of the Board of Trustees, read the following report:

To the Members of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association of the United States:

We take great pleasure in submitting this our annual report, and it is with pride that we are able to show you the results of a most successful year's work, which has only been accomplished by your hearty support. Our books, containing the records of the twelve years of our existence, are closed, and we enter upon our thirteenth year under more favorable auspices than have ever existed since the day of our organization.

Two hundred and forty-seven new members have joined our prosperous Association during the past year, making our total membership 1237. Only 263 more members are needed, and we have reached our limit. The 247 new members that have been enrolled were the earnest work of a comparatively few of our members. If every five of our members would bring in one man the limit could be obtained at once.

We are often asked why we wish to increase our membership to 1500, when our Constitution only allows us to pay $1000 benefit to heirs of deceased. Allow us to explain: If we have 1500 members, we can collect on each assessment $1500 for the Death Fund, we paying $1000 benefit, which gives us a clean gain of $500, which amount your Board of Trustees can, by our Constitution, put in a reserve fund for future contingencies. The average number of assessments per year since organization has been five; and, taking this as a basis, it would give us each year $2500 for our reserve fund. Allow us to urge each member to use his influence to secure the desired result.

During the past year our membership has been depleted by increased number of deaths. This is due largely to the epidemic known as La Grippe, and we believe, had not this disease appeared, our death-rate would not have increased over previous years. By examination of the statistics of the regular insurance companies and other benevolent organizations, we find that our proportionate increase per thousand members is not by far as large as others for the past year.

We called your attention last year to the loss of members at the close of every assessment, which loss is largely due to the carelessness of the members in not notifying the Secretary of changes of address, and although the Secretary makes earnest effort to find them, he has in a large number of cases been unsuccessful. We would urge members to inform the Secretary promptly when change of residence is made. We would also call your attention to the fact that amount of benefit is payable to the party named in your original application except change has since been made by you and recorded on the books of the Secretary. We find that many members overlook this important fact, and it may lead to the payment of benefit to a party whom the member does not now intend it payable to.

The small initiation fee charged our applicants has been under debate, and we have no doubt that the Law Committee will recommend for your consideration before long an increased initiation fee. Now that we are paying $1000 benefit it is certainly more desirable to become a member than when we were paying amounts much less. They will probably also recommend at the same time that we make our already strict medical examination still more difficult for applicants who desire to join our Association to pass. We can now well afford to make these changes, and it should be done at an early date.

The records of the Association indicate as follows:

Assessments Nos. 64 and 65 not closed on books, will pay death claims of John Thadden and G. F. Ellis.

In conclusion we should say that your Board of Trustees enter upon the coming year with absolute confidence of success in the future. We shall continue to use our best judgment in all matters brought to our attention, and endeavor to manage the affairs of the Association so that you may have life insurance at cost with absolute security.

The report was adopted unanimously. After a brief discussion raised by the question, "How soon after the death of a member do his beneficiaries receive the amount due?" which was answered: "From a month to ninety days after proofs of death, and of the identity of applicant, are placed in the hands of the Association." The election of trustees to serve for three years from 1891 to 1894 took place. The old ticket—Charles T. Dillingham, Oscar M. Dunham, Joseph F. Vogelius, John H. Ammon, Wilbur B. Ketcham—received the majority of votes cast, and were therefore declared elected.

Resolutions were presented and unanimously adopted thanking Messrs. George A. Leavitt & Co. and Charles T. Dillingham for the use of their offices, the Secretary, Mr. Ketcham, for his valuable and faithful services, and the trade journals for courtesies extended. The meeting then adjourned.

DISCOUNT ON "THE LOVELL SERIES."

REALIZING the large outlay necessary to carry a full stock of the Seaside Library, and desiring to place it complete in the hands of every dealer, the United States Book Company has decided to make the whole line exchangeable, beginning May 20, through the American News Company and its branches. In this way the dealer will run no risk from having unsalable stock on hand, as, if he finds certain numbers do not sell readily, he can at any time return to the news company from whom purchase was made, and get new issues, or good salable numbers in exchange.

Knowing the limited capacity of many of the dealers for carrying such a large line, to overcome the difficulty the following plan has been devised by the United States Book Co.:

An antique polished oak revolving bookcase has been made, five feet high, two feet three inches square, mounted on an iron base with castors, containing five shelves, with a capacity of 750 Seaside Libraries. Three of these cases will hold a complete line of the Seaside Library, leaving ample room for about 300 numbers to be filled in as issued.

The following offers are now made:

Offer No. 1.—To any dealer who will send an order for a complete line of the Seaside Library, to be filled through the American News Company or its branches, will be loaned three of these cases, to be sent by freight from Canton, Ohio, at his expense, and to remain in his possession so long as he will continue to keep them filled with this series.

Offer No. 2.—Two cases will be sent on the same terms for an order for 1500 volumes Seaside Library.

Offer No. 3.—One case will be sent on the same terms for an order for 750 volumes Seaside Library.

With any of these orders catalogues will be supplied, with imprint, free of charge.

The United States Book Company also announces that after June 1 the discounts on their paper-covered series will be as follows: Seaside Library, Lovell's Library, Munro's Library, each, 30 per cent. discount. Seaside Library, 25c. edition, Lovell's American Novelists, Lovell's Leather Clad Tales, Lovell's Detective Series, each 25c. retail; net, 14c. The foregoing series will be sold to the trade exclusively by the American News Company and its branches.

Lovell's International Series, Am. Authors' Series, Literature Series, Political and Scientific Series, Foreign Series, Occult Series, Westminster Series, for 25c. numbers, net, 15c.; for 30c. numbers, net, 18c.; for 40c. numbers, net, 24c.; for 50c. numbers, net, 30c. These seven series will be sold to the trade direct by the United States Book Company.

DROP-A-NICKEL-IN-THE-SLOT LIBRARY.

JOHN HOLINGSHEAD, of London, has started for New York, the object of his visit being to dispose of patent rights in an automatic penny-in-the-slot library. He intends to form a company to develop the scheme, and will offer big inducements to the best American writers to contribute to the machine. He claims to have already some well-known American authors on his list of desired writers.

OBITUARY NOTES.

BENSON JOHN LOSSING, the well-known historian and engraver, died at his residence in Chestnut Ridge, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on the 3d inst., aged seventy-nine years. In 1835 Mr. Lossing became one of the owners of the Poughkeepsie Telegraph, where he did his first literary work. Later he published the Poughkeepsie Casket, a literary paper, and for this Mr. Lossing did his first engraving. In 1838 the Family Magazine, the first illustrated magazine in the country, was started, and Mr. Lossing was its editor and art director. His first historical venture was an outline history of fine arts, published in 1841. It was followed by a history of the Revolution, bearing the title "Seventeen Hundred and Seventy-six." This appeared in 1841, and from that time on he made historical authorship his life work. He was a very industrious writer, and a catalogue of all his works would cover a wide range and a large number. The one work which gave him greatest fame was the "Field-Book of the Revolution," published by the Harpers in serial parts, from 1850 to 1852. It was a charming series of sketches of personal visits to all the localities made memorable by battles, movements of troops, encampments, or by the presence of noted leaders in the Revolution. He spent the greater part of his life in and about Poughkeepsie, but of late led a quiet life on his farm in Chestnut Ridge, where he pursued his literary studies. He was a trustee of Vassar College from the foundation of that institution.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY sailed for England, May 27.

REV. DR. E. E. HALE has written a new story, which is shortly to appear in the Boston Commonwealth as a serial. It deals with Boston life, and is entitled "Harry and Lucy."

MR. O'BRIEN is again employing his time in prison by writing a book. His new novel is to deal with the time of Grace O'Malley, and he is being supplied with books from Queen's College Library for reading up the subject.

IT is reported that the late Emily Dickinson left manuscripts of no less than 800 completed poems, besides fragments of nearly as many more. The volume of selections from Miss Dickinson's poems made by Mrs. Todd and Mr. Higginson is now in its sixth edition.

JEAN VIAUD ("Pierre Loti") has been elected to succeed Octave Feuillet in the Académie. Viaud is a refined and graceful writer, whose books, especially "Madame Chrysanthème" and "Pêcheur d'Islande," have been read with approval in almost every language.

"MINNEAPOLIS," says the Tribune of that city, "has developed a second Jules Verne. A tall, sun-browned man, with big, bony hands and a solemn, studious mien, has been noted by the people on the Minnehaha cars for the past three months. He is the author of a book, and during the period mentioned it has been going through the press. It is now ready, and the author, in the capacity of book agent, is selling the child of his brain to the people of this city. 'Six Thousand Years Hence' is the extravagant title and the book is in keeping with the visionary name. Its author, the peripatetic bookseller, signs himself 'Milton W. Ramsey, author of "Elements of Astronomy." Minneapolis.' The book describes its hero, Gen. Morton, born in 1838, in a village in the Cumberland Mountains, being carried to the sun in the wake of a comet. En route he visits the planets, and after a residence of 6000 years on the sun he returns to earth. The conditions of society and other natural—or rather unnatural—wonders are spoken of in the concluding portions of the book of 240 pages."

THE seventy-second birthday of Walt Whitman, "the good gray poet," was celebrated at his home in Camden, N. J., on the evening of May 31. About forty friends and admirers sat down to a dinner, the poet occupying the seat of honor at the head. He was in good health and spirits, and entertained his guests with selections from his own works and comments on literary affairs. Letters were read from Lord Alfred Tennyson, Richard Watson Gilder, Edmund Stedman and others. Mr. Whitman has about ready what he considers his last book, entitled "Good-bye, My Fancy," and a sub-title, "Second Annex to 'Leaves of Grass.'" It comprises sixty-six pages of prose and verse. He says that many of his pieces were submitted to publishers and magazine editors and "were peremptorily rejected by them." "Eidolons" was sent back by Dr. Holland of Scribner's with "a lengthy, very insulting and contemptuous letter." "To the Sunset Breeze" was rejected by Harper's as being an "improvisation" only, and "On Ye Jocund Twain" was returned by the Century as "personal merely."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

COMMENCING with the September number, Sampson Low, Marston & Company will become the publishers of the Nineteenth Century, which has hitherto been published by Kegan Paul, Trench & Co., Limited.

WITH the June number, the Educational Review begins its second volume. At this season, when young men are considering where they will study in Europe, the article on "The Present Condition of the German Universities," by Prof. Mattoon M. Curtis, has a timely interest. Other contributions to the number are: "Applications of Psychology in Education," by Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi, illustrated with twenty-one diagrams; "The American High School," by Ray Greene Huling, President of the American Institute of Instruction, and "The Education of the Will," by Prof. J. Clark Murray; a discussion between Mr. Albert L. Arcy and Prof. Fernando Sanford on "The Use of Text-Books in Teaching Elementary Science," and one by Supt. William H. Maxwell, on "Teachers' Salaries." The reviews are by Professors Jastrow of the University of Wisconsin, Waggener of the University of Texas, Venable of the University of Virginia, Genung of Amherst, Chapin of Wellesley, Myers of the University of Cincinnati, etc. The department of "Education in Foreign Periodicals" includes "Some Characteristics of a Sound Mind," "The School of the Future," "The School for Oriental Languages at Berlin."

BUSINESS NOTES.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—The Good Health Publishing House, at Battle Creek, Mich., with all its contents, burned on the 2d inst.; loss, $40,000. It was a brick building of four stories, and contained eight large boilers, five printing presses, and a stock valued at $10,000. Insurance not known.

GIRARD, KAN.—It is reported that W. C. Arnold, a dealer in books and stationery, has made an assignment.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Brown & Gross have been succeeded by Leverett Belknap and George F. Warfield, May 18. Extended notice will be given in the next issue.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—After a temporary suspension of sixty days, M. H. Dickinson & Co. have resumed business. The statement that their notes would be unsecured was erroneous. The notes are amply secured by first-class Kansas City property, said to be worth double the amount of the notes secured. This property will be sold as soon as possible and the notes paid off, the time, three years, being given to enable the trustee to sell at best advantage. This will pay every creditor in full, and they have about all accepted. The bank has already turned the stock of merchandise over to the firm.

NEW YORK CITY.—The firm of J. H. Vail & Co. was dissolved May 14, F. P. Lennon retiring.

NEW YORK CITY.—The American Bookseller has removed to Clinton Hall, room 33.

NEW YORK CITY.—Arrangements have been completed for the amalgamation of the Trow City Directory Company and Trow's Printing and Bookbinding Company, which have heretofore been separate corporations, under the name of the Trow Directory, Printing and Bookbinding Company. The capital stock will consist of 7500 shares of $100 each, preferred 8 per cent. stock, and 7500 shares of $100 each, of common stock. Of this amount 5000 shares of common stock will be held by the present owners of the plant of the two companies. The rest will be open for subscription at par, and in the allotment of shares employees of the companies will have the preference. . . . The directors will be Edward Lange, Robert W. Smith, Francis B. Thurber, Alfred C. Cheney, Robert J. Dean and two others to be selected. The prospectus sets forth that the Trow City Directory Company was established in 1786, and that Trow's Printing and Bookbinding Company began business in 1826. The property conveyed to the Trow Directory, Printing and Bookbinding Company is as follows: The leasehold of the premises of the Trow City Directory Company at Eighth Street and University Place, valued at $75,000; the real estate of Trow's Printing and Bookbinding Company at Nos. 205 to 213 East Twelfth Street, valued at $375,000; the plant, fixtures and records of the Trow City Directory Company, valued at $300,000; the complete plant of Trow's Printing and Bookbinding Company, cost $750,000, and valued at $582,749.35. In addition, the vendors of the above contribute as a working capital $50,000 in cash and $50,000 either in common stock or cash. Edward Lange and Robert W. Smith, who have managed the business of the old companies, will remain with the new company for a term of five years, or longer, if desired. The books of both companies have been examined by accountants, who declare that the average yearly profits for the past five years have been $143,736.71. Within a short time subscriptions will be open at four places in this city, and the Central Trust Company will act as registrar of the stock.—N. Y. Evening Post.

NEW YORK CITY.—Edward G. Yoerg has removed his book and stationery business to 650 Sixth Avenue, where he has a much larger and more attractive store.

NEW YORK CITY.—De Wolfe, Fiske & Co. have established a branch house at 18 Astor Place. It will be in charge of Mr. W. B. Perkins, who will represent the house on the road this fall with a full line of samples of new goods. Their list of publications is steadily growing in importance as well as in numbers, and includes already some of the best writers of the country.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—E. H. Butler & Co., publishers, have removed to 220 and 222 South Fifth Street.

PORTLAND, ORE.—J. R. Ewing & Co., booksellers, have been succeeded by Ewing & Raymond.

RUSHVILLE, IND.—W. H. Atkinson, bookseller and stationer, has removed from Bluffton to this town.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—The firm of Duncan M. McAllister & Co. has been incorporated, and is now known as the Utah Book and Stationery Company.

PERSONAL NOTES.

MR. E. MARSTON, of the firm of Sampson Low, Marston & Co., is in New York City, stopping at the Brunswick.

EDWARD MEEKS left Philadelphia, on the 1st inst., for an extended Western trip. He will touch, among other places, San Francisco, Portland, Tacoma and Seattle.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

THE first number of The Pantobiblion, the long-promised "international bibliographical review of the world's scientific literature," edited by A. Kersha, has just made its appearance. Typographically the first impression is a favorable one. We regret to say that, from a practical point of view, we cannot say as much. There is material enough—excellent material—which seems almost useless because of its impractical arrangement. The matter is divided into three parts: (1) Publications of the month, giving full titles of the recent scientific books; (2) Review of books, giving full description of the more important books of the month; and (3) an index to scientific periodicals. In these various departments the material is divided into subjects, which are arranged without any apparent system—unless it be a Russian one. The subject headings begin with Mathematics, and are followed by (2) Physics, (3) Botany, (4) Geology, (5) Astronomy, and so on. Notwithstanding this hap-hazard arrangement, there is no general index to guide the reader to the contents, so that those who care to avail themselves of the information given will be obliged to make an index for their own use. We hope that the editor of this undoubtedly useful and valuable periodical will correct his method in future issues. It seems also desirable that the titles of Russian books, now given in Russian type, be accompanied by a translation, either in French or English—the Russian being familiar to but few persons. The American agents for Pantobiblion are D. Appleton & Co. Subscription price per year, 24*s*.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish at once, in the Men with a Mission series, a sketch of John Howard, by James S. Ellis.

STREET & SMITH have just published, in their Select Series, a story entitled "Lost in New York," by Burke Brentford.

JOHN M. SCUDDER, Cincinnati, has in press the fifteenth edition, thoroughly revised, of his "Practical Treatise on the Diseases of Women."

FUNK & WAGNALLS will publish at once a volume in the American Reformers series entitled "Abraham Lincoln, the liberator," by Charles Wallace French.

THE Salem Observer has recently issued a volume entitled "Homes and Hearths of Salem." It consists of a collection of newspaper articles which have all the dignity and literary finish of essays.

THE WORTHINGTON COMPANY will publish, as No. 19 of their International Series, a novel entitled "Columbia, a Story of the Discovery of America," by John R. Musick, author of "The Banker of Bedford."

A. L. BURT, who has recently removed to 66 Reade St., N. Y., has now ready in the Manhattan Library, "Romola," "Undine, and other Tales," "Jane Eyre," "The Moonstone" and "The Last Days of Pompeii."

WALKER'S INTERNATIONAL ATLAS, recently published by "P. H. Walker, Philadelphia," is simply Cram's Atlas with another name, and is really published in Chicago. It is reported that the atlas is being sold under still other names.—Library Journal.

PORTER & COATES announce an édition de luxe in three volumes of Carlyle's "French Revolution." It will be appropriately illustrated with sixty photogravures. They will issue two editions, of which the large-paper edition will be limited to 250 copies.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to the Library Journal: "In looking over No. 4 of the Unknown library, we find that "The Friend of Death" is really the same work as P. A. de Alarcón's work, translated by Mrs. Darr, under the title of "The Strange Friend of Tito Gil."

A. LOVELL CO., N. Y., announce "Brunhilde, or, the last act of Norma," by Pedro A. de Alarcón, translated by Mrs. Francis J. A. Darr, and the same author's "The Strange Friend of Tito Gil." Both stories are delightful, and show to good advantage the many brilliant qualities and felicities of the author's style.

"OLD-FASHIONED ROSES," a London edition of James Whitcomb Riley's poems, which has been out of print since the great fire of a year ago at Bowen-Merrill Company's establishment in Indianapolis, is being reprinted. It will be the same neat little volume that it was in the first edition, and is expected to be ready shortly.

ESTES & LAURIAT have in preparation éditions de luxe of Scott's and George Eliot's works. The former will be in forty-five volumes, and the latter, to be entitled The Rosehill edition, will be in twenty octavo volumes. These editions will be gotten up in the same style as their editions of Thackeray and Bulwer, announced a short time ago.

F. T. NEELY, Chicago, has recently purchased from Mrs. Frank Leslie the plates and copyrights of all the juveniles, Christmas books, and illustrated story-books of travel and adventure formerly published by her. Mr. Neely announces for early publication an anonymous story entitled "The Heart of a Jew," which, it is said, will appeal alike to Jew and Gentile.

GEORGE P. ROWELL & CO., N. Y., have published a useful "Book for Advertisers," which contains lists of the best newspapers in the United States and Canada; also a complete list of all the class and trade journals. It is a compilation from their American Newspaper Directory, with the circulation ratings and some advertising rates, together with a statement of the best way to place newspaper advertising.

ON DECORATION DAY a game of ball was played in Cleveland, O., between the men of the Taylor, Austin Co. and those of the Burrows Brothers. The score at the end of the game stood, Taylor, Austin Co., 31; Burrows Bros. Co., 11. Both clubs returned home in good shape, satisfied that no matter which way the score went, a great game of ball had been played, and that the losers would have their innings some other time.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. have recently perfected their methods of binding, which enables them to turn out a book which, while bound firmly, opens easily without breaking. This is the outcome not of one thing, but careful attention to many details, such as the number of pages in a sheet, the stitching, the right kind of glue, and other things which can hardly be described, but which experiment has shown to be necessary in order to produce a satisfactory result.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just issued "On Newfound River," Thomas Nelson Page's first novel; a new issue of Max Müller's lecture on "The Science of Language," which is practically a new book, as the author has incorporated the results of the latest investigation in the science, adding much new matter, and re-writing many pages; and "Colored Studies, and a Mexican Campaign, T. A. Janvier's popular "Color Studies," to which the new story forms a continuation.

THE DE WITT PUBLISHING HOUSE, N. Y., announce for immediate publication a number of new books, among which are the following: "The Ice Book," a book of recipes for all manner of frozen dishes and beverages, by Mrs. H. Llewellyn Williams; "Little Folk's Stori[illegible] with illustrations by Paul Konewka; the "W[illegible] Doctor's Dream-Book," by Dr. Marcus B[illegible] min; "The Choice School Dialogues" No. [illegible] by H. Stern.

A. C. MCCLURG & CO. anno[illegible] fall a handsome two-volume edi[illegible] markable musical romance, "Ch[illegible] which first appeared over thir[illegible] created a furor of enthusiasm [illegible] will have an introduction a[illegible]

Upton and two portraits of Mendelssohn in his youth. Since its first appearance a generation of music lovers has come on the scene which can hardly be said to know "Charles Auchester," as the book is virtually out of print. To such it will be a revelation of the old Mendelssohn enthusiasm, the principal character, Saraphael, being an idealistic sketch of the favorite composer.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have in press "Taxidermy and Zoölogical Collecting," a new book by William T. Hornaday, for eight years Chief Taxidermist in the United States National Museum. It will be copiously and admirably illustrated, and will be a complete manual on these two subjects. The book is written in a popular rather than a technical style, and yet when necessary the details of the art of preserving birds, animals, etc., are described with the utmost precision. The general portions of the book relating to the collecting of specimens are written with a breeziness and vivacity that recall the author's spirited account of his adventures as described in "Two Years in the Jungle."

MR. W. LEWIS FRASER, the Century's art manager, on May 23 lectured to the Art Students' League, New York, on "Illustration in Its Relation to Fine Art." He began with a description of some of the art galleries of Europe, and said that when one had pursued a long course of study at home and abroad there were open to him but three things—portraiture, illustration, and teaching. The publishers of this country, he said, paid to illustrators last year more than double all the money paid in all the art exhibitions in the country for pictures by native artists. There were three essential qualifications for the illustrators. The first was imagination and ingenuity, the second was the ability to draw well, and the last a general knowledge of blocks and plates and the materials of which they consist.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING C[illegible] have in pre[illegible]ration Marie Bashkirtseff's "I[illegible] Pro[illegible] People," which ought to re[illegible] ra[illegible] better light than did her [illegible] sible Cases," a collectio[illegible] Besant, Frank R. character, and of the results of his apostolate," by Rev. W. B. Morris; and a new and popular edition, in uniform binding, of Mrs. Hope's works. Early in the fall a reprint of Moehler's "Symbolism" will be published by them as well as a small brochure on the late George V. Hecker.

THE following advance extract from the Preface of Mrs. Sutherland Orr's "Life of Robert Browning" gives some idea of the probable value of the book: "Such letters of Mr. Browning's as appear, whole or in part, in the present volume, have been in most cases given to me by the persons to whom they were addressed, or copied by Miss Browning from the originals under her care. . . . For my general material I have been largely indebted to Miss Browning. Her memory was the only existing record of her brother's boyhood and youth. It has been to me an unfailing as well as always accessible authority for that subsequent period of his life which I could only know in disconnected facts or his own fragmentary reminiscences. It is less true, indeed, to say that she has greatly helped me in writing this short biography than that without her help it could never have been undertaken."

THE CENTURY COMPANY has just ready the bound copies of the forty-first volume, Nov., 1890, to April, 1891, of The Century Magazine. The volume is remarkable for the opening papers on the search for gold in California, the first three instalments from the famous Talleyrand memoirs; F. Hopkinson Smith's complete story "Colonel Carter of Cartersville," and James Lane Allen's "Sister Dolorosa;" a number of interesting papers by prisoners of war, and others on various and timely subjects, besides an unusually liberal quota of tales of adventure, serials, novelettes and short stories, poems, etc. There are [illegible] illustrations by the best artists, including 24 full-page engravings. The Century Co.'s autumn list of new publications will include George Kennan's "Siberia and the Exile System," to be issued in two volumes with much matter not printed in The Century and brought down to date with illustrations, maps and [illegible] The [illegible] of the French Salons [illegible] a beautiful holiday book [illegible] ors; "The Land of the Lotus," travels, by W. Westcott Abbot, illustrated, [illegible] with maps, [illegible] Frank Stockton's "The [illegible] in The Century, [illegible] "Lady June," by Mrs. [illegible] Birch, the author of [illegible] nick Hill," "Lady June" [illegible] St. Nicholas; and "Mar[illegible] Lieut. T. FISHER UNWIN will publish shortly a curious book by Albert Hartshorne, entitled "Hanging in Chains." This barbarous practice is dealt with historically and pictorially, the illustrations being eleven in number, from drawings by the author. The work concludes with an account of the Halifax gibbet.

ACCORDING to present arrangements, the next work to be issued by the Villon Society will be a complete metrical translation of the writings of the great Persian poet Mohammed Shemseddin Hafiz, of Shiraz, the first undertaken in the English language, upon which Mr. John Payne, the translator of "The Book of the Thousand Nights and One Night," is at present engaged.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM has become the recipient of forty-two letters written by Keats to his sister, 1817–1820; also of the manuscripts of George Eliot's novels, with the exception of "Scenes of Clerical Life." The George Eliot MSS. were left by her to the late Mr. Charles Lewes for his life, and at his death to the British Museum.

WILLIAM MORRIS' "Story of the Glittering Plain," the first work which has emanated from his Kelmscott House Press at Hammersmith, is said by the Publishers' Circular to be a wonderful example of book production which should delight all true bibliophiles. The whole has been carried out under Mr. Morris' direct supervision and from his own designs, and is likely to become one of the chief literary treasures of the century.

U. HOEPLI, of Milan, has begun the publication of a little dictionary of general information, entitled "Piccola Enciclopedia Hoepli," compiled under the direction of Prof. Garollo. The work will be completed in about eighteen parts, which will make two volumes running about 3000 pages. The scope of the dictionary embraces information needed by people of culture in their general reading, and from the specimen pages submitted seems to be full and concisely worded.

IT will rejoice the hearts of bibliophiles as well as of Biblical students, says the N. Y. Evening Post, "to learn that the famous Greek manuscript of the New Testament, which dates from the fifth century and constitutes one of the chief treasures of the Vatican Library, where it is well known to scholars by its catalogue number 1209, is now being phototypically facsimiled by order of Pope Leo XIII., who intends to present a copy of the work to each of the principal libraries of Christendom. It is to be hoped that none of our large public and university libraries will be overlooked by the official dispensers of this generosity."

A. DAUL, formerly editor of the Deutsch-Amerikanische Acker- und Gartenbau-Zeitung, of Milwaukee, Wis., but who now resides at Weinheim, Baden, has nearly ready a work entitled "Der Farmer und die landwirthschaftlichen verhältnisse in den Ver. Staaten von Nord-Amerika: ein rathgeber für deutsche auswanderer nach, resp. deutsche eingewanderte in Amerika, welche sich der dortigen landwirthschaft widmen wollen, sowie für deutsch-amerik. Farmer welche ihren Wohnplatz verändern wollen." The author solicits correspondence with such as desire to publish his book in this country. The work is illustrated with 46 maps.

LOVELL'S OCCULT SERIES.

SCRIPTURES OF THE FUTURE.

Now ready, NEW and CHEAP EDITIONS. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

The Perfect Way; or, the Finding of Christ. By ANNA KINGSFORD and EDWARD MAITLAND.

OCCULT SERIES No. 5.

Also,

Clothed with the Sun. Being the Book of the Illuminations of ANNA KINGSFORD. Edited by EDWARD MAITLAND. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

OCCULT SERIES No. 9.

Some opinions of notable Students of Spiritual Science:

"If the Scriptures of the future are to be, as I firmly believe they will be, those which best interpret the Scriptures of the past, these writings will assuredly hold the foremost place among them."—BARON SPEDALIERI (The Kabalist).

"These books seem to me to be the chosen organs of the Divine Feminine Principle in view of the new revelation of Revelation."—ABBE ROCA.

"It is impossible for a spiritually intelligent reader to doubt that these teachings were received from within the astral veil. They are full of the concentrated and compact Wisdom of the Holy Heaven and of God. If Christians knew their own religion they would find in these priceless records our Lord Christ and His vital process abundantly illustrated and confirmed. That such communications are possible, and are permitted to be given to the world, is a sign, and a most promising sign, of our age. The editing and the notes, together with the appendix, are beyond all praise."—Rev. Dr. JOHN PULSFORD.

Also,

Dreams and Dream Stories. By Anna KINGSFORD. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

OCCULT SERIES No. 2.

"A lasting monument to Mrs. Kingsford's wonderful genius, great spirituality, and marvellous lucidity of insight into the hidden things of Nature and Religion."—Lucifer.

The above are three of the numbers of LOVELL'S OCCULT SERIES. Other volumes, bound uniformly, at the same prices are:

No. 1. The Blossom and the Fruit. By MABEL COLLINS. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

Among Occult works of absorbing interest, where truth, philosophy and the highest thought are voiced in words and phrases which superficially seem the ordinary renderings of romantic fiction, this work is most prominent. While the details and plot and thread of the story are more than sufficient to hold the reader's attention, the under-currents of occult teaching combine to make it one of the most valuable of all the contributions to occult literature.

No. 3. The Pilgrim and the Shrine. By EDWARD MAITLAND. Cloth, $1.00; paper 50 cents.

"The Pilgrim and the Shrine," by Edward Maitland, is a remarkable book giving the experience of one who breaks away from all received dogmas and accepts faith and finds a new religion in the idea that self-knowledge is the only true knowledge that the only sin against God is sin against ourselves.

No. 4. Magic—White and Black. By FRANZ HARTMAN, M.D. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

"Magic—White and Black," by Franz Hartmann, M.D., is a recent issue in Lovell's Occult Series. The work is one in which deep thought and a wonderful insight into the intricate workings of human life is shown, and the lover of occult literature cannot fail to find here topics of absorbing interest, while every thinking man must see the sound reasoning of a brilliant mind.

No. 6. Reincarnation. By E. D. WALKER. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"Reincarnation," by the late E. D. Walker, is an exhaustive treatise on the subject, tracing and quoting authorities in a comprehensive and lucid manner at once interesting and free from any detail and tiresome quotations in the text. An appendix carefully prepared gives reference to similar works in other languages, and the work is also carefully indexed. This edition is printed from plates which were revised and corrected by the author's but a few days before his unfortunate death.

No. 7. Idyll of the White Lotus. By MABEL COLLINS; AND EPITOME OF THEOSOPHICAL TEACHINGS AND ESOTERIC THEOSOPHY. By WILLIAM Q. JUDGE. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

The "Idyll of the White Lotus," which has been so popular in both England and America in expensive binding, has been issued in this series, together with an Epitome of Theosophical Teaching by Wm. Q. Judge. The "Idyll of the White Lotus" is a prose poem of wonderful strength, breathing an atmosphere of sublime philosophy at once entertaining, instructive and elevating.

No. 8. Neila Sen and My Casual Death. By J. H. CONNELLY. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

These two stories are considered most excellent exponents of occult thought while the interest of the reader is additionally enchained by the absorbing plot of the story and the charming diction of the author.

No. 10. Paracelsus. By Franz HARTMANN, M.D. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

Franz Hartmann, M.D., is also the author of "Magic—White and Black," "The Talking Image of Urur," and various other works which have been most successful.

No. 11. The Occult World. By A. P. SINNETT. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

No. 12. Esoteric Buddhism, By A. P. SINNETT. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

One Life; One Law. By Mrs. Myron REED. Cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

Dedicated "To all seekers after God."

The author begins her argument by stating that the great difference between the teachings of Jesus Christ and all former teachers of the Jewish Church, is that "He spoke as one having authority." His predecessors had confined themselves strictly to the letter of the Law, while He taught that God was a spirit. The people called His works miracles, but He claimed them as demonstrations of the Law of the Spirit.

She, an Allegory of the Church. By LEO MICHAEL. 12mo., half cloth, gilt, 50 cents.

This is a fanciful interpretation of Haggard's famous romance, in which "She" is represented as the symbol of the Christian Church.

"The author of this singular little book appears to be a devout Christian who has found in Haggard's famous story another Pilgrim's Progress."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Pathway of the Spirit. By Dr. J. H. DEWEY. 12mo., cloth, $2.00.

The Way, the Truth and the Life. By DR. J. H. DEWEY. 12mo., cloth, $1.25; paper, 75 cents.

The Open Door. By Dr. J. H. Dewey. Paper, 30 cents.

Complete Catalogue mailed on application.

The Following are Some of the Opinions of the Trade and Press:

"For the time that we have devoted to its examination, are well pleased with it."—ROBERT CLARKE & Co., Publishers and Booksellers, Cincinnati.

"You deserve well of the world till you die, and after, but the book trade is just as ungrateful as any republic, and although they may sling an occasional laurel wreath out your way, the silver buzzard and the golden eagle 'flieth not so fast nor so far.' There is but one Directory of the Book and Stationery Trade and that is Caspar's."—P. F. VAN EVEREN, New York.

"It is just splendid. The most complete book of the kind we have seen."—J. H. KURZENKNABE & SONS, Harisburg, Pa.

"I am greatly pleased with your Directory. It is the best work of the kind ever issued and deserves a large sale."—NATURAL SCIENCE PUBLISHING CO., New York.

"It seems more complete than anything of the kind I have seen before."—J. B. MARTINDALE, Chicago.

"We like it very much, and we don't know but what it is the best thing of the kind we have ever seen."—P. R. McCARGO & Co., Boston.

"Am very grateful to you for the conscientious care and painstaking effort in preparing so valuable and so complete a work. Be kind enough to enter my name, and mail me all addenda sheets in future, and do not fail to notify me of any new project in this line you may engage in."—GEO. H. COLBY, Bookseller, Lancaster, N. H.

"We have looked it over with great interest and appreciate the fact that it will be of great value to us."—W. O. DAVIE & Co., Booksellers, Cincinnati.

"I think your book a most valuable one and believe it will be better appreciated as it becomes better known."—WILL H. LYONS, Newport, Ky.

"Even a cursory examination of this important directory will convince any one of the thorough manner in which it has been put together and of the value of the completed work. Mr. Caspar has produced a work which, if properly kept up from year to year, will be the standard."—The American Stationer, New York City.

"The Appendix to 'Caspar's Directory of the American Book, News, and Stationery Trades' is a most valuable compilation, exhaustive and complete. The information it contains is absolutely unique and not to be procured from any other source. Hence it is of the first importance to every one in the trades. It is admirably arranged; the references are simple, and being grouped under special heads, makes consultation a matter of little or no difficulty. Such a work is really a great trade textbook, from which the initiated can feel the pulse of the whole book-publishing world. It is a monument of careful, painstaking and accurate labor, and is as reliable as it is extensive. . . . The preparation of this useful volume must have been a work of immense labor and patience, and Mr. Caspar must be congratulated on the success which he has achieved. It is a manual for publishers, booksellers, newsdeales, stationers, and libraries, indispensable to them all."—The American Bookseller.

One volume, large 8vo, 1450 pages, bound in half black cowhide, $12 net.

For the convenience of those who send out Travelling Agents, the publisher has had the Geographical Part bound separately in a handy shape, at $13 for the two volumes. These volumes will NOT be sold separately.

THE BEST KEY TO EDUCATIONAL BOOKS.

Imprint edition—without publishers' advertisements.

THE

American Educational Catalogue

For 1891 [Twenty-second Year].

THE AMERICAN EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE, whose value to the trade is proved by the fact that it is now in its twenty-second year, claims to be the best practical aid to the dealer in or buyer of school-books.

With its alphabetical arrangement by authors, its separate class-index, carefully sub-classified to an extent not followed by any other catalogue, its completeness and accuracy, it is presented as the best finding-list, the most convenient order-list, and the most satisfactory class-catalogue for school use.

The catalogue has recently been remade, to omit books which have dropped out of use and to include all live books, and it adds all new books (ready or to be ready for the fall) in their proper alphabetical place.

The page giving the key to publishers will not be given in imprint editions unless specially ordered. The Telegraphic Code will not be continued, as the code plan is reported to us to give more trouble than it saves.

This Catalogue is specially planned to be of service for circulation by retailers among schools and private buyers. The imprint edition possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS.

With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5.00; per 1000, $40.00.

There is no extra charge for printing name, business card, etc., on the imprint page; the last page is left blank at the disposal of the dealer, but any copy for that page, advertising special lines or general business, will be set up and printed thereon for $5.00, or $1.00 if plate is sent.

 Copy for imprint and shipping directions should accompany the order.

The regular Educational Number of "THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY" will be supplied at 25 cents per copy, or five for $1.00, postpaid.

This is Mr. Page's first novel. It is deeply romantic and the narrative, which deals with the simple but profound sentiments of human nature, is varied by situations of genuine dramatic power. The scene is laid in Virginia, the days "befo' the war," and the characters the typical ones common to the time and place.

Colored Studies and A Mexican Campaign.

By T. A. Janvier. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

To the author's popular "Color Studies" is now added "A Mexican Campaign," in which the same characters continue their adventures in Mexico.

The Science of Language.

Founded on lectures delivered at the Royal Institution in 1861 and 1863. By Prof. F. Max Müller. With illustrations. From new plates. 2 vols., cr. 8vo, $6.00.

This reissue of Prof. Müller's great treatise is virtually a new work, the author having incorporated the results of the latest investigation in the science, adding much new matter, and rewriting many pages.

THE RAILWAY PROBLEM

BY

A. B. STICKNEY,

Chairman Board Directors of Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City R. R.

Mr. Stickney, for more than 20 years, has been active in the construction and operation of railroads. He was the first General Manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and is now financial head and controlling spirit of one of the largest Western railroads. A millionaire railroad owner and manager, he advocates Government control of freight and passenger rates, and supports his views with facts and arguments that compel belief. Every one interested in railroads or in public questions should test and clear their views by reading Mr. Stickney's remarkable book.

No other book this year has received equal attention from the Press.

Crown 8vo, 14 illustrative diagrams, cloth, $2.00; half leather, gilt top, cloth sides, $2.50.

[ESTABLISHED 1852].

PUBLICATION OFFICE, FRANKLIN SQUARE (330 PEARL STREET), NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as second-class matter.

VOL. XXXIX., No. 24. NEW YORK, June 13, 1891. WHOLE No. 1011.

CHARLES H. SERGEL & CO.

Respectfully announce to the Publishers and Booksellers of the United States that they are now the sole proprietors of the book-trade journal recently established at Chicago, and entitled

THE WESTERN BOOKSELLER.

Beginning with the first number in July the paper will be doubled in size, and the advertising rates advanced, but the subscription price will remain one dollar a year. This issue, dated July 4, will be a special summer number.

THE WESTERN BOOKSELLER will in no way conflict with the excellent trade journals now in the field. It was established in the belief that there is need for a book-trade paper between New York and San Francisco. It will be a fearless, unbiassed and independent journal, aiming to be useful to Publishers and Booksellers.

Sample copies sent free on application.

THE BEST KEY TO EDUCATIONAL BOOKS.

Imprint edition—without publishers' advertisements.

THE

American Educational Catalogue

For 1891 [Twenty-second Year].

THE AMERICAN EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE, whose value to the trade is proved by the fact that it is now in its twenty-second year, claims to be the best practical aid to the dealer in or buyer of school-books.

With its alphabetical arrangement by authors, its separate class-index, carefully sub-classified to an extent not followed by any other catalogue, its completeness and accuracy, it is presented as the best finding-list, the most convenient order-list, and the most satisfactory class-catalogue for school use.

The catalogue has recently been remade, to omit books which have dropped out of use and to include all live books, and it adds all new books (ready or to be ready for the fall) in their proper alphabetical place.

The page giving the key to publishers will not be given in imprint editions unless specially ordered. The Telegraphic Code will not be continued, as the code plan is reported to us to give more trouble than it saves.

This Catalogue is specially planned to be of service for circulation by retailers among schools and private buyers. The imprint edition possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS.

With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5.00; per 1000, $40.00.

There is no extra charge for printing name, business card, etc., on the imprint page; the last page is left blank at the disposal of the dealer, but any copy for that page, advertising special lines or general business, will be set up and printed thereon for $5.00, or $1.00 if plate is sent.

 Copy for imprint and shipping directions should accompany the order.

The regular Educational Number of "THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY" will be supplied at 25 cents per copy, or five for $1.00, postpaid.

NOTES IN SEASON.

BRADLEY & WOODRUFF, Boston, will publish shortly a book written especially for them by Canon Fredk. W. Farrar, entitled "Social and Present Day Questions."

JOHN WILEY & SONS have in preparation a work on "Stones for Building and Decoration," by George P. Merrill, Curator of Geology in U. S. Museum, Washington, D. C.

HENRY HOLT & CO. announce a "History of the Politics of the State of New York," by Prof. Charles H. Livermore, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. They will publish at once Jerome K. Jerome's "On the Stage—and Off," now in its thirteenth English edition. In this volume Mr. Arrowsmith tells with mild exaggeration, great good nature, and much vividness, the story of his failure as an actor. In "Stage-Land" he describes the stage from the "front;" in "On the Stage—and Off" the reader is taken on "the boards" with him, and let into many of the mysteries of the profession.

D. LOTHROP COMPANY have just ready "Wordsworth for the Young," a garland of the great lover of nature's most poetic thoughts, especially adapted to children, by Mrs. Cynthia M. St. John; "Stories of the Land of Evangeline," a series of charming historical stories of life in old Acadia, the modern Nova Scotia, by Grace Dean McLeod; and by special arrangement with his publishers, three volumes by R. W. Raymond, viz.: "Two Ghosts," "Brave Hearts" and "The Man in the Moon." They also have ready new editions of "Nursery Finger Plays," by Emilie Poulsson; "There and Back," by George MacDonald; "The Dalzells of Daisydown," by E. Vinton Blake; "Gladys: a Romance," by Mary G. Darling; and "Stories of New France," by Agnes M. Machar.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO. have just issued "Diana Fontaine," by Algernon Ridgeway, a story of life in Virginia immediately after the war, which will be one of their American Novel Series; "Quita," by Cecil Dunstan, author of "The County," which recently attracted much attention; and "Di," by Squier L. Pierce, a new illustrated tale of married life, of which the opening scenes took place on a canal-boat many years ago. They have also just ready a new novel by the ever-popular Captain King, who this time takes his readers to the Black Hills of Dakota, and then to a fort beyond Cheyenne; also a third edition of Persifor Frazer's "Tables for the Determination of Minerals," a work that mineralogists will find entirely revised and up to date.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish at once "Church and Creed," containing three sermons by the Rev. R. Heber Newton, as follows: "Fold or Flock, or, Christianity, not Ecclesiasticism;" "The Nicene Creed, a charter of freedom;" and "How to Read the Creed, or, the principles of creed interpretation." The first of these sermons was preached the Sunday after the remonstrance against the alleged uncanonical practices of Rev. W. S. Rainsford and Rev. R. Heber Newton in inviting non-Episcopal ministers to speak in their churches; the second, the Sunday after the appearance of the presentation of the author to the Bishop of New York as by current rumor charged with heresy; the third continues the consideration of the Nicene Creed. They have also in press "The Living World: whence it came, and whither it is drifting," a review of the speculations concerning the origin and significance of life; of the facts known in regard to its development, and suggestions as to the direction in which the development is now tending, by H. W. Conn, Professor of Biology in Wesleyan University, and the author of "The Evolution of To-Day." They expect to issue Volume III. of the Memoirs of Talleyrand before the close of July.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); (Q. 4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.) D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Abbot, Edwin A. Philomythus, an antidote against credulity: a discussion of Cardinal Newman's essay on ecclesiastical miracles. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 10+259 p. 12°, cl., $1.25.

Appleton, Elizabeth Haven. In memory of Elizabeth Haven Appleton is printed this selection from her lectures. Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1891. 2–267 p. por. O. cl., $2.

Miss Appleton was for twenty years at the head of one of the leading schools of Cincinnati. She was a woman of remarkable strength of character and richly dowered intellectually. She contributed articles to the magazines and was a writer of some excellent short stories. Ten of her lectures are included in this volume, preceded by a brief memoir read before the Historical Society of Cincinnati, Dec. 1, 1890. The lectures have for their subjects: Alexander Pope, The novel of the eighteenth century, The Kemble family, The Trollope family, The French female novelists, Madame de Maintenon, Louis XV. and his family, The Puritan minister, Ohio, and Cincinnati.

Argles, Mrs. Marg., ("The Duchess," pseud.; now Mrs. Hungerford.] A little rebel. N. Y., J: W. Lovell Co., [United States Book Co., 1891.] 121 p. D. (Lovell's Westminster ser., no. 32.) pap., 25 c.

B. and R. Helen Elwood, the female detective. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] c. '85. 25 p. 1 il. D. (Lovell's detective ser., no. 15.) pap., 25 c.

Barrett, Jay A. Evolution of the ordinance of 1787; with an account of the earlier plans for the government of the northwest territory. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. 4+94 p. O. (University of Nebraska Seminary papers.) pap., $1.

The ordinance of 1787 was the first active constitution of the northwest territory of the United States. This pamphlet gives the text of the ordinance and a connected history of the events and necessities which led to its adoption. From 1783 to 1787 this ordinance caused endless discussions in Congress. Contains valuable bibliography of the subject.

Belot, Adolphe. Mademoiselle Giraud, my wife; from the French, by A. D. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1891. c. 5–394 p. por. il. O. pap., $1.

The story was written with the purpose of warning parents against sending girls to boarding-schools, where they meet the temptation of forming abnormal friendships among their own sex. Emile Zola has written a preface dwelling upon the great success of the book and the good it is calculated to do. The publishers have used the French pictures, which are sensuous and are calculated to give a wrong impression of the material they illustrate. The subject is delicate and the author is French, but his purpose is serious.

Bernhard, Marie. The rector of St. Luke's: a novel; tr. by Elise L. Lathrop. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1891. c. 2+343 p. D. (International lib.) hf. leath., $1.25; pap. 75c.

At a large dinner-party Annie Gerold meets three men—the rector of St. Luke's, his cousin, a handsome Uhlan, and the famous artist Delmont. These men all learn to love the pretty, sunny heroine, and she prefers the artist. The rector learns a secret about Delmont in his ministrations at the prison, and battles long before his conscience decides how he shall use it. The chief interest centres in the strong, helpful character of this rector, who is an outcast from his family because he refuses to abandon the profession to which he feels himself called.

Bersier, Eugene, D.D. Twelve sermons; tr. by Mrs. Alexander Waugh. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1891. 12°, cl., $1.25.

Bible. Psalms chronologically arranged: an amended version; with historical introd. and explanatory notes. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 13+464 p. 12°, cl., $1.75.

Bigelow, Melville M. Elements of the law of torts for the use of students. 4th ed. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1891. c. 28+382 p. D. (Students' ser.) leatherette, net, $2.50; shp., $3.

Boulger, Mrs. Dora Henrietta, ["Theo Gift," pseud.] Pretty Miss Bellew. N. Y, G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 216 p. D. (Seaside lib., no. 1844.) pap., 20 c.

Borrowings; comp. by ladies of the First Unitarian Church of Oakland, California. San Francisco, Cal., W: Doxey, 1891. c. 4–83 p. S. hf. cl., 75 c.

The title of this little compilation is taken from Montaigne—"I do not number my borrowings, I weigh them." The extracts are in poetry and prose, and from many sources.

Bosworth, Francke H., M.D. Taking cold. Detroit, G: S. Davis, 1891. 16°, pap., 25 c.

Castle, Egerton. Consequences: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. 417 p. D. cl., $1.

Opens with an account of a marriage entered into in haste and repented of at leisure. George Kerr and his Spanish wife are so mismated, that after a tempestuous quarrel on the anniversary of their wedding-day he determines to commit suicide. His plans miscarry, however, and in place of shooting himself he concludes to live, but in another country and under another name. He ingeniously lays his plot, and when he is on a Cunarder on his way to New York, under the name of David Fargus, his wife and friends are reading of the accidental death of George Kerr. The consequences of this act are many and recoil on Kerr in the end. His wife dies broken-hearted, leaving a son, whose fate is singularly influenced by the father he has never known.

Chaplin, H. W. Cases on criminal law: a coll. of reported cases on some of the leading heads of the criminal law. Prepared for use in the law school of Harvard University. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1891. c. 8+511 p. O. cl., net, $5.

Churchill, Seton. General Gordon: a Christian hero. 2d ed. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1891.] 4+274 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Written to meet the demand for a popular biography for young men and others which shall focus the events of General Charles George Gordon's life into one handy volume, and which shall at the same time give a clear insight into the religious life of this Christian hero. This is combined with a sketch of his military, political and social life, setting forth not only the deeds of the man, but the motive which prompted them.

See notice "Weekly Record," P. W., August 25, 1888 [865]. Formerly published by L. K. Strouse. The improvements in this issue consists in an appendix, containing Letters to the Albany Evening Journal, Words of warning from Washington and Storey, Extracts from Bishop Potter's centennial address, and the Civil service statute, a new index and about thirty pages of fresh matter added to the introduction.

Cooke, F: H. The law of life insurance, including accident insurance and insurance by mutual benefit societies. N. Y., Baker, Voorhis & Co., 1891. c. 59+321 p. O. shp., $4.25.

Cusack, Mary Frances Clare, [Sister Mary Frances Clare, "Nun of Kenmare."] What Rome teaches. N. Y., The Baker & Taylor Co., 1891. 280 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Professes to give "a clear and correct account of the doctrines taught by the Roman Catholic Church," the author's authority for her statements being taken from Roman Catholic sources.

Cutler, Caroline F. Primary manual training. Bost., Educational Pub. Co., 1891. 5+130 p. sq. D. cl., 75 c.

Practical methods are presented of teaching manual training in primary schools. They include methods in form study, clay, paper and color work.

Daniel, J: W. A treatise on the law of negotiable instruments, including bills of exchange; promissory notes; negotiable bonds and coupons; checks; bank notes; [etc.] 4th ed. N. Y., Baker, Voorhis & Co., 1891. c. 2 v. 126+941; 11+989 p. O. shp., $12.60.

Davies, Rev. J. Llewelyn. Order and growth as involved in the spiritual constitution of human society. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 141 p. 12°, cl., $1.

Delpit, A. His two loves; from the 30th French ed., by R. H. Merriam. St. Paul, Minn., The Price-McGill Pub. Co., 1891. c. 2+299 p. D. (Idle moments ser., no. 3.) pap., 50 c.

On Maurice de Fonde's love for a twin sister is founded a novel of sensational and not always irreproachable scenes and characters. The action is in Paris, Arnay-le-Comte and Aix-le-Bains.

Dorsey, Mrs. Anna Hansom. Two ways; [also,] Tom-boy. Balt., Md., J. Murphy & Co., 1891. c. 220+262 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The school-girls at the Convent of the Visitation are the characters of the first story, although the interest centres in the individual action of Bessie Shaw and Hester Milburn. A dissimilarity in the characters of these girls betrays itself continually. Their daily action is also very diverse and conveys a moral. "Tom-Boy" was the name accorded to Gay Mashen because of her wild pranks. Some of these are told in the story, although the most interesting part describes Gay's conversion to Catholicism.

Drewry, Edith Stewart. Baptized with a curse; a romance. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 238 p. D. (Seaside lib., no. 1846.) pap., 20 c.

Fairchild, M. Augusta, M.D. Woman and health: a mother's hygienic handbook. Peoria, Ill., printed by J. W. Franks & Sons, 1890, [1891.] c. '90. 7+384 p. O. cl., $2.50.

In a series of conversations between a doctor and two of his pupils a great amount of information is evolved regarding all forms of disease peculiar to women and children, and the best treatment for them. The remedies are simple, and consist chiefly in the use of hot water externally and internally, dieting, exercise, rest, rubbing, etc.

Fowler, T: D.D. Elements of deductive logic: designed mainly for the use of junior students in the universities. 9th ed., rev. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 16°, cl., $1.75.

Fowler, T: D.D. The elements of inductive logic: designed mainly for the use of students in the universities. 5th ed., rev. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 25+365 p. 16°, cl., $1.75.

French, C: Wallace. Abraham Lincoln, the liberator: a biographical sketch. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1891. c. 398 p. D. (American reformers.) cl., $1.50.

The author has no excuse for adding this simple work to the long list of biographies already in existence, beyond that of a deep reverence and love for the great man "who, though dead, yet speaketh." And if a single reader shall obtain a truer appreciation of his character, and a deeper love for the country whose altar was stained with the blood of so noble a sacrifice, the effort will not have been made in vain.—Preface.

Freytag, Gustav. The lost manuscript: a novel; tr. by Mrs. — Malcolm. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. 259 p. O. pap., 50 c.

Gannett, W: C., and Jones, Jenkin Lloyd. The faith that makes faithful. 15th thousand. Chic., C: H. Kerr, 1891. c. '86. 5+131 p. T. (Unity lib., no. 3.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Eight sermons: Blessed be drudgery, faithfulness, I have a friend, tenderness, a cup of cold water, the seamless robe, wrestling and blessing, the divine benediction.

George, H: Protection; or, free trade: an examination of the tariff question with especial regard to the interests of labor. N. Y., H: George & Co., 1891. c. '86. 5+122 p. D. (The single tax lib., v. 1, no. 37.) pap., 25 c.

Grady, H: W. Life and labors of Henry W. Grady, his speeches, writings, etc. Atlanta, Ga., N. C. Hudgins & Co., 1890 [1891.] c. 488 p. por. D. cl., subs., $2.25; full mor., $3.25.

Mr. Grady was born in 1858, in Athens, Georgia, and died Dec. 23, 1889. Mr. Grady had a strong emotional nature and fine oratorical powers, which he used chiefly at the call of patriotism. He was indefatigable in his work for improving the condition of the South, and his sudden death in the prime of manhood was an irreparable loss in many directions. This biography is written with enthusiasm. Mr. Grady was for many years Southern correspondent of the N. Y. Herald.

Greenhill, Alfred G: Differential and integral calculus; with applications. 2d. ed. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891. 14+455 p. 12°, cl., $2.60.

Haggard, H. Rider. Eric Brighteyes. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 269 p. S. (Lovell's Westminster ser., no. 31.) pap., 25 c.

Hanscom, Elizabeth Deering. Lamb's essays: a biographical study; selected and annotated by Elizabeth Deering Hanscom. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1891.] c. 6+281 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The compiler has prefaced her book with a biographical sketch of Charles Lamb. Thirty-one of his essays have been selected which contain biographical matter. Miss Hanscom has hunted out the meaning of all the references and names included in these essays, and explained it in a series of notes and annotations. Before each essay she has introduced a selection from some one of the many biographers of Charles Lamb which bears specially upon the essay. The essays, with one exception, are copied from the magazine in which they first appeared, and contain many passages which were afterward omitted in editions of Charles Lamb's writings.

Hardy, T: A group of noble dames. N. Y., Harper, 1891. c. 4+292 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Of the ten stories included in this volume some are pathetic, some humorous, some strangely dramatic, and all are related in a masterful and most entertaining manner. The noble dames who are the heroines, respectively, of these tales, are: the first Countess of Wessex, Barbara of the House of Grebe, the Marchioness of Stonehenge, Lady Mottisfont, the Lady Icenway, Squire Petrick's lady, Lady Anna Baxby, the Lady Penelope, the Duchess of Hamptonshire, and the Honorable Laura.

Hartzell, J. Hazard. Application and achievement: essays; ed. by his sons, [Albert Aukeny and F: Bassett Hartzell.] N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. c. 5+268 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Nine essays on genius, character, currents, manners, opportunity, honor, adversity, letters and attainments.

Haweis, Rev. H. R. The broad church; or, what is coming? N. Y., United States Book Co., 1891. 276 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The following questions are discussed and answered in this volume, which claims to be a reply to the religious arguments of Robert Elsmere: Is the broad church dishonest? Are the creeds creditable? Is God omnipotent? Was Jesus God Incarnate? Is the imitation of Christ possible? Is the Holy Ghost a reality? Is the church a figment? Are the clergy obsolete? Are the saints intelligible? Is the great hereafter a dream?

Hillern, Wilhelmine v. Höher als die kirche; ed., with notes, by S. Williard Clary. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1891. c. 3+63 p. D. (Heath's modern language ser.) pap., 15 c.

A pretty Swiss love story which has been widely used in schools. The annotator was formerly instructor in German in the University of Michigan.

Hinchman, T. H., and Bell, Ja. John Calvin: his errors, ignorance, misconceptions and absurdities, and the errors of Presbyterianism disclosed and exposed. N. Y., P: Eckler, 1891. c. 82 p. O. pap., $1.

Extracts from the correspondence between T. H. Hinchman, an orthodox Presbyterian of Detroit, Michigan, and James Bell, once a student of theology in Brooklyn, N. Y. The correspondence was the result of an editorial which appeared in the N. Y. Sun in the early part of November, 1890. Mr. Bell points out the wide difference between Christianity and religion, and attacks John Calvin mercilessly.

Hitchcock, T: Unhappy loves of men of genius. N. Y., Harper, 1891. c. 11+212 p. por. S. cl., $1.25.

These sketches are narratives of the unhappy loves of celebrated men and of women distinguished for their gifts and accomplishments. They relate to Gibbon and Madame Necker, Dr. Johnson and Mrs. Thrale, Goethe and Charlotte von Stein, Mozart and Aloysia Weber, Cavour and the unknown, and Irving and Mrs. Carlyle. Aside from their strong human interest, the sketches are delightfully written. Illustrated with twelve portraits.

Holmes, Mrs. Mary J. The Cameron pride; or, purified by suffering. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1888 [1891.] c. '67. 415 p. D. (Madison sq. ser.) pap., 25 c.

Howells, W: D. April hopes: a novel. Popular ed. N. Y., Harper, 1891. 8°, pap., 75 c.

Howard, J: R. Henry Ward Beecher: a study of his personality, career and influence of public affairs. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hurlbert, 1891. c. '87. 7-161 p. pors. D. cl., 75 c.

The contents of this volume first appeared as the editor's preface to the volume of Mr. Beecher's "Patriotic addresses in America and England, from 1850 to 1885," published in 1887. Many inquiries having been made for a concise life of Mr. Beecher, this biographical sketch is offered. Originally intended to cover only his political career, it grew almost of a necessity to a study of the circumstances of his life, which made him a leader and a helper of his brother-men simply by the power of his strong individuality.

Hume, Fergus. Monsieur Judas: a paradox. N. Y. and St. Louis, The Waverley Co., [1891.] 192 p. D. (The world lib., no. 10.) pap., 25 c.

A mysterious death in Jarlchester gives rise to the question, was it murder or suicide? After the coroner's inquest the verdict of the jury was so opposed to the theories of a London detective, that the latter determined to satisfy himself as to who murdered Sebastian Melstane. His efforts implicate several people, among them "Monsieur Judas," and result in sensational incidents and unexpected developments. By the author of "The mystery of a hansom cab."

Jacobs, Jos. Essays and reviews from the Athenæum. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1891. 12°, cl., $1.25.

Janvier, T: A. Color studies and a Mexican campaign. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1891. c. '85, '91. 5+391 p. D. (Scribner's yellow cover ser.) cl., $1.; pap., 50 c.

Keller, Martha Caroline. Love and rebellion: a story of the civil war and reconstruction. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, [1891.] c. 235 p. D. (Sunnyside ser., no. 26.) pap., 25 c.

Begins on a rich plantation in Louisiana before the war and describes the ease, luxury and hospitality of Southern life, with many details. The great change wrought by the war and the special sufferings of the higher classes are brought out. The author has a political purpose. She strives to make clear "the necessity of eliminating the negro from American politics. Their manifest incapacity to deal properly with governmental affairs is indisputable. The situation as it now stands deserves to be candidly considered."

Kipling, Rudyard. The story of the Gadsbys; [also,] Under the Deodars. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1891.] 3+323 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Lodge, H: Cabot. Boston. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1891. c. 11+242 p. D. (Historic towns.) cl., $1.25.

In addition to the sources used by the author in his "Short history of the English colonies in America," two chapters of which he has included in this volume, he has drawn upon "Sewall's diary," which is the most important contemporary authority on colonial Massachusetts. In ten chapters the history of Boston is given to the final separation of the colonies from England and its being incorporated as a city in 1822. The eleventh chapter gives a quick glance at the growth of the city, and points out to Bostonians their special privileges, dangers and responsibilities. Full index covering seventeen pages.

Lorne, Marquis of, [J: G: E: H: D. S. Campbell.] From shadow to sunlight. N. Y., Appleton, 1891. 157 p. S. hf. cl., 50 c.

The story opens in Scotland and is then transferred to America, the noble author showing great familiarity with both countries. The plot is very simple, dealing with the love of a young Englishman for a fair American.

McArthur, R. S., D.D., Robinson, C: Seymour, D.D., McGrew, Rev. G. H., and others. Why I am what I am. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, 1891. 160 p. D. (The peerless ser., no. 43.) pap., 25 c.

The reasons for belonging to different religious bodies are given by Rev. A. S. MacArthur for the Baptists; Rev. Charles Seymour Robinson for Presbyterians; Rev. G. H. McGrew for Methodists; Rev. MacKie, C: Paul. With the admiral of the Ocean sea: a narrative of the first voyage to the Western world, drawn mainly from the diary of Christopher Columbus. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1891. c. 3–371 p. D. cl., $1.75.

The narrative endeavors to follow as closely as may be the language of the actual participants as contained in accounts left by Columbus himself and those directly associated with him. They planned the voyage that led to the discovery of America and made it, and the author believes their account of what befell them, though many details have been questioned by modern critical research. The appendix gives some notes upon the main points in dispute. The author gives the Spanish form of the hero's name, Cristóval Colon.

Mendelsohn, S. The criminal jurisprudence of the ancient Hebrews; comp. from the Talmud and other rabbinical writings, and compared with Roman and English penal jurisprudence. Balt., Md., M. Curlander, 1891. c. '90. 280 p. O. cl., net, $2.50.

The author is rabbi of the congregation of "Temple of Israel," in Wilmington, N. C. In his book he endeavors to accomplish the two-fold object of acquainting those to whom the Talmud is unknown with the important part of its contents bearing on criminal jurisprudence and of contributing toward the vindication of the ancient literature of the Israelites against attacks upon it on the score of its cruelty and bloodthirstiness. Works of generally recognized authority are referred to for data of historical matters as well as of Greek, Roman or English law. In an appendix is given an essay on the Talmud which originally appeared in the South Atlantic Monthly for July and August, 1878.

Merryfield, Frank, ed. Molly's story: being a family history as related by a faithful servant. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1891.] 3+336 p. D. (Seaside lib., no. 1850.) pap., 20 c.

The general statutes relating to the formation, regulation, etc., of corporations for manufacturing, mining, etc., and for the erection and keeping of hotels, as contained in the 7th ed. of the revised statutes; with all the amendments and supplementary acts to and including the year 1891, [etc.] N. Y. and Alb., Banks & Bros., 1891. c. 10+1061–1176+176+12+176 a to h+177–194 p. Q. pap., $1.50.

Ogelsby, T. K. The Britannica answered and the South vindicated: a defence of the South against the aspersions of the Encyclopædia Britannica, and a criticism of that work. Montgomery, Ala., Press of the Alabama Printing Co., 1891. c. 60 p. O. pap., 50 c.

"Since the Revolution days the few thinkers of America born south of Mason and Dixon's line are outnumbered by those belonging to the single State of Massachusetts; nor is it too much to say that mainly by their connection with the North the Carolinas have been saved from sinking to the level of Mexico or the Antilles."—Encyclopædia Britannica. This statement the author refutes with hot indignation. These pages comprise articles published in the Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser in January, 1891. They have been annotated and enlarged and are reprinted by general request.

Oliphant, Mrs. Margaret O. W. Memoir of the life of Laurence Oliphant and of Alice Oliphant, his wife. N. Y., Harper, 1891. 2 v., 8°, cl., $7.

Orr, Mrs. Sutherland. Life and letters of Robert Browning. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1891. 2 v., 11+324; 7+325–646 p. D. cl., $3.

The author has already, in her "Handbook to Robert Browning's works," first published in 1885, proved herself competent for the task she has now undertaken. For general material she acknowledges her indebtedness to Miss Browning. The letters which appear whole or in part have in most cases been loaned by the persons to whom they are addressed, or copied by Miss Browning from the originals under her care. Miss Browning's memory was the only existing record of her brother's boyhood and youth. Much space is devoted to the letters of Mrs. Browning which describe the ideally happy married life of the poet. Mrs. Orr hazards the conjecture that the poet's peculiar style was connected with some deficiencies in his education, and particularly with his neglect of logic and mathematics. He was to a considerable extent self-educated. The volumes give much abstract criticism of the poet's works. Index.

On Newfound River, which runs through one of the most fruitful sections of Virginia, lay the lands of the old, proud family of Landon. The story tells of a family feud which had lasted for three generations brought to an end by the politic little god of love. Southern family life before the war is described with all the finish of the author of "In old Virginia," "Two little Confederates," etc.

Parsons, Ja. Russell, jr. Prussian schools through American eyes: a report to the New York State Department of Public Instruction. Syracuse, N. Y., C: W. Bardeen, 1891. c. 7+91 p. O. (School bulletin pub.) cl., $1.

This report of the Prussian elementary school system, which, since 1816, ranks as the best in the world, was prepared at the request of Andrew S. Draper, Superintendent of Public Instruction for the State of New York, and appears in the thirty-seventh annual report transmitted to the Legislature, in January, 1891. Mr. Parsons had been school commissioner for Rensselaer Co., N. Y., for several years, and when he became United States Minister to Aix-la-Chapelle, Mr. Draper wisely concluded no better man could be found to gather the desired information.

Parsons, S: jr. Landscape gardening. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. c. 21+329 p. il. Q. cl., $3.50.

The writer is Superintendent of Parks, New York City. Notes and suggestions on lawns and lawn planting, laying out and arrangement of country places, large and small parks, cemetery plots, railway station lawns, deciduous and evergreen trees and shrubs, the hardy border, bedding plants, rock-work, etc. The practical information is made clear by 175 illustrations. Handsomely gotten up.

Peck, W: A popular handbook and atlas of astronomy; designed as a complete guide to a knowledge of heavenly bodies, and as an aid to those possessing telescopes. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. 9+176 p. il. pl. and diagrams, Q. cl., $5.50.

The object of the work is to supply the knowledge that is required by every well-educated individual of the nature of the heavenly bodies and their position in the universe. Numerous important tables are given. The plates of views, charts, diagrams, etc., have been specially constructed by the author, who has aimed to make them as accurate and comprehensible as possible. Throughout the work the wants of the owners of small telescopes have been considered, especially in the atlas portion. Forty-four illustrations are given in the text, and 50 tables. Index. The author is astronomer to the city of Edinburgh, and has written "Constellations, and how to find them," and other important books.

These lectures were delivered in the Church of the Holy Trinity at Philadelphia in April and May, 1890. The Bishop of Iowa is eminently fitted to give an authentic historical account of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America, and to explain the origin and the necessity of its constitutional regulations.

Prime, W: C. I go a-fishing. New popular ed. N. Y., Harper, 1891. 8°, pap., 50 c.

Rice, Edwin, D.D. People's commentary on the Gospel according to St. John; cont. the common version, 1611, and the revised version, 1881 (American readings and renderings); with critical, exegetical and applicative notes. Phil., The American S. S. Union, 1891. c. 6+335 p. maps, il. D. (Green fund book, no. 8.) cl., $1.25.

This is a complete commentary on the Gospel according to John. It is the only one issued at a moderate price in which the comments are based upon both the common and revised versions. The plan is similar to that adopted in three volumes on the earlier Gospels, and which have been received with marked favor by pastors, Biblical students and Sabbath-school workers.

Scidmore, Eliza Ruhamah. Jinrikisha days in Japan. N. Y., Harper, 1891. c. 8+386 p. il. D. cl., $2.

A "jinrikisha" is a two-wheeled carriage, propelled by coolies through the streets and roads of Japan. This volume, therefore, embraces a description of the most interesting localities in Japan as seen from a jinrikisha, together with chapters on Japanese life and manners, hospitalities, festivals, amusements, and a variety of other entertaining themes. The unassuming chronicle is the outcome of two visits, covering nearly three years' stay in the Island Empire, a period during which a continued residence was maintained, by turns, in each of the larger ports, while many weeks were spent in Kioto, Kara, and Nikko.

Tinseau, Leon de. Sealed lips (Bouche close).

N. Y., Street & Smith, [1891.] c. tr. 296 p. D. (Primrose ser., no. 19.) pap., 50 c.

The novel is French in scenes, incidents and characters, and is based on a composer's love for a young prima donna. Patrice O'Farrell becomes Godefroid's rival for Jenny Sauval's love. The action of the confessed and unconfessed lover takes up most of the story. The interest centres in Patrice's renunciation and Godefroid's expiation.

Walker, Francis A. The tide of economic thought: address at the fourth annual meeting of the American Economic Assoc., delivered at Wash., D. C., Dec. 26, 1890; reprint from the publications of the American Economic Assoc. Balt., Md., American Economic Assoc., 1891. 24 p. O. pap.

The President of the American Economic Association is wholly American and wholly optimistic. He points out what a great thing it is to have the whole nation at school in political economy, and the great responsibility of the teachers and natural leaders of the theories and experiments of the science which is still in its infancy. He specially wishes earnest thought given to the question of immigration and wishes Americans to take up their duties to their fellow-men "intelligently, solemnly and of set purpose."

Wilcox, Mrs. Ella Wheeler. A double life. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, 1891. c. 181 p. D. (Sunnyside ser., no. 25.) pap., 25 c.

The scene alternates between Brandford and New York. John Chester, a respected citizen of the former place, commits in a weak moment a crime. During a succession of years he manages to conceal his act and identity while in New York under the alias of John Walter. The novel deals with his life before and after retribution overtakes him, and with Erastus Lounsbury's mistaken marriage.

The writer, who is Seligman Fellow in Political Science in Columbia College and Instructor in Philosophy, Cornell University, bases his monograph on the tables given by Carroll D. Wright, Commissioner of Labor, in his "Report on marriage and divorce," submitted to Congress two years ago. The monograph is divided into three sections. The first is occupied with a determination of its general statistical phases; the second, with a study of the effects of legislation in this and foreign countries; and the last, with some conclusions upon the causes and true remedy for divorce.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JUNE 13, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE PROFESSION OF BOOKSELLING. IV.

TRADE PAPERS, LITERARY JOURNALS, CATALOGUES, ETC., AND THEIR STUDY.—II.

THE PUBLISHERS' TRADE LIST ANNUAL will be found of importance next to THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. The young bookseller will not find it at first absorbingly interesting. He will find that it is not to be taken up and read through, but that his interest in it will grow the oftener he consults it. Apply the Meisterschaft system to this also, and study, as often as opportunity will permit, the catalogues of all the publishers—the announcements of those houses which advertise a book or two, as well as the lists of publishers who contribute catalogues of sixty pages and more. Let the beginner, and the veteran too, familiarize himself with the different editions of the same work in the market. It will be found helpful to make a list of them in a blank-book, noting the styles, number of volumes, prices, etc., as well as the claims made for them. We should also advise those whose memory needs training, as they proceed in their study of the catalogues, to make for themselves a classified catalogue of the different subjects, such as Phonography, Electricity, Physical Exercises, etc. True, there are classified lists in print, such as furnished in the American Catalogue, but this method of noting and writing down a title is apt to fasten it on the mind, and aids one materially when called upon by a customer for just such information. It will be found easy enough to add to such a list the new books as they are published, and the mere practice of saying to one's self, "Here is a new book on Electricity for my list," and putting it there, as a rule impresses it firmly enough on the memory.

Especially do we recommend the careful study of the lists of the smaller publishers, for with these the bookseller will have the most trouble. Now and then a less-known house succeeds with a book that will be more or less in demand, but of which the publisher's name is generally the last thing known. A transient customer served with the information about one of these out-of-the-way books, for which he may have been searching in vain elsewhere, will probably become a customer for all time. A duplicate copy of the Annual, to be kept at home, will easily pay for itself over and over again. It should be dipped into as often as inclination prompts, and it will be found that many a sale will be made that otherwise would be missed. Some boast that after business hours they forget all about business. While this may do in other lines, in the book business it might prove a dangerous rule. Not that we would preach the rule "All work and no play." On the contrary. Rest is desirable and necessary; but we doubt if any young man who is enthusiastic about his profession and desires to succeed can afford to lay it to one side altogether and forget all about it the moment he turns his back on the store.

In another issue we will give in full the titles and descriptions of other helps that belong to the workshop of the bookseller. What has been suggested in reference to the study of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY and the "Publisher's Trade List Annual" applies with equal force to every trade catalogue—from "The American Catalogue," the master-key to current American literature, to the most insignificant hand list of the least important bookseller. No source so mean that a grain of information may not be gleaned from it.

In addition to the regular trade catalogues and journals, we commend the careful study of periodical literature and of the leading daily papers. The latter, especially, under able editorship in the department of literature, to a great extent lead the public and, indeed, very often create the demand for certain new books. The bookseller, by being posted in these matters, ought to be ready to answer intelligently any question that may be put to him as to the works of the day.

Then there is the well-read customer, who on occasions may be induced to give a hint or information concerning old or new books not easily got in any other way. We have known such who have given booksellers points that have helped them get rid of scores of books that otherwise would have kept on gathering dust until the end of time. Take such men into your confidence—their assistance will often save you hours of study.

WOMEN BOOKSELLERS IN THE UNITED STATES.

THE Critic's "Lounger" recently remarked: "With all the boasted emancipation of 'the sex' in the United States, England is ahead of us in many of the openings for women's work. Women do pretty much as they like in the way of earning a living in this country, but I have yet to hear of a woman dealing in old books. There is, however, one who does so in England, and her name is Miss Clara Millard; Teddington, Middlesex, is her headquarters. She publishes a catalogue of her goods, which she calls Eureka, at 'frequent intervals,' and her shop is named 'The Book-seekers' Haven.' A poem, probably from the pen of Miss Millard, graces the first page—of which it cannot be said that there is 'not a false rhyme in it:'

"'The book I adore,
I had sought years a score;
But others there are who still seek her;
To these let me say,
That one fortunate day
I found her, by reading Eureka.
Moral: My trust will be henceforth Eureka!'

"Even 'a New York banker' commends the poet's skill as a discoverer of rare books. Miss Millard evidently means business, for she invites 'bona fide challenges to find any book ever published that is still in existence.' I like to see such enterprise, and I hope that the 'bona fide challenges' will come from collectors who are willing to pay a big price for their temerity."

We are surprised that the "Lounger" has never met in his rambles in New York City with at least two women who deal in second-hand books. They are itinerants—peddlers, if you like—but dealers in second-hand books, nevertheless, shrewd and enterprising, with a scent for rarities and bargains as keen as that of a Stevens, Philes, Sabin or any modern book hunter regularly established in business.

They are characters, too, each in her own way. The older one—and the senior in the business, if we are not mistaken—is a typical bookworm, tall, spare of build, with a piercing, nervous eye. The other is short, stout, and phlegmatic in everything excepting the striking of a bargain. Both have their headquarters in some second-hand bookstore, that is, a place where letters may be addressed to them, and where they leave an occasional parcel; but their business is done "out of hand," if we may use the expression in this connection. Making specialties of certain lines, they keep track of what their customers want, and supply them as they pick up bargains and desired volumes. This necessitates their being on the wing nearly all the time, so that they would have very little use for a shop of their own. Both realize a handsome income.

Then there is another woman who figures as the "Company" of an anything but insignificant second-hand book business in New York, but who is really the main-spring of the establishment, if buying and selling the stock, and looking after the finances single-handed, may be considered doing the business. She has an unerring eye for a rare book and most decidedly "knows beans when the bag is opened." There is still another woman in New York City who is making an experiment in dealing in old art works. Thus far her efforts have met with encouragement if not success, but as she is only a beginner we will not yet count her as belonging to the ranks.

In addition to the above we are safe in saying that there are over a dozen women in the United States who, while not dealers exclusively in second-hand books, deal more or less in them in connection with the book and stationery stores of which they are the sole proprietors.

We do not feel justified in giving the names of the women alluded to, because we have misgivings as to how they might take to notoriety thrust upon them in this manner. All of them, while eschewing consideration for themselves on account of their sex, are extremely modest, but women nevertheless. And women—well, they sometimes will be women, and no one can foresee where it will break out. A. G.

HOW BOOKS ARE REVIEWED FOR NEWSPAPERS.

MARION CRAWFORD, in his story "The Three Fates," just begun in The Home-maker, presents the following sketch of the work of an unprofessional book reviewer, which, we are afraid, is not altogether a work of imagination:

"After cutting a score of pages, he began to look for the editor's letter. The volumes had been sent him for review, and were accompanied by the usual note, stating with appalling cynicism the number of words he was expected to write as criticism of each production.

"'About a hundred words apiece,' wrote the literary editor, 'and please return the books with the notices on Monday at twelve o'clock, at the latest.'

"It was Thursday to-day, and there were six volumes to be read, digested and written about. George made a short calculation. He must do two each day, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, in order to leave himself Monday morning as a margin in case of accidents. Six books, six hundred words, or rather more than half a column of the paper for which he wrote. That meant five dollars, for the work was well paid, as being supposed to require some judgment and taste on the part of the writer. There was of course nothing of much importance in the heap of gaily-bound printed matter, nothing to justify a serious article, and nothing which George would care to read twice. Nevertheless the exigencies of the book-trade must be satisfied, and notices must appear, and editors must find persons willing and able to write such notices at prices varying from fifty cents to a dollar apiece. Nor was there any difficulty about this. George knew that the pay was very good as times went, and that there were dozens of starving old maids and hungry boys who would do the work for less, and would perhaps do it as well as he could. Nor was he inclined to quarrel with the conditions which allowed him so short a time for the accomplishment of such a task. He had worked at second-class reviewing for some time, and was long past the period of surprises. On the contrary, he looked upon the batch of publications with considerable satisfaction. The regularity with which such parcels had arrived during the last few months was a proof that he was doing well, and it seemed probable that in the course of the coming year he might be entrusted with more important work. Once or twice already, he had been instructed to write a column, and those were white days in his recollections. He felt that with a permanent engagement to produce a column a week he should be doing very well, but he knew how hard that was to obtain. No one who has not earned his bread by this kind of labor can have any idea of the crowd that hangs upon the outskirts of professional journalism; a crowd not seeking to enter the ranks of the regular newspaper men, but hoping to pick up the crumbs that fall from the table which appears to them so abundantly loaded. To be a professional journalist in America a man must in nine cases out of ten begin as a reporter. He must possess other qualifications besides those of the literary man. He must have a good knowledge of shorthand writing and a knack for the popular style. He must have an iron constitution and untiring nerves. He must be able to sit in a crowded room under the glaring gaslight and write out his impressions at an hour when ordinary people are in bed and asleep. He must possess that brazen assurance which sensitive men of taste rarely have, for he will be called upon to interview all sorts and conditions of men when they least expect it, and generally when they least like it. He must have a keen instinct for business, in order to outwit and outrun his competitors in the pursuit of news. Ever on the alert, he must not dwell upon the recollections of yesterday lest they entwine themselves into the reports of to-day. Altogether, the commencing journalist must be a remarkable being, and most remarkable for a set of qualities which are not only useless to the writer of books, but which, if the latter possessed them, would notably hinder his success. There is no such thing as amateur journalism possible within the precincts of a great newspaper's offices, whereas the outer doors are besieged by amateurs of every known and unknown description.

"In the critical and literary departments, the dilettante is the cruel enemy of those who are driven to write for bread, but who lack either the taste, the qualifications, or the opportunities which might give them a seat within, among the reporters' desks. Cruellest of all in the eyes of the poor scribbler is the well-to-do man of leisure and culture who is personally acquainted with the chief editor, and writes occasional criticisms, often the most important, for nothing. Then there is the young woman who has been to college, who lacks nothing, but is ever ready to write for money, which she devotes to charitable purposes, thereby depriving some unfortunate youth of the dollar a day which means food to him, for whose support the public is not already taxed. But she knows nothing about him, and it amuses her to be connected with the press, and to have the importance of exchanging a word with the editor if she meets him in the society she frequents. The young man goes on the accustomed day for the new books. 'I have nothing for you this week, Mr. Tompkins,' says the manager of the literary department as politely as possible. The books are gone to the Vassar girl or to the rich idler, and poor Tompkins must not hope to earn his daily dollar again till seven or eight days have passed. His only consolation is that the dawdling dilettante can never get all the work, because he or she cannot write fast enough to supply the demand. Without the spur of necessity it is impossible to read and review two volumes a day for any length of time. It is hard to combine justice to an author with the necessity for rushing through his book at a hundred pages an hour. It is indeed important to cut every leaf, lest the aforesaid literary manager should accuse poor little Mr. Tompkins of carelessness and superficiality in his judgment; but it is quite impossible that Tompkins should read every word of the children's story-book, of the volume of second-class sermons, of the collection of fifth-rate poetry, and of the harrowing tale of city life, entitled 'The Bucket of Blood; or, the washerwoman's revenge,' all of which have come at once, and are simultaneously submitted to his authoritative criticism.

"George Wood cut through thirty pages of the volume he held in his hand, then went to the end and cut backwards, then returned to the place he had reached the first time and cut through the middle of the book. It was his invariable system, and he found that it succeeded very well.

"'It is not well done,' he said to himself, quoting Johnson; 'but one is surprised to see it done at all. What can you expect for fifty cents?'"

"AMERICAE RETECTIO."

GAMBINO GIOACCHINO BAGNASCO, of Palermo, has issued a circular of interest to bibliophiles and antiquarians. He announces that in a small collection left him by his father, he has found an atlas composed of twelve plates, entitled "Americae Retectio." He has searched museums, libraries and picture-galleries to get at the real value of his possession, and now by this circular addressed to the important libraries of the world, is trying for still further information. The "Americae Retectio," as described by M. Bagnasco, is composed of twelve plates of rectangular form, all being twenty-nine cm. wide and twenty-two cm. high, exclusive of margin. It would seem that the artist intended to fix the three principal moments of the discoveries made by Christopher Columbus, Amerigo Vespucci and Ferdinand Magellan. The first four plates are devoted to the frontispiece and three drawings dealing separately with the discoveries of the three great navigators. The remaining eight plates represent vessels belonging to the sixteenth century, evidently taken by the artists from the original designs. These plates themselves were apparently executed some years later by the artists, whose names they bear—Johannus Stradamus, Adriano Collaert, Philip Galle, and F. H. Breugel. If the work is genuine, the names of these artists indicate that it dates from 1575 to 1576. Besides the value of the maps, the work would also have great value for the portraits of Columbus and Vespucci. Of course, in the absence of the work itself or photographs of the plates, it is impossible to give an estimate of ts value.

In case the work is proved genuine, its owner should certainly be induced to make arrangements to have the plates put on exhibition at the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago, in 1892, where it would form one of the most remarkable features of the Latin-American Department.

BOOK PRODUCTION IN RUSSIA IN 1890.

ACCORDING to statistics in the Knishnij Westnik, the following is an estimate of the new books and new editions published in Russia in 1890:

Philosophy	46
Education	56
Philology	455
Fiction	639
Geographical Works	119
History	281
Political Science	337
Mathematics	158
Military	209
Natural Sciences	737
Medical	372
Technological	131
Domestic Economy, Farming, etc	95
Books for Children	152
Books for the People	410
Fine Art	285
Manuals, etc	234
Total	4716

This does not include the literature published under ecclesiastical censorship, which naturally comprises theological books, which last year were estimated at 244 works. Allowing also for a small number of books which do not circulate through trade mediums, it is safe to put the total at about 5000 copies, at which figure the book production of Russia has stood for the last five years.

BELKNAP & WARFIELD, SUCCESSORS TO BROWN & GROSS.

THE time-honored firm-name of Brown & Gross, of Hartford, Conn., which held its own for so many years in the bookselling world, has disappeared, and its place is taken by that of Belknap & Warfield. Notwithstanding the change of name there will be no change in the management of the house. The members of the new firm are well acquainted with the management of the business, both having been connected with the old firm. Mr. Leverett Belknap entered the store twenty-seven years ago as a boy, and by faithful service worked his way through the various stages until he was admitted to the firm of Brown & Gross eleven years ago. Mr. George F. Warfield entered the employ of the firm as bookkeeper six years ago, and a year ago became a partner.

The establishment of Brown & Gross has probably been as large and varied as any other book concern in Connecticut. As publishers, the firm has a wide and well-earned reputation, especially in school and college text-books. The firm, as was noted at the time of the death of Mr. Gross, in our issue for March 28, was formed February 1, 1858. The senior partner, Mr. Flavius A. Brown, died February 13, 1880, and Mr. William H. Gross died March 17, 1891. The store dated back to 1830, when the firm of H. F. Sumner & Co. (the company being D. F. Robinson, afterwards Mayor) did business as booksellers at No. 20 State Street. In 1834 Caleb M. Packard, the father of Chief of Police Packard, and F. A. Brown bought out Sumner & Co., and formed a partnership that lasted for three years by contract, as Packard & Brown. In 1837 Mr. E. W. Parsons became a member of the firm, Mr. Packard retiring. In January, 1852, the firm dissolved, Mr. Parsons retiring; and for six years Mr. Brown carried on the business. Having taken Mr. Gross as a partner, early in 1858, the firm soon became widely known, and continued until the dissolution, which dates May 18, 1891. As mentioned above, Mr. Belknap was admitted to the firm April 1, 1880, and Mr. Warfield a year ago last April. On the first of April, 1888, Mr. Jewett E. Hutchinson became a member of the firm. His death at Block Island in August, the same year, is remembered by many.

Both members of the new firm are live business men, and while they appreciate the value of a long established business they will not depend upon past greatness, but by push, energy and application they will keep the business in the front rank as heretofore.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE first chapter of Mrs. Rives-Chanler's new story will appear in the Cosmopolitan for August. The story will be illustrated by a well-known French artist.

"AN Imperative Duty," Mr. Howells' new novel, will be begun in the July number of Harper's. The same number will contain a novelette by Mr. Janvier with the taking title of "The Episode of the Marques de Valdeflores."

A REMARKABLE story, already famous in Europe, entitled "Four Days," from the Russian of Garshin, will appear in the double summer number of Poet-Lore—June 15. It is a vivid picture of a significant episode in the life of a modern soldier. Two short stories of a very different kind will follow—"Faded Leaves" and "Green is Hope," translated from the Norse of Alexander Kielland. The same number of Poet-Lore will contain a hitherto unpublished letter of John Ruskin's on "Wages;" and critical papers on "Two Versions of the Wandering Jew," by Prof. R. G. Moulton; "The Text of Shakespeare," by Dr. Horace Howard Furness; "An Inductive Study of 'As You Like It,'" by C. A. Wurtzburg; and a "Study Programme," of practical use to reading circles or for the home study of literature. A complete play—"Harold," by the distinguished German dramatist, Ernst von Wildenbruch—will be given, translated into English verse, with the author's sanction, in the second double number of Poet-Lore—Sept. 15. This drama is on an English theme, is full of action, and is a marked success on the German stage. A portrait of the author and a critical and biographical account of him will also be given.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

THE INDEX PUB. CO., New Haven, Conn., continues the American Periodical Index, which struggles to do a service to the public, but has a most awkward way of doing it.

MR. JOHN EDMANDS continues his Junius bibliography in the January-April No. of the Bulletin of the Mercantile Library of Philadelphia. (Annual subscription 20 c.; single numbers 5 c.)

J. W. BOUTON has received Baschet's Illustrated Catalogue of Painting and Sculpture of the Paris Salon of 1891. It contains a complete list of the exhibits and several hundred woodcuts, with the title of the works reproduced in French and in a very poor kind of English.

F. A. BROCKHAUS, Leipzig, has issued a third catalogue of valuable duplicates of the City Library at Breslau, in the domain of bibliography, history of learned men, art, art of war, natural sciences, etc.; and a catalogue of the library of the late Herr Johann Jakob von Tschudi, comprising history, geography and American-Indian languages, which will be sold at auction by F. A. Brockhaus, at his Antiquarium in Leipzig, from July 23 to 27. The catalogue contains 2821 numbers, arranged and classified with the greatest care, and is illustrated by two reproductions of ancient bindings.

Catalogues of New and Second-hand Books.—Macmillan & Bowes, Cambridge, Eng., Miscellaneous. (No. 35, 635 titles.)—F. M. Morris, 73 Madison St., Chicago, Miscellaneous. (No. 12, 337 titles.)—S. B. Luyster, 98 Nassau St., N. Y., Miscellaneous. (No. 178, 348 titles.)—Luzac & Co., 46 Great Russell St., London, Eng., Oriental list. (V. 2, No. 5, May, 1891. 12 p.)—H. Sotheran & Co., 136 Strand, London, Eng., Price Current of literature. (No. 504).—Henry Stevens & Son, 39 Great Russell St., London, Eng., Books and pamphlets relating to America. (No. 24, June, 1891, 16 p.)

BUSINESS NOTES.

CHICAGO, ILL.—It is rumored here that the Burrows Brothers Co. are satisfied that there is room for another large bookstore in Chicago, and intend opening one in the fall.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Augur's Art Store succeeds to the old-established book business of F. T. Jarman. Mr. Jarman in 1853 succeeded to the Sunday-School, Bible and Tract Depository, established in 1840, and now retires from business altogether. We trust he will enjoy many years of rest.

NEW YORK CITY.—Hurst & Co. have removed to larger and more convenient quarters at the corner of Grand and Crosby Streets.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—An important business transaction is the sale by Edward H. Phelps of the controlling interest in the Phelps Publishing Company of this city, proprietors of two well-known agricultural journals, which took place on the 6th inst. The purchasers are George S. Graves and Herbert Myrick, for the past ten years business-manager and agricultural editor, respectively, and heavy shareholders for some time. The directorate and personnel of the staff are not altered, but Mr. Graves becomes treasurer and Mr. Myrick editor-in-chief. The deal in this company, says the New York Times, "involves like changes in the Orange Judd Company, of 52 and 54 Lafayette Place, New York, publishers of the American Agriculturist, etc., which has been owned by the same gentlemen. Mr. Myrick succeeds Mr. Phelps as its President and editor-in-chief of its magazine and books."

TRAVERSE CITY, MICH.—M. B. Holley, who has been for nearly ten years with M. E. Haskell, will open a book and stationery store of his own on the first of July. He intends to make specialties of fine books and stationery, Bibles, games and bric-à-brac.

THE PURIST.—Publisher: How many words has your story? Author: About three thousand. Publisher: But, my dear fellow, we can't make a book out of three thousand words. It wouldn't fill fifteen pages. Author: Yes, but I've used the words over and over again, you know.—Puck.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. will publish in the fall a work on "Municipal Corporations," by Charles F. Beach, Jr., of the New York bar.

CHARLES H. KERR & CO., Chicago, will publish shortly "St. Solifer, with other worthies and unworthies," a collection of stories partly drawn from ancient and mediæval sources, by James Vila Blake.

PETER PAUL & BRO., Buffalo, announce for early publication a new book, "The Life and Times of Kateri Tekakwitha, the Lily of the Mohawks, 1656–1680," by Ellen H. Walworth, author of "An Old World, as Seen Through Young Eyes."

THE WORTHINGTON COMPANY have in press another novel by Heimburg, entitled "Misjudged," translated by Mrs. J. W. Davis, to be issued in their International Library; also a new volume in the Rose Library, entitled "Jenny's Ordeal," by Leon Tinseau, translated by Camden Curwen.

THE Court of Appeals has just handed down a decision in the case of Street & Smith vs. J. S. Ogilvie, in favor of the defendant. The court in rendering the opinion found, as also did the lower courts, that "the defendant did not practise any fraud or deceit, or make any false representations whatever in the settlement." In another issue we hope to give further particulars.

JORDAN BROS., of Philadelphia, have purchased from the DeWitt Publishing House, of New York, the stereotype plates of the well-known book, "Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk." They also announce that the 4th edition of "Confessions of a Nun," by Sister Agatha, has been nearly exhausted, in the face of a continued boycott placed on it by some of the larger news companies.

THE UNITED STATES BOOK COMPANY have published a strong novel in their American Authors' Series from the pen of F. Bean. The title chosen for the book is a firm-name which is strikingly peculiar, "Pudney & Walp." The work touches upon certain complications which are liable to occur between capital and labor, when the capitalist has risen from the ranks of the working man.

BENJ. R. TUCKER, Boston, has just published Grant Allen's latest novel, "What's Bred in the Bone," which took the $5000 prize awarded by London Tit-Bits for the best work of fiction. Mr. Tucker also announces, for early publication, a translation from the German of "The Rights of Women and the Sexual Relations," a work by the famous German-American and revolutionist of '48, Karl Heinzen.

WE are pleased to note that at the recent meeting of the General Assembly, the business methods of the Presbyterian Board of Publication were vindicated in every particular. All the charges of wastefulness and mismanagement made against the Board have been proven to be without foundation. The committee recommended, among others, that the manufacturing be kept distinct from the business department. The report was unanimously adopted.

A LIMITED edition of "The Wills of George Washington and His Immediate Ancestors," edited by Washington C. Ford, will be issued by the Historical Printing Club of Brooklyn. Besides the wills the volume contains several unpublished letters of Washington, a history of Washington's land ventures, and a complete record of the various owners of Mount Vernon from the first patent to John Washington to its purchase by the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association.

RAND, MCNALLY & Co. will publish shortly in their Rialto Series a new book by Fortune Du Boisgobey, entitled "Fontenay the Swordsman." This is a military novel, dealing with Napoleon's campaigns in Spain. The characterization is described as particularly strong, the description brilliant, and the adventures and escapades as varied and thrilling as those of "The Three Guardsmen." This story has but just appeared in Paris, and this is its first introduction to English readers.

A NEW English author who has gained a remarkable success with his first book has been introduced to the American public by D. Appleton & Co. in the Town and Country Library. The author is "Egerton Castle," whose novel "Consequences" is earning for the author a reputation in England. An original plot and an abundance of incident and variety are some of the attractive elements in a book which seems likely to excite general attention. Captain Castle is an accomplished swordsman, as the reader will learn from some passages in this striking book, which is a story of the present time, with the scene laid in America, Germany and England.

G. O. SEILHAMER, 112 N. 12th St., Philadelphia, announces the speedy publication of the third volume of his "History of the American Theatre." The next volume will follow as soon as fulness and accuracy will allow. The third volume, entitled "New Foundations," covers the five years 1792 to 1797, which, though but a brief period, was the epoch of the establishment of the drama in America upon a broad and permanent basis. The influx of English actors and actresses during this period was very great, and Mr. Seilhamer believes he is able to offer a satisfactory account of these players and their work. The fourth and last volume, to be entitled "1800—Before and After," will follow as soon as fulness and accuracy will allow.

THE NEW YORK TYPESETTING COMPANY, referred to in these columns last December, is now in operation. The company is composed of a number of employing printers, Mr. Theodore L. De Vinne being the president, and has taken offices at 12 Lafayette Place, occupying a whole floor in the De Vinne establishment. It has twenty-five machines in operation, to which will be added twenty-five more as soon as they can be completed. The company will work for printers only, making exceptions, of course, in the case of publishers who are also printers. The object of the company is not so much to do work at a low price (though their prices will be from twenty to twenty-five per cent. lower than they have hitherto been for the same class of work in this city) as to turn out careful book-work and perfect plates in every particular. The speed with which this company can turn out the finest kind of straight book-work, and the saving in price, however slight, must work in its favor.

THE "Life, Correspondence and Speeches of Patrick Henry" is the title of an important work in three volumes which Charles Scribner's Sons have in press for publication in the autumn. The author is William Wirt Henry, a grandson of Patrick Henry, and a relative also of William Wirt, whose "Life of Patrick Henry" has been out of print for many years. In the preparation of this authoritative and definitive biography of the great Revolutionary patriot, the author has had access to a great deal of material that was not consulted or made use of by Mr. Wirt—a large collection of the private papers of Patrick Henry, State Department and Virginia legislative documents in MS., the Executive Journal which was kept during Henry's five years' service as Governor, etc., etc. All this new matter is in the highest degree interesting and valuable, and will enable his countrymen to form a more just estimate of the character and genius of the man than has heretofore been possible.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have now completed their editions of Charles Dickens—one in fifteen and the other in thirty volumes. The electrotype plates from which both editions are printed have been cast from new large-faced type well leaded, and great care has been used in the proof-reading. The paper used in the fifteen-volume edition is a high grade machine finish, while the thirty-volume edition is printed on calendered paper, natural color, especially adapted to make a fine book. The illustrations have been faithfully reproduced by George T. Andrew & Co., and comprise all the original ones by Phiz, Cruikshank and others; to these have been added sixty-five new cuts from etchings by Pailthorpe, contained in no other edition, and a fine steel portrait of Dickens. The fifteen-volume edition has 240 full-page illustrations, and the thirty-volume edition 799. The presswork has been done by Berwick & Smith, of Boston, the impressions of both text and illustrations being clear and sharp. The bindings show tasteful cover designs and harmonious colors. The thirty-volume edition can be had in cloth, half calf, and half crushed levant; the fifteen-volume one in cloth and half calf only. All the volumes of both editions are sold separately.

AN uncut copy of Browning's "Pauline" has just turned up in the possession of Miss Millard, of Teddington. This is only the eighth copy known to be extant.

LESLIE STEPHENS, owing to ill-health, has been obliged to resign the editorship of "The Dictionary of National Biography," but he hopes still to be able to contribute to it.

JOHN HENRY SHORTHOUSE, the author of "John Inglesant," has nearly completed a new novel. It is entitled "Blanche, Lady Falaise," and will be published by the Macmillans in the fall.

IT is said that a movement is on foot among the Berlin publishers to petition the Prussian Diet to rescind the regulation which makes it compulsory on them to present a copy of each new work both to the university and royal libraries.

THE papers of the late Prince Napoleon, which Frederick Masson will edit, fill more than five trunks. They will be made to constitute a history rather than a series of memoirs, and will bring out the character and political aims of the Prince.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers as a guarantee of good faith.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis, will find it to their advantage to put after their firm name the word [Cash].

WITH EIGHT COLORED PLATES AND NEARLY THREE HUNDRED WOOD-CUT ILLUSTRATIONS.

From D. Hayes Agnew, M.D., LL.D., Philadelphia, Surgeon to President Garfield.

"Anything which Dr. Hartshorne writes will always attract attention, and I know of no book on popular medicine comparable in value to this work."

From Theophilus Parvin, M.D., LL.D., Professor of "Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children," Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Pa.

"'Hartshorne's Cyclopedia of Family Medicine' is, in my opinion, an excellent and will prove a most useful work. I do not see how a better one relating to the subjects embraced in it could have been written."

From Thomas Chase, M.A., Litt.D., LL.D. — "Dr. Hartshorne has a peculiar talent for making a Cyclopedia of this kind. His medical knowledge is exact and comprehensive, and his judgment unerring. The book ought to be in every family in this country."

From Walter Lindley, M.D., President Medical Society of State of California.

"Dr. Hartshorne is one of the most noted physicians in Philadelphia, and his works occupy a place in almost every doctor's library. This book will prove a great blessing to every family that may possess it. No equal to it has ever been published."

Issued in one large octavo volume of 943 pages, with 283 engravings on wood, and 8 full-page colored plates. Price, in very handsome cloth, $4; in full morocco, $5.

The Arabian Nights Entertainments. Edited by W. L. Griffis, D.D. Library edition. 4 vols., 40 full-page illustrations, $6.00.

A splendid four-volume library edition of this great classic of Oriental romance, carefully printed from new type, richly bound and illustrated with over forty full-page pictures of exceptional excellence. The introduction was prepared for American readers by the editor, Rev. Dr. Griffis, an accomplished Orientalist.

Leaves from an Artist's Field Book. By Wedworth Wadsworth. Beautifully engraved by Andrew. Oblong quarto, cloth, gilt, $4.00; full morocco, $8.00.

Mr. Wadsworth's "Leaves" are delightfully suggestive of Nature's varying moods, while the verses to which his pictures are wedded are instinct with the real sentiment of landscape, forest and field.

Verses. By Celia Thaxter. Large quarto, illuminated cover, finely illustrated, $2.50.

A collection of the best poems of this eminent author, illustrated with twenty-four full-page pictures by such well-known artists as W. L. Taylor, Edmund H. Garrett, Hy. Sandham and others, making a volume of fascinating and delightful reading.

The Story of the United States of America. Told for young people. By Elbridge S. Brooks. Illustrated. 4to, cloth, $1.50; boards, $1.25.

A clear, concise and comprehensive account of the development and growth of the Great American Republic. The story of the people rather than of individuals. Fully illustrated.

Prime Movers of the Revolution; known to the Author. By Rev. A. B. Muzzey. Illustrated. 4to, cloth, $2.00.

Personal reminiscences of men of the Revolution and their families, by one whose grandfather was among the "embattled farmers" of Lexington. The volume contains many important facts not to be found elsewhere.

"Its materials are as readable now as they will be precious to the future historian."—Boston Advertiser.

There and Back. By George MacDonald. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

A delightful and dramatic romance of a lost heritage and how it was regained, told with all that charming combination of spiritual and practical Christianity that is at once the charm and value of MacDonald's stories.

Christ Himself. By Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D.D. 12mo, $1 00.

Terse, earnest, fervid, the papers that make up this volume will appeal to an even larger audience than Dr. McKenzie's previous books, and confirm the reputation which he has already established as one of the most eloquent of pulpit orators.

The Fidalgos of Casa Mourisca. By Julio Diniz. Translated by Roxana L. Dabney. 12mo, $1.50.

"An example of the best modern Portuguese fiction, very fluently and very cleverly Englished."—Chicago Times.

"The directness and vivacity of this tale remind the reader of Jane Austen."—Literary World.

John Brownlow's Folks. By Willis Boyd Allen. 12mo, $1.00.

John Brownlow's folks are a simple-hearted country family who have moved up to the city (Boston), but retain many characteristics of rural life. Their experiences are extremely entertaining.

The Heart of the Golden Roan. By O. C. Auringer, author of "Scythe and Sword." 12mo, cloth, gilt top, 75 cents.

A strong, unique, imaginative poem, full of life and action.

The Garment of Praise. Cheer for invalids. By Rose Porter. 16mo, loth, 75 cents.

Tender, comforting, helpful words for the "shut-ins," that will give them hope and courage in the midst of sickness and despondency

Wordsworth for the Young. Compiled, with introduction, by Mrs. Cynthia M. St. John.

"I consider Mrs. St. John's work admirable. I have seen very frequent evidence of her enthusiasm, knowledge and insight. I am delighted to give a cordial recommendation to her book."—William Knight, St. Andrew's, Scotland.

With the Birds. Selected poems from the best English and American authors. With 50 full-page illustrations. 8vo, cloth, $1.50.

This unique collection of choice poetry on a theme dear to all will be found to have a peculiar fascination; the pleasure it gives is much enhanced by the beautiful illustrations of woodland songsters.

The Christmas Book. By Hezekiah Butterworth. 8vo, cloth, exquisitely illustrated, $2.00.

There is the true ring in this delightful collection. The stories are full of tender charm, the poems stirring and beautiful, and the bits of history give many interesting facts concerning the celebration of the world's great festival.

Child Classics. Compiled by Mary R. Fitch. 8vo, beautifully illustrated, gilt, $1.00.

An exquisite gift book, designed to familiarize children with the poetry of such authors as Longfellow, Whittier, Lowell, Bryant, Dr. Holland, etc. The full-page illustrations reproduce some of the finest artistic work in the line of genre painting.

National Flowers. By Fannie A. Deane. 8vo, gilt, 75 cents.

The interest in national flowers will be increased by reading this charming book, which tells the story of England's Rose, Scotland's Thistle, the Lotus of Egypt, the Lily of France and many other representative flowers.

Black Beauty: His grooms and companions. By Anna Sewell. 12mo, with twelve full-page illustrations, cloth, $1.

A choice edition of this delightful book, the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the horse. Its influence upon young people in teaching kindness to animals will be invaluable.

Wisdom of the Wise. Compiled by Caroline L. Hunt. 16mo, 75 cents; gilt edges, $1.00.

A book of choice selections in prose and poetry for the use of our young people in the home and the schoolroom. It is arranged by attributes and distinctive subjects, as Beauty, Bravery, Character, Conversation, etc.

Rob: A Story for Boys. By Margaret Sidney. 12mo, $1.00.

This is one of those delightful studies of boy nature in which Margaret Sidney is so thoroughly at home. Not only the young hero but all the different characters are portrayed with that brightness and sympathetic touch so peculiar to her.

Business Openings for Girls. By Sallie Joy White. 12mo, 75 cents.

A series of practical papers by a practical business woman, that will be invaluable to girls seeking a business career. Among the subjects are saleswomen and cash-girls, newspaper workers, stenographers and type-writers, artists and hygienic dressmaking, piano and organ tuning, guides and shoppers.

Gid Granger. By W. O. Stoddard, author of "Chuck Purdy." 12mo, illustrated, $1.25.

Vivid pictures of life on a farm, the sturdy, hard-working boy, the ambitious sister, the faithful father and mother, and the different village folks, all strongly individualized.

Stories of the Land of Evangeline. By Grace Dean McLeod. Illustrated by Hy. Sandham. 12mo, $1.25.

"Miss McLeod has shown in these tales the painstaking care of the historian, with the genius of a brilliant writer of fiction."—The Arcadian, Wolfville, N. S.

Sunday Album for Boys and Girls. Arranged by Rev. J. R. Simmons. 4to, $1.25.

Pictures on every page. Each picture illustrates several passages in Scripture, to which reference is given.

D. APPLETON & CO., Publishers, 1, 3 & 5 Bond Street, New York.

SCOTT—ELIOT.

Edition de Luxe.

Limited to 1000 Numbered Copies.

This edition will contain all of the Waverley Novels, with voluminous historical notes to elucidate and explain the text; will be enriched with upwards of three hundred etchings and photo-etchings. It is the purpose of the publishers to secure the services of the most celebrated and artistic French etchers for ideal creations and historical studies illustrating the works, and to supplement them with reproductions of fine photographs from nature where the scenes of novels are laid in historic localities.

All of the illustrations will be Proof Impressions on Imperial Japanese Paper. The text paper will be manufactured especially for this edition, and will be a natural tint laid paper, made of the finest material, such as are used in hand-made paper, and containing no clay or other filling, making a volume of remarkably light weight.

The edition, set from new type, will be a marvel of typographical beauty, and will be printed in sumptuous style, with broad, handsome margins, by the celebrated University Press. The page and general manufacture will be the same as the Dickens and Thackeray issued by us.

The volumes will be bound in English vellum cloth, library style, with paper titles, gilt tops, and uncut edges.

The works, to be issued at the rate of about two volumes per month, will be sold only in complete sets of 45 volumes, at $2.50 per volume.

Rosehill Limited Edition.

Limited to 1000 Numbered Copies.

George Eliot's Complete Works, issued in this attractive library style, uniform with our remarkably successful éditions de luxe of Dickens, Thackeray and Bulwer, will meet the demands of the literary public more fully than any previous edition issued in this or any other country. The work will contain over one hundred and twenty-five original etchings and photogravures. The photogravures are reproduced from drawings by the most prominent American artists, among whom are Dielman, Harper, Sandham, Taylor, Garrett, Merrill and Champney. These are supplemented with photogravures from actual photographs of the localities described in the historical romances. All of the illustrations will be proof impressions on Imperial Japanese paper. This edition is printed from entirely new plates, set from new, large type, in a small page uniform with the édition de luxe of Dickens, and will be complete in twenty octavo volumes, bound in English vellum cloth, paper titles, gilt top. It will be issued by subscription only, at the rate of two volumes per month, at $2.50 per volume.

A recent discovery in bookbinding enables us to put upon the market volumes that combine at the same time great strength and flexibility. The books will open flat without breaking the backs.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE SCIENTIFIC PUBLISHING CO., 27 Park Place, N. Y., have in preparation a volume on "Scientific Mineralogy," by T. Sterry Hunt.

HARPER & BROS. have in preparation "Literary Industries," by Hubert Howe Bancroft. The work is largely autobiographical, and contains the story of the conception of Mr. Bancroft's great history, the manner of its composition, and the methods by which the materials for its completion were collected.

GINN & CO. will publish shortly "The Modalist, or, the laws of rational conviction," a text-book in formal or general logic, by Edward John Hamilton, D.D., Albert Barnes Professor of Intellectual Philosophy in Hamilton College, N. Y. This book is called "The Modalist" because it restores modal propositions and modal syllogisms to the place of importance which they occupied in the logic of Aristotle. Professor Hamilton thinks that "universal and particular categorical propositions cannot be understood, as principles of reasoning and as employed in 'mediate inference,' unless the one be regarded as expressing a necessary and the other a contingent sequence." Therefore also he explains the pure syllogism by the modal.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY announce for immediate publication 'The Midnight Sky," by Edwin Dunkin, concerning which book when first published Thomas Carlyle said: "I have to return you many true thanks for the beautiful and admirable book you have had the kindness to send me. It is worthy to be called 'The Midnight Sky,' and is actually a guide to the habitations of the stars. I find in it all the qualities of excellence as a book; lucid, perspicuous at a glance, concise, correct; completely fulfilling its purpose. Those little maps of the starry spaces far surpass, in clearness and useful worth, all I have seen before in a planisphere way. No reader but by help of them may find, with a minimum of trouble, the star he seeks."

THE appearance of "Appletons' Canadian Guide-Book" will commend itself to tourists and sportsmen, and even to general readers, since the work has a literary interest throughout. This book, written by the Canadian author and sportsman, Charles G. D. Roberts, covers Eastern Canada from Niagara Falls to Cape Breton, including the Lake St. John country, and also including a thorough account of the little-known Island of Newfoundland. The book has been elaborately illustrated throughout. In addition to information regarding points of interest for the tourist, routes, hotel fares, etc., it presents a continuous story of travel, with entertaining historical notes, graphic descriptions of scenery and people, sketches of canoeing trips and accounts of the opportunities for fishing; and the appendix, which gives special, practical information for the sportsman, includes the fish and game laws of the different provinces, and lists of trout and salmon rivers and their lessees.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. have just ready the first part of "A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament," together with an appendix containing the Biblical Aramaic based on the lexicon of William Gesenius, as translated by Edward Robinson, late Professor in the Union Theological Seminary, New York; with constant reference to the larger thesaurus of Gesenius, completed by E. Roediger, and with authorized use of the latest German edition of Gesenius' "Handwörterbuch über das Alte Testament," by the Rev. Francis Brown, Davenport Professor of Hebrew and the Cognate Languages in the Union Theological Seminary, with the co-operation of the Rev. S. R. Driver, Regius Professor of Hebrew, and Canon of Christ Church, Oxford, and the Rev. Charles A. Briggs, D D., Edward Robinson Professor of Biblical Theology in the Union Theological Seminary. They have also just added to the Riverside Paper Series Blanche Willis Howard's "The Open Door." Next month they will publish in this series F. Marion Crawford's "Paul Patoff," and in August Ellen Olney Kirk's "A Midsummer Madness."

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles, D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P. Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); (Q. 4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.) D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl. nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights

Aitken, Edith. Elementary text-book of botany; for the use of schools. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1891. il. 8°, cl., $1.50.

Alarcón, Pedro A. de. Moors and Christians, and other tales; from the Spanish by Mary J. Serrano. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1891.] 4+266 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 74.) pap., 50 c.

The scene of the first story is laid in a little Moorish town of Spain in the year 1821; the story relates to a supposed buried treasure, the mere suspicion of which causes the deaths of five people, Moors and Christians. The other stories are "The account book," "A fine haul," "The black eyes," "Saint and genius," "The comet," "The gypsy's prophecy," "A year in Spitzbergen," "The guardian angel" and "The orderly."

Allen, Grant. What's bred in the bone. Bost., B: R. Tucker, 1891. 238 p. D. (Tucker's lib., v. 1, no. 1.) pap., 25 c.

This novel took the $5000 prize awarded by London Tit-Bits for best work of fiction. The heroine has power of second-sight, and an almost uncontrollable desire to dance the wild "snake-dance" of her gypsy ancestors when under emotional excitement. The hero is twin brother of a weak character, whose physical and mental disturbances affect him strangely also. The plot is ingenious. The scientist-author dwells upon the force of heredity and the irresponsibility of its victims.

Ames, Fisher. American leads at whist: with directions for play. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1891. c. 20 p. Fe. pap., 25 c.

"American leads" is the name given by "Cavendish" to an improved system of leads invented by Mr. N. B. Trist, of New Orleans, by means of which information is given as to the number as well as character of the cards in the suit led from. This system has recently been much extended, and is here presented with the new play and other recent improvements made by "Cavendish."

Bazan, Emilia Pardo. A wedding trip; tr. by Mary J. Serrano. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1891.] c. 2+352 p. D. cl., $1.

A most tragic final is the outcome of a series of incidents which happen to a Spanish bride and groom on their wedding trip. The bride is from the people, but young, beautiful and rich; the bridegroom is a middle-aged broken-down man of the world, who only seeks a bride to replenish his empty purse. An accident separates them on the evening of their first day's journey, and the young bride is forced to go on alone to Bayonne, in France, where they had intended to spend their honeymoon. Two men befriend her on her journey, and the consequences are strange and serious in their effect upon the happiness of the newly married pair.

The parson's daughter leaves her father's house to become an actress, and after a short career meets a sad fate. "Under the muses' ban" is a tale of an old house in the Harz Mountains. A new translation of two well-known stories.

Berkemeier, Rev. G. C. Wartburg-Klänge u. gesänge: gedichte zum fünfundzwanzigjährigen jubiläum des Wartburg-Waisenhauses. N. Y., E: Steiger & Co., 1891. 86 p. S. cl., 50 c.

The orphan asylum at Wartburg, in Saxony, celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary in May. It had been decided to print a history of the institution for the occasion. As this could not be finished in time, the Director published this collection of poems, written by him during his six years' administration, all more or less called forth by his office and surroundings, considering it a fitting tribute for the festival.

Two Russian exiles of noble birth—a father and daughter, an aged composer half Greek, half English, a young American artist and a Russian Prince of wealth and position are the characters; the place is Paris. The story begins with some charming scenes from the Bohemian life in Paris, in which the principal characters take part, and the first chapters are told of the love of the Russian girl and the young American artist. The artist returns to America—misfortunes intervene, the girl thinks herself forgotten, the Prince comes upon the scene, an unhappy marriage is the result—then many wretched scenes, a tragedy and the end.

The stories of Lucian describe peoples and countries as strange and wonderful as any Gulliver told of. Their fanciful and humorous extravagances cannot fail to find many readers for them among old and young.

Maartens, Maarten. An old maid's love: a Dutch tale told in English. N. Y., Harper, 1891. 3–321 p. D. (Harper's Franklin Sq. lib., new ser., no. 700.) pap., 45 c.

The pure unselfish love of an elderly woman for her young nephew is the theme. The scene is laid in Holland, and the local color is as vividly presented as in "The sin of Joost Avelingh," the novel which made the author famous. Suzanna Varelkamp, narrow and prejudiced, is admirably depicted, the one love of her heart for Arnout Oostrum softening her hard nature and making almost a heroine of her. When Arnout is about twenty, his fate comes to him in the shape of a beautiful French viscountess, who sprains her ankle near his home and becomes an inmate of it for some time. This woman separates Arnaut from a good girl, and carries him off with her to Italy, finally to a life of sin.

Maartens, Maarten. An old maid's love: a Dutch tale told in English. N. Y., J: W. Lovell Co., [United States Book Co., 1891.] 4–326 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 158.) pap., 50 c.

Ramsey, Milton W. Six thousand years hence. Minneapolis, Minn., Raymer's "Old Book" store, [1891.] c. 239 p. D. pap., 50c.

Astronomical force tears a city from its moorings on the earth, and its inhabitants, led by General Morton, are fated to travel in space. The story describes the wonders of the various planets they visited, and pictures the earth's progression during their six thousand years of enforced absence.

Ridgeway, Algernon. Diana Fontaine: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1891. c. 306 p. D. (American novels.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Diana Fontaine, an orphan, after spending some time with her mother's relations at Newport, comes to Virginia at the close of the Civil War to spend a year with her father's people. The author draws a good picture of the days when "Reconstruction was not yet achieved, and the aroma of chivalry clung to the Southland." Diana learns to love a young physician, who develops her higher nature. But he is already engaged to a quiet Southern girl. Diana takes her trouble bravely, and through its many lessons learns to play Beethoven as an artist.

Ross, Albert, [pseud. for Linn Boyd Porter.] Moulding a maiden. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1891. c. '89. 5-364 p. D. (The Albatross novels.) pap., 50 c.

Stanley and Lysle Melrose, boys of fourteen and sixteen, are made joint guardians with Miss Jeannette Steiner of a girl-baby, barely one year old. Stanley has theories of education, which he immediately brings to bear upon his ward. Lysle is an artist, and spends most of his time in Paris after leaving school. Little Rosalie is taught self-control, swimming, riding, shooting, French, German, Italian, Spanish, logic, etc., etc.—everything but sweet baby and girlish ways. The scene shifts between Paris and New York. There is a mystery, a failure, a defalcation, much art and many conversations before the maiden is finally moulded into a happy wife.

Todd, Mrs. Marion. Pizarro and John Sherman. Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., [1891.] c. 168 p. D. (The Ariel lib., extra no. A.) pap., 25 c.

Senator John Sherman is compared with Francisco Pizarro, the conqueror of Peru—the terms brigand, traitor, Shylock, etc., being applied to both. The pamphlet is chiefly an attack upon Sherman's public utterances relative to the greenbacks and record, the resumption of specie payments and the funding of the national debt, etc.

The poem is sung by the leaf of a maple-tree that first rejoices in its birth, its summer, its autumn splendor, and then lies shrivelled on the ground questioning the use of its creation. Its thoughts are answered by a solemn pine-tree, which teaches it that "all things, everywhere existent, form component parts of one creative plan." The pine-tree also points out the lessons of life to man, "the image of his Maker."

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JUNE 20, 1891.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

THE PROFESSION OF BOOKSELLING. IV.

CATALOGUES, TRADE PAPERS, LITERARY JOURNALS, ETC., AND THEIR STUDY.—III.

"A library is not worth anything without a catalogue: it is a Polyphemus without any eye in its head."—CARLYLE.

WE present herewith the first instalment of a list of books for the bookseller's workshop. The list might easily have been extended to many times its size, or contracted, but it seemed advisable to give a record of such books as would be of immediate use to the average bookseller, as well as to include those of which it may be useful to have information in case of need. As it is, many books have been recorded which probably few booksellers will see the use of putting in their working library. Unfortunately, there are booksellers—too many, we fear—who consider books for their own reference as of little account. Not that they have knowledge of the matter sufficient to be able to dispense with them, but because they are blind to their own interests. They will rather turn away a customer with the abrupt answer, "Never heard of such a book," than put themselves in a position to give whatever information is desired. That this is short-sighted policy we need not point out to those who know the value of trade helps. Every trade and profession needs tools, and the one equipped with the best, other things being equal, will be able to do the best and most efficient work. And, further, in the book business, as in every other profession, the best tools are the cheapest in the long run.

We would not be understood as claiming that a bookseller must necessarily have all the books here enumerated. With the exception of the American and English publications in the departments of Trade Catalogues and Trade Journals, of which we think every live bookseller ought to have all that are in print and for sale, a wise selection in the other departments will suffice for ordinary use. As one can afford it, however, the purchase of the remaining ones will be found a paying investment. It should not be overlooked that a bookseller cannot have too many tools. No book is ever complete in its own branch; therefore two or three will likely be of more service than even the best one of them alone.

We desire to acknowledge the assistance rendered by Messrs. K. A. Linderfelt, C. A. Cutter, W. E. Foster, C. N. Caspar and C. E. Butler of Brentano's in revising the proofs of this list, and for suggestions that helped to make it more complete. We should be glad to have further suggestions, or word of additional works, for future use.

AMERICAN CATALOGUE of books in print and for sale (including reprints and importations), July 1, 1876; comp. under the direction of F. Leypoldt by L. E. Jones. 2 v. (1) Author-and-title; (2) Subject. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1880. 4°, hf. mor.

Aims to present all the bibliographical features of the books in the American market, in 1876, arranged in the first volume alphabetically by both authors and titles, and in the second volume alphabetically by subjects. As it was impracticable to bring the body of the work (which contains over 125,000 entries) down to a later date than July, 1876, without further delaying its appearance, an appendix was added to the first volume, containing the publications of most of the leading houses issued subsequently to that date. As a further aid, a list of bibliographies was prefixed to the second volume, to assist the student in prosecuting his researches beyond the province of the catalogue proper. This and the supplementary volumes thus form the only approximately complete guide in existence to the American books of the day, so arranged as to make reference easy from whatever direction the inquiry may come, whether from that of the author, or the title, or the subject. They not only furnish the desired information about any particular book of which the consulter is in search, but show what others there are by the same author, or the same subject in which he is interested.

"To booksellers, of course, it is indispensable; but it is almost equally needful to careful bookbuyers. It will take its place at once as a most valuable assistant of the [* NOTE.—It should be borne in mind that this list includes only such works as address themselves directly to the bookseller. For that reason only the more prominent journals of a general literary character will be found on record; and the fact that others have been omitted is not to be considered as a reflection upon their merit or usefulness. Books and journals of interest chiefly to the bookmaker, such as "Publisher and Author," American Bookmaker, etc., will be given when that part of this series is reached which will treat of the making and publishing of books—the series being intended to cover not only bookselling, but the publishing and stationery business as well. Consult, also, the list printed in connection with this series in the issue of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, March 14, 1891, p. 395 et seq.—ED. P. W.]

book committee in every library whose purchases extend beyond the merest current literature, or where any attempt is made to fill up particular branches; and it may even be found useful as a supplement and corrective of the classed catalogue, or perhaps as a substitute for one in those unhappy libraries which are too poor to have a guide of their own."—Nation.

The author-and-title volume is out of print. The subject volume may be had at the office of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, in half leather binding, at $15. The number left is limited.

AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1876–1884: Books recorded (including reprints and importations) July 1, 1876, to June 30, 1884; comp. under the editorial direction of R: R. Bowker by Miss A. I. Appleton. 1 v., incl. Author-and-title, and subject parts. N. Y., Office of "The Publishers' Weekly," 1885. 4°, hf. leath., $15.

Its appendices contain U. S. Government publications, Jan. 1, 1881, to June 30, 1884; Publications of literary and scientific societies; Books published in series; Omissions [in the body of the work] from the cheap libraries.

AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1884–1890: Books recorded (including reprints and importations) July 1, 1884, to June 30, 1890; comp. under the editorial direction of R: R. Bowker by Miss A. I. Appleton, and others. N. Y., Office of "The Publishers' Weekly," 1891. 4°, hf. leath., $15.

Contains besides the regular features of its predecessors: a list of State publications, and publications of literary and scientific societies. The list of Government publications is brought down to June 30, 1890.

ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE: being the full titles, with descriptive notes, of all books recorded in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, with author, title and subject index, publishers' annual lists, and directory of publishers. N. Y., Office of "The Publishers' Weekly," 1891. Annually. 8°, hf. leath., $3.50.

First volume published in 1886 (now out of print). The volume for 1890 forms the first supplement to the "American Catalogue, 1884–90," including the second half of 1890, which is not covered by that volume of the "American Catalogue."

AMERICAN EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE: price-list of school and text books used in the U. S., with name of publisher, wholesale and retail prices, etc. N. Y., Office of "The Publishers' Weekly." Annually. 8°, pap., 25 c.; leatherette, 50 c.

Includes a price-list of the text-books in use in the United States, arranged alphabetically by author's or editor's name; and a detailed subject-index, referring from each specific subject to authors of books on that subject, so that the advantages of both a finding list for the trade and a class catalogue for the use of schools are combined.

BEST READING (THE): hints on the selection of books, on the formation of libraries, on courses of reading, etc., with classed and priced bibliography for easy reference. 4th ed., continued to 1876, with additions of select lists of the best German, French, Spanish and Italian literature, by F. B. Perkins. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. 12°, cl., $1.50.

—— —— 2d ser., 1878–1881; 3d ser., 1882–1886, by L. E. Jones. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1882, 1887. 12°, cl., ea., $1.

BOOKS OF ALL TIME: a guide for the purchase of books, comp. by F: Leypoldt and Lynds E. Jones. N. Y., Office of "The Publishers' Weekly." 32°, pap., 10 c.

ENGLISH CATALOGUE OF BOOKS published in Great Britain and Ireland in the year 1890; also of the principal books published in the United States, with an alphabetical index of subjects. London, Sampson Low, Marston & Co. 8°, pap., 5 s.

This publication is issued annually, limiting each title to a line and stating the month of its publication as a reference to the corresponding number of the Publishers' Circular, in which the full title is given. Now and then these annual issues are condensed into one alphabet, substituting the year of publication for the month, and separating the author and subject lists into separate volumes. Of these catalogues, covering longer periods, the following have appeared so far:

Author Lists.

1. ENGLISH CATALOGUE, 1835–1862, 63 s. (now out of print and scarce).
2. ENGLISH CATALOGUE, 1863–1871, 42 s.
3. ENGLISH CATALOGUE, 1872–1880, 42 s.
4. ENGLISH CATALOGUE, 1881–1890. In press.

Subject Lists.

1. ALPHABETICAL SUBJECT INDEX, 1837–1856, 26 s.
2. ALPHABETICAL SUBJECT INDEX, 1856–1873, 42 s.
3. ALPHABETICAL SUBJECT INDEX, 1874–1880, 18 s.
4. ALPHABETICAL SUBJECT INDEX, 1881–1890. In press.

By working backwards, through all these publications, it is thus possible to reach the full title of any work that has appeared in the Publishers' Circular since 1837.

KELLY, JA., ed. The American Catalogue of books (original and reprint) published in the U. S. from January, 1861, to January, 1866, with date of publication, size, price and publisher's name; with supplement containing pamphlets, sermons, and addresses on the civil war in the U. S., 1861–1866, and appendix containing names of learned societies and other literary associations, with a list of their publications, 1861–1866. N. Y., J: Wiley & Son, 1866. 8°.

—— —— Vol. 2, 1866–1871 (Jan.), containing all the features of the first vol. excepting list of pamphlets, etc., on the civil war. N. Y., J: Wiley & Son. 1871. 8°.

A continuation of Roorbach's "Bibliotheca Americana." A number of books published prior to 1861 and omitted in Roorbach's fourth volume are given in Kelly's first volume. A few copies may still be had of James Kelly, 23 Clinton Pl., N. Y.

PUBLISHERS' TRADE LIST ANNUAL: the latest catalogues of American book publishers, etc. New York, 1873–1891. N. Y., Office of publication, 330 Pearl Street. Annually. $2.

The Trade List Annual contains:

1. An index to contributors and advertisers.
2. An index to special lines, giving important information as to where to find what is wanted.
3. Short title list with cross and subject references of the books issued from January to July each year, forming a supplement to the "Annual Catalogue" of the year preceding the issue of the T. L. A.
4. The Educational Catalogue, which is compiled every year at the office of "The Publishers' Weekly," and used by the entire trade and all interested in education, as the best reference list of school-books.
5. The latest catalogues, price-lists, etc., of publishers, manufacturing stationers and first hands in specialties, contributed in the printed sheets and bound in alphabetical order by the firm names of the contributors. In this department alone there are over two thousand (2000) pages.
6. Supplementary catalogues, price-lists, etc., of publishers, manufacturing stationers, and first hands in specialties, printed at the office of the "Publishers' Weekly," and paged continuously.

The volume for 1875 is valuable for its short-title index to every book and article mentioned in the lists included in the volume.

REFERENCE CATALOGUE OF CURRENT LITERATURE, 1889; being the English publishers' catalogues accompanied by a reference index of 60,000 entries. Lond., J. Whitaker & Sons. Nearly 4000 pp. 8°, hf. mor. 10 s.

This, as well as the previous volumes for 1874, '75, '77, '80 and '85, is out of print. It is arranged on the plan of the Publishers' Trade List Annual. A full index to every book that appears in the volume forms an important feature of every issue.

RICH, Obadiah. Bibliotheca Americana vetus, 1493–1700. Lond., O. Rich, no date. 8°. o. p.

—— Catalogue of Books relating principally to America, 1506 to 1700. Lond., O. Rich, 1835. 8°. o.p.

RICH, Obadiah. Bbliotheca Americana nova, or catalogue of books relating to America, printed between 1700 and 1844. Lond., O. Rich, 1846. 2 v., 8°, 32 s. o.p.

ROORBACH, Orville A. Bibliotheca Americana: catalogue of American publications, including reprints and original works, from 1820–1852, inclusive; with list of periodicals published in the U. S. N. Y., O. A. Roorbach, 1852. 8°.

—— —— Supplement, October, 1852, to May, 1855, including also a repetition of such books as have either changed prices or publishers during that period. [As an appendix are given a number of publishers' catalogues.] N. Y., O. A. Roorbach, Jr., 1855. 8°.

—— Addenda, May, 1855, to March, 1858. N. Y., Wiley & Halsted, 1858.

—— Vol. IV., March, 1858, to January, 1861. N. Y., Orville A. Roorbach, 1861.

Out of print. Copies frequently turn up in auction sales. The only catalogue in existence covering the same period.

SABIN, Jos., ed. Bibliotheca Americana: a dictionary of books relating to America from its discovery to the present time. Pts. 1–114, A–Simms. N. Y., Sabin, 21 Ann St., 1868–91. ea., pap., $5.

The concluding parts are in preparation.

SARGANT, E. B., and Whishaw, B., comps. Guide-Book to Books. Lond., Henry Frowde, 1891. In press.

The total number of books on all subjects recommended is about six thousand, and these have been very carefully selected by more than a hundred specialists, many of them of the highest eminence. The "Guide-Book" is arranged alphabetically by subjects, and gives, in addition to the titles of books, the prices, and in many cases brief descriptive notes.

SONNENSCHEIN, W: Swan. The Best Books: a readers' guide to the choice of the best available books (about 50,000) in every department of science, art and literature, down to 1890; with dates of the first and last editions and price, size and publisher's name of each book. 2d ed., with complete indexes. Lond., Swan Sonnenschein & Co.; N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. 1100 p. 4°, cl., net, $9; interleaved, net, $13.50.

An excellent general catalogue of books of permanent value on all subjects. The books are grouped (1) into large classes, (2) into sections, subsections and paragraphs —with the result of obtaining all the literature of one subject in one list, and that of outlying subjects close at hand. Cross-references have been freely employed, while the author, title and subject indexes added to this edition make reference extremely easy. The compiler has avoided confusing the seeker after information, by not including any very large number of books in each section, recording only such as are "best," the term being used in the most catholic sense. Its scope is further limited to books in print and obtainable in the ordinary course of trade.

TRÜBNER, N. Bibliographical Guide to American Literature: a classed list of books published in America during 1817 to 1857, with alphabetical index. Lond., Trübner & Co., 1859. 8°, 18 s.

Special.

BIBLIOTHECA POLYTECHNICA: directory of technical literature: classified catalogue of all books, annuals and journals published in America, England, France and Germany, including their relation to legislation, hygiene and daily life; ed. by Fritz von Szczepanski. 1st annual issue. N. Y., The International News Co., 1890. 8°, cl., 75 c.

Though not so complete as it should be, is perhaps as much so as could be expected for a first edition. As regards the lists of technical journals and publications of the printing trade and allied crafts, for instance, the editor has not been up to his work. The Bookbinder, which ceased to exist over a year ago, is there, but The British Bookmaker, which succeeded it, is omitted. The Printer, which died over two years ago, is also in the list, as well as The American Lithographer, which ceased to exist months ago, while The American Bookmaker, a very live journal, finds no place, and several other American trade organs are omitted also. The German Monatschrift für Buchbinderei, and several French printing trade journals are also overlooked. Notwithstanding these omissions the book is a useful one and fills a decided gap in the list of reference-books.

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY. Handbook for Readers: an account of the catalogues, a bibliography of special subjects, list of indexes to periodicals, etc. 9th ed. Bost., Boston Public Library, 1890. 16°, pap., 50 c.

Compiled by James Lyman Whitney. Notes of over 4000 special bibliographies contained in volumes or separately issued.

The Boston Public Library has also published the following valuable class-lists:

1. ARTS AND SCIENCES.
2. ENGLISH PROSE FICTION, including translations and juvenile books, with notes for readers intended to point out for parallel reading the historical sources of works of fiction. (April, 1877.)
3. FOREIGN LANGUAGES.
4. HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL, including the histories of literature, art, sects, etc., politics, geography, voyages, sketches, and manners and customs, with notes for readers under subject references.
5. POETRY, DRAMA, etc.

BOWKER, R: R., and ILES, G:, eds. The Reader's Guide in Economic, Social and Political Science. N. Y., The Society for Political Education, 330 Pearl St., [G. P. Putnam's Sons,] 1891. 12°, cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The titles of this bibliography include the leading works by American, English, French and German authors. In addition, recent magazine articles bearing upon political questions are mentioned, and full references are given to government publications. The principal American organizations for economic and political study or philanthropic work are noted, and their publications set forth. The chief value of the Guide is in the descriptive and critical notes appended to its principal titles. In providing these the editors have been aided by twenty-six eminent educators and specialists. Their recommendations include three brief reading courses planned for youths, for readers in a second stage of progress, and for students. An appendix shows in summary the courses in political and economic science offered in the leading colleges to both men and women. Full index.

BRITISH MUSEUM PUBLICATIONS. In the value and extent of its collections the Library of the British Museum ranks before all the great libraries of the world, the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris alone excepted. It now contains nearly two millions of volumes of printed books, and more than fifty thousand manuscripts. The musical works comprise 20,000 volumes and four times that number of separate pieces. The collection of maps is between 120,000 and 150,000.

The CATALOGUE OF MUSIC is still in ms., that of the Maps has been printed in 2 vols. (see below), and the General Alphabetical CATALOGUE OF PRINTED BOOKS, which comprised nearly 3,000,000 entries and filled 2000 folio volumes, is now passing through the press. It is estimated that the whole of the Catalogue of Printed Books will make about 500 royal 4to volumes, and that it may be completed before the end of this century. Useful sections, such as ÆSOP, ÆSCHYLUS, AMERICA, BACON, BUNYAN, BYRON, SWEDENBORG, VIRGIL, and XENOPHON have been printed separately.

Recently the titles of all ACCESSIONS TO THE LIBRARY have been printed. Parts I. to CI. containing titles of modern works; Parts I.–XXVIII. containing titles of old English works; and Parts I.–XLII. containing titles of old Foreign works, have been issued to date. These, together with the printed sections of the General Catalogue, are supplied to subscribers by special arrangement.

—— Bengali Books. 1886. 4°, 10 s.

A new edition of the Catalogue of the Hindustani Books in the Library of the British Museum was recently announced.

CASPAR, C. N., comp. Practical Catalogue of Law-Books, arranged by subjects, with complete index to authors. Milwaukee, Wis., C. N. Caspar, 437 E. Water Street, 1891. 16°, 25 c.

Embracing the latest editions of all standard law and text books; legal periodicals; books for special States; American reports, digests, statutes, etc.; U. S. statutes and reports; U. S. and State court reports; State reports; collections of State reports; Lawyers' Co-operative reports; National Reporter system and English reports. In every case the initials of the authors are given and the dates of the latest issue. The bibliographical arrangement adopted affords a clue to the entire domain of the present American law literature. Standard English books have also been included. Any book listed can be found at once, and also what publications exist on any given topic, stating edition, date and price. The publisher is indicated by a figure which corresponds to a similar one in a key to publishers which is supplied separately. An author index indicates what books are included by any writer, and where they can be looked up.

FLETCHER, W: I., ed. The Co-operative Index to Periodicals for 1890; ed. by W: I. Fletcher with co-operation of members of the American Library Assoc. N. Y., Office of "The Publishers' Weekly," 1891. 8°, hf. mor., $2.50; pap., $2.

A complete index in one alphabet to the periodicals for 1890; it is for the first time published as an annual, and not in quarterly numbers as hitherto. Supplemented with an author index. The connecting links between this volume and the Poole's "Index to periodical literature, 1882–1887," are the Co-operative Index issued in quarterly parts for 1888, with an author index in one alphabet; and the volume for 1889. Price of the 1888, hf. mor., $3.50; 1889, hf. mor., $2.50.

GALLOUPE, F. E. Index to Engineering Periodicals, 1883–87. Boston, F. E. Galloupe, 30 Kilby Street, 1888. 8°, $2.

An index to the principal periodicals in England and America, comprising engineering, railroads, science, manufactures and trade, that is valuable principally because there is nothing else to fill its place, the arrangement being very bad and unsatisfactory. Knight's New mechanical dictionary, Boston, 1884, contains a good topical index to this class of periodicals for 1876–1880.

GRIFFIN, A. P. C. Index of Articles upon Local American History, in historical collections in the Boston Public Library. [Bost., G. E. Littlefield, 1889. $3.]

Reprinted from the Bulletin of the Boston Public Library.

GRISWOLD, W: M., comp. A Descriptive List of Novels and Tales dealing with American Country Life. Cambridge, Mass., W: M. Griswold, 1890. 8°, pap., 50 c.

—— A Descriptive List of International Novels. Cambridge, Mass., W: M. Griswold, 1891. 8°, pap., 50 c.

—— A Descriptive List of Novels and Tales dealing with American City Life; [also, a supplement] including some works descriptive of country life omitted from previous list. Cambridge, Mass., W: M. Griswold, 1891. 8°, pap., 50 c.

Lists of good old and new novels by American and foreign authors, easily obtainable, but which, in many cases, have been forgotten within a year or two after publication. They will be followed by other lists describing European, romantic, eccentric and fanciful novels and tales. The descriptive extracts which follow each title are taken from leading literary papers.

HAFERKORN, H. E., (and HEISE, Paul,) comps. Handy Lists of Technical Literature; reference catalogue of books in English, 1880–1888; with select list of books printed before 1880. Milwaukee, Wis., H. E. Haferkorn, 1889. 4 pts., 8°, ea., $1.50; pap., $1.; key, 25 c. extra.

Four parts issued thus far. Pt. 1: Useful arts in general, products and processes used in manufacture, technology and trades. Pt. 2: Military and naval science, navigation, sailing, shipbuilding, etc. Pt. 2*a*: Electricity and magnetism. Pt. 3: Engineering and mechanics. Each part contains list of periodicals and annuals.

INDEX CATALOGUE of the Library of the Surgeon-General's office, U. S. Army; comp. under the direction of J. S. Billings and Rob. Fletcher. Authors and subjects. Washington, D. C., Government Printing Office, 1880 and foll. 4°.

In 1890 eleven volumes had been published, carrying the work down to Regent. As a continuation of the above work may be considered the:

INDEX MEDICUS, a monthly classified record of the current medical literature of the world; comp. under the supervision of Dr. Billings and Dr. Fletcher. Detroit, Mich., G. S. Davis. $10 per year.

JONES, L. A. Index to Legal Periodical Literature [to the end of 1886.] Boston, [Boston Book Co.,] 1888. 8°, hf. mor., net, $10.

A work of the greatest merit and importance, even outside its proper legal sphere. Much attention is given to biographical articles relating to distinguished judges and lawyers, both living and deceased. The number of vols. of law periodicals indexed is 1373, and the articles pertaining to law and legislation in upwards of 4400. Vols. of literary and historical periodicals are also included.

PANTOBIBLION: international bibliographical review of the world's scientific literature, editor A. Kersha, C.E. St. Petersburg, Fontawka 64; N. Y., D. Appleton & Co. Monthly. 24 s. per year.

A very ambitious bibliography of the publications of all languages and nations within its scope, giving (1) a classified list of all the new books in a systematic arrangement, (2) critical articles on the leading scientific publications, in the language of the work criticised, (3) the contents of the current periodical literature of the world in the domain of science. The first number, dated April 26, 1891, contains about 1200 titles of new books, 80 critical articles, and gives the contents of 270 periodicals. It is printed in some 15 languages.

POOLE, W: F: Index to Periodical Literature; edited with the co-operation of the American Library Association by W: F: Poole and W: I. Fletcher, M. A. 3*d ed.*, brought down to January, 1882. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1882. 8°, cl., $15.

—— —— First Supplement, Jan. 1882–Jan. 1887. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1888. 8°, cl., $8.

This supplement includes references to periodicals which appeared from January 1, 1882, to January 1, 1887, and also to a considerable number of older serials which were not included in the edition of 1882. The number of volumes indexed is 1065, and they belong to 141 different sets of periodicals. Sixty-one sets are included in this volume which did not appear in the edition of 1882. Of these thirty-three are new, having issued their first numbers during the five years, and twenty-eight are older sets which are now indexed for the first time. These volumes are therefore for all practical purposes an index to English periodical literature for the nineteenth century, continued by W: I. Fletcher's "Co-operative Index to Periodicals," which see.

SARGENT, J: F., comp. Reading for the Young: classified and annotated catalog, with an alphabetical author index; prepared for publication by Mary E. and Abby L. Sargent, and issued by the American Library Assoc., Publishing Section. Bost., Library Bureau, 146 Franklin St., 1890. 8°, hf. cl., $1; hf. goat, $1.50; pap., 75 c.

Classified first under large groups, as natural sciences, useful arts, fine arts, literature, historical fiction, history, travels, biography, etc.; these are subdivided under more special headings. History, historical fiction and travels are grouped under countries, natural sciences under the special sciences, etc. Lists of periodical literature on kindred subjects follow each division, with references to periodicals in which published. The letters a, b, c in parentheses are attached to most of the titles to show, in a general way, to what class of young readers they arr best adapted. The books in Miss Hewins' "Books for the young" are included by permission. Annotations follow the titles in almost all cases, explaining clearly the nature and aim of the work.

SOULE, C: C. The Lawyers' Reference Manual of law-books and citations. Bost., [Boston Book Co.,] 1884. 8°, hf. shp., net, $4.

A bibliography of American, English, Irish, Scotch and British colonial law reports, arranged as follows: 1, An itemized list of the American law reports, with notes in regard to their editions and peculiarities; 2, A similar list of the English reports. The notes in this department condense the most valuable information given in Wallace's "Reporters," Marvin's "Legal bibliography," and other authoritative sources, with much additional matter; 3, Lists, with notes, of the Irish, Scotch and British colonial reports; 4, An index of legal literature, arranged by authors' names, which serves both as an index to the preceding parts, and as an original list of text-books, giving the last English and last American edition of each book, with brief title, date, and place of publication; 5, A full index of text-books by subjects, showing the date of each book, and whether it is American, foreign or local; 6. A remarkably full index of abbreviations. Mr. N. C. Moak says of this work: "It contains more information upon the subject of law-books than any book I know of, and just the kind of information which can only be obtained by access to large libraries and extensive collections of catalogues and works on legal bibliography."

TRÜBNER'S Catalogue of Dictionaries and Grammars of the Principal Languages and Dialects of the World. 2*d ed.* London, Trübner & Co., 1882. 8°, 4 s.

An exceedingly valuable catalogue.

U. S. GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS. Descriptive Catalogue of the Government publications of the U. S., September 5, 1774–March 4, 1881, compiled by order of Congress by Ben: Perley Poore. Washington, D.C., Government Printing Office, 1885. 4°.

—— —— Jan. 1, 1881, to June 30, 1884, with a few preceding standard publications. First appendix to the "American Catalogue," 1876–1884. [For prices see under "American Catalogue."]

—— —— July 1, 1884, to June 30, 1890. First appendix to "American Catalogue," 1884–1890. [Published separately.] N. Y., Office of "The Publishers' Weekly," 330 Pearl St., 1891. 4°, $1.

—— —— Monthly Catalogue, prepared by J. H. Hickcox. Washington, D. C., J. H. Hickcox, 906 M Street, N. W. $5 per year.

Commenced in 1885, this is really one of the most satisfactory catalogues of Government publications since that time. A very full and good index to each yearly volume greatly facilitates its use.

WOLF'S VADEMECUM: Schlagwort-kataloge aus allen Wissenschaften. Leipzig, G. Levien.

A valuable reference list to scientific literature, including periodicals, notwithstanding the fact that the compiler often fails to record important works. Thus far (1891) ten volumes have been published or announced as follows:

I.	Medicinisches Vademecum.....Marks,	4.00
II.	Natur- u. exakte wissenschaften, 2 v.....	1.75
	Supplemented by the following volumes:

IX.	Kriegswissenschaft. Nearly ready.
X.	History. In preparation.

BOOKS ABOUT BOOKS WHICH RELATE TO BOOKS. Instead of attempting to give a list of special bibliographies, which has already been done satisfactorily by others, the compiler contents himself with giving only references to such books and publications as are wholly or in part devoted to the bibliography of bibliographies: The Adressbuch des deutschen Buchhandels, in its annual issues, gives a full list of European, and other bibliographies and bookseller's helps. —W: Beer's "Report on aids and guides, 'Lib. EDUCATIONAL VS. POLITICAL INTERESTS IN THE SCHOOL-BOOK BUSINESS.

Edwin Ginn in the Evening Post, June 6.

ABOUT a year ago the four large houses of Van Antwerp, Bragg & Company, Ivison, Blakeman & Company, A. S. Barnes & Company, and D. Appleton & Company were consolidated into the American Book Company. At this time I tried very hard to persuade them not to form this company, for I feared that it would tend to stir up fresh legislation in regard to the book business, which has been, almost without exception, an injury both to the publishers and the public. Whether the State itself publishes books, as in California, or contracts for them at a low price, as in Minnesota, Indiana and other States, the result has been unfortunate. In California the books are inferior to those already in the market, and cost the pupil about twice as much. In Indiana and Minnesota the books, perhaps, have come cheaper to the pupil, but it is generally admitted that as a whole they are not equal in quality, and, undoubtedly, if the extra amount paid to officials for handling the same could be added to the price of the books, the cost would be even more than formerly. The general tendency is to emphasize cheapness rather than quality, and when a State or a county has uppermost the question of price, the result necessarily is, in books as in everything else, to get an inferior article. Then the effect is bad, also, in another direction. While the commissioners charged with selecting the books for the State in the first place may perform their duty intelligently, yet it offers a great inducement for the publisher to secure the adoption of his books by methods that cannot be commended, and there is danger that each succeeding board will have members upon it more or less favorable to the interests of certain publishers. So far as my knowledge of the business goes, the best condition of affairs has been, and is to-day, in those States where each town and city decides the book question for itself. In every State different localities require different standards. Then where the towns select their own committees, they are generally made up of the best citizens in the town, and the best qualified to perform the duties required of such a board. The amount of money involved in settling the question for a single town is not an undue inducement to the publisher, and it is more likely that the committee will decide the question on its merits.

The question of price is not, and should not be, the most important question in selecting books, for, as gathered from statistics, the average cost of school-books to each pupil throughout the United States is something less than one dollar a year, while the yearly expense of educating a pupil, reckoning the cost of his living, his clothing, the value of his time, the tuition, interest on money invested in buildings, etc., at a low estimate certainly amounts to $150. And yet the books have a very important bearing upon the question of education. There are many teachers who are capable of doing good work independently of the text-book, but by far the greater number rely almost wholly upon it for the value of their instruction. It is safe to estimate that at least 25 per cent. of the worth of the average teacher's work depends upon the text-book. Is it wise economy, therefore, to use inferior books, though we may save the whole price to the pupil, if we are in danger of losing 25 per cent. of the $150 yearly expended? No, it is not cheaper books that are wanted, but better ones. The public can well afford to allow the publisher and editor a fair margin of profit to encourage the best production possible.

Now, what are the conditions most favorable for the production of the best books? Is it well for them to unite in one huge monopoly? What inducement would there be for securing better books if the old ones in use were not in danger of being displaced? Would they look favorably upon publishing a series of new books if it would be an extra expense to them of at least $100,000 to put them in the place of the old ones? I am very much afraid that, as human nature goes, it would take a very strong argument to convince them that there was any necessity for publishing the new books under such circumstances. If, on the contrary, there were several large firms competing sharply with each other constantly for the market, each hoping that a new series might yield $100,000 profit, instead of costing $100,000 extra to issue, would not such a condition be vastly more favorable to the production of the best books? Would not such an inducement tend to more activity in looking for the best educational talent, in order that better books might be produced?

The publisher may conduct his business with a view to the production of the best books, trusting to merit in the long run to reward his efforts, or he may produce such as the politician can use to advantage for securing the favor of the average teacher and committeeman. The former we may designate as the educational, the latter as the political publisher.

To be successful as an educational publisher one should himself be well informed, and have an intimate acquaintance with the schools. He should also possess a good knowledge of human nature, enabling him to read character readily. When a manuscript is presented, he should know whether it is good, and if so whether the schools need such a work. To assist him in a correct opinion he will seek the best advice obtainable. Much depends upon his corps of advisers. Here will come into play his power of reading men. There are plenty of good scholars, not, however, an abundance of men knowing the wants of schools and the qualities of a book best suited to them. A level-headed scholar is required—one whose judgment can be relied on. The educational publisher will not sit idly in his office, waiting for writers to deluge him with manuscripts on every subject under the sun, but will carefully study courses of instruction, and where he finds the greatest defects he will begin his work. The neglected field is likely to prove most profitable, since he will meet here the least competition. His success as a publisher is decided largely by his judgment of men as authors, critics and agents. After he has selected the lines in which he will work, the hunt begins. He looks over the leading teachers. From them he may hope for the successful book. He tries one. The book is correct in subject-matter, but poorly arranged. Another writer is suggestive, bright and original, but careless. A third is careful, but lacks expression. It is rare that all the qualities essential to the successful book-writer are found in one person. Often it becomes necessary to unite several men upon a single work, and here comes in the most difficult task of all. One knows his subject, another is painstaking, a third understands the best form of expression; but to get each to appreciate the value of the others' work, and to continue heartily to labor together for the completion of the book, is a task old Hercules himself might well be proud of accomplishing. Before the good book appears at least fifty manuscripts must be read and a dozen sets of plates made. The successful book must stimulate the great mass of pupils and teachers, and to do this must not be too hard for the lower nor too easy for the upper half. When the publisher thinks he has fulfilled all the conditions, then he must await the test of the school-room. This verdict is often disappointing. Unless a book is satisfactory and remains in use more than five years, it is a failure from the publisher's point of view, for it takes that time for him to get back what it has cost. The margin of profit seems to be very great, but when a dollar book has to be sold to the trade for seventy-five cents, and when it costs twenty-five or thirty cents for paper, printing and binding, and twenty-five more, on an average, for clerk-hire, agents, gift-books, advertising, postage, rent and interest on plates, stock, capital, etc., there is left about twenty-five cents to be divided between author and publisher, a pretty close margin to offset all the risks of this business. The author gets nearly one-half of the net profit, as far as our experience goes—a pretty generous division, as he takes no financial risk, and his books are very largely made up from the results of the school-room work for which he has already been paid. It is commonly supposed that the quality of a book decides the number of copies sold, but if the forces could be accurately calculated, it would be found that not more than one-third of the sales are due to the author, the other two-thirds to the brains of the agent and the publisher, and to the capital invested. A few books sell themselves to a great extent, but quite as many owe their success almost wholly to the way they are placed on the market. This line of work offers a rare opportunity for a man who has the genius to associate the best talent in planning wise courses of study and making the books needed for carrying out the same.

The political publisher works on a very different plan. He wants a popular book, one that will be attractive at first sight, and so easy that the great majority will favor it at once. It must have an abundance of pictures, large type and little matter on the page. Other things being equal, the most influential teacher is selected for the work. It does not follow that the best teachers are the best writers, nor the best writers the best teachers. The influential teacher will be sought in important cities or schools to make a book, even if the publisher already has one on the subject. He wants that teacher to favor his other books, and does not mind spending a few hundred dollars on his plates, whether the work is good or not. On this basis he will readily get his books into use, though the material may be scanty and the merit scantier. Such books appeal to the lower half of the teachers and pupils, but they fail to stimulate or interest the upper portion, and in a very short time they are apt to become unsatisfactory, and would naturally soon be displaced by the better ones but for the fact that the publisher has secured the leading political influences that control the introduction and use of books.

Do I mean to say that a poor book can be kept in the schools any length of time? Yes. To-day many large cities and towns are using in the schools books which the teachers have for years tried to get rid of. Two or three determined men on a board of education can generally prevent a change, especially when a publisher has trained all his forces on the other members. Two or three men will almost always be absent from meetings; others have projects to accomplish, and will agree to stay away or vote against a change if it will gain them votes. The influential friends of each committeeman are known, and some of them will happen to have important business with these men on the very night of the meeting. The political boss of the city controls several votes. There are many other influences known to politicians, which they understand how to use to the best advantage, and as there is naturally a strong prejudice against changes, one may readily see how difficult it must be to get rid of a book backed by a strong house.

This brings us to the question which is uppermost in the public mind at the present time. If a single house can maintain its books for fifteen years against the united efforts of the teachers, what must be the lifetime of a book when five of the most powerful houses in the trade, controlling three-fourths of all the school-books in the country, are united? The combination resents being called a trust. But why are trusts so obnoxious to the public? Because they are monopolies. How many trusts control three-fourths of any trade? The people care nothing for the form of the organization. It is the aim of the concern. Is it to crush out free competition? If so, the people will find some way to meet it. Does it claim the schools now using its books as its own peculiar property, and has it put up its sign with this warning: "Whoever dares to trespass on these premises by selling any of his books here, at the same rate we offer ours, will speedily rue it, for we shall displace his publications wherever we can find them, at any cost. It shall be war to the knife. 'We have freely spent our time and money for twenty years in acquiring the trade of the schools. We have the political influence and money necessary to hold them, and we propose to protect our vested property"?

This would be a bold position, and the company might be able to carry out such a policy if it were in the sugar or oil trade. The publisher of school-books must transact his business on entirely different principles, for his relations to the public are much closer in many respects. The public pays a great deal of money for educational purposes, and must see to it that every facility is furnished to get the best results. As before stated, text-books are an important factor in the problem. The great majority of teachers depend almost wholly upon them in giving their instruction. It is important, therefore, that they should have the best. Every town and city in most States has the control of books in its own hands. Whether the publisher will or not, he must take the public into consideration, as it seems to have some voice in this matter. While one set of publishers is spending a large portion of time and money in manipulating votes to put in and hold in their books, others are spending their time and money in looking into the condition of the schools, and are planning with the best teachers and scholars many good series of books that will be a great help to education, and they claim the right to sell these books, wherever the people wish them, without being treated to fire and sword. All publishers have certain rights. They may get whom they can to write their books, pay them for it, print and bind as they please, fix prices, advertise as freely as they like, and ask the people to buy; but if any organization, controlling three-fourths of the business, claims that it has a perpetual right to supply its books to these schools, and that the public shall buy no others, it somewhat exceeds the proper limits of the trade, and may not be surprised if the people question this position, and take matters into their own hands. One of two things will happen—either the public will clear away all obstructions and buy such books as they wish, where they wish, or they will set up the publishing business for themselves.

With all their shortcomings, I think that publishers in general may claim that in the last twenty-five years they have done a good deal to advance the cause of general education, and have made American text-books to-day probably superior to those of any other nation. It has taken a great deal of patient, intelligent hard labor on the part of both authors and publishers to do this. Are we now in a moment of supreme folly about to lose all that advantage? Well knowing the sensitiveness to and prejudice against monopolies, we organize a company which is so powerful as to crush out all competitors in a short time, unless the public come to their aid.

The political element has always been the worst enemy to both publisher and public. The more attention given to "setting up the forces" necessary to introduce and hold in books, the less will be given to improving them. Many have been the complaints of book "rings" fastening themselves on certain cities and States so closely that no changes could be made. Teachers have lost their places or been promoted according as they opposed or favored certain books. Many committeemen have been unduly active for certain books without any one's being able to assign any sufficient cause for it.

The present seems to be a very critical time in the book business. The more we can develop our business on the educational, and the further we can get from the political basis, the better it will be for the public; and whatever is better for the public will surely be better for the trade in the long run.

The organization of the American Book Company, however, uniting as it does five of the large houses, and controlling 90 per cent. of the grammar-school book business of the country, is a move, it seems to me, in the wrong direction, for it multiplies five-fold the political power, and hence increases five tmes the dangers to our business. Any trade that is conducted from the political standpoint calls into play the lower order of faculties as a general thing. One is obliged to seek out the weaknesses of the parties in power, and to play upon them. It commences very simply. A superintendent or committeeman, from the purest motives, believing it for the interest of the community, votes for a publisher's book; then the publisher, feeling kindly toward this person, makes him a present of some kind. It is not money, but some little token or other. It may go as far as a Webster's Dictionary or a set of encyclopædias. Ordinarily, however, it would not commence in that way. It is a dangerous beginning, although the committeeman himself may not feel that it is placing himself under special obligation to accept the gift, under the circumstances. But when this publisher's books come up again for adoption, or others come in competition with his, the danger is that this committeeman would feel more interest in this party's books than he possibly could in a stranger's. Not only from such gradual beginnings, but in many other ways, it happens that the agent of a publisher may secure a large number of persons specially interested in his books. If a committeeman is known to have strong friends in a city or town, the fact is found out, and these friends are interested one way or another to influence him. The same line of policy is pursued in regard to teachers. Those that have influence are sought out and cultivated, and their aid is secured in some way. If there is a lawyer upon the school board, the business of a firm requires legal talent oftentimes; there are collections to be made, or other affairs needing the help of a lawyer. If a physician is on the school board, the agent sometimes is taken sick suddenly. A case of this kind actually occurred a short time ago. Both father and son happened to be physicians. The agent went to the father for some slight ailment, and after he had passed out his five or ten dollars, and was just going away, he said to the physician, "Perhaps you may be interested to know that I am trying to introduce a certain line of books in this city." "Oh!" said the physician, "I am not the person whom you wish to see about books. It is my son who is on the School Board!" Straightway the agent goes to the son and has another examination for the same trouble, and makes known his business. The matter, by accident, was spoken of between the father and son, and the joke was too good to be kept. Thus it came to be exposed.

From such beginnings the political line of work develops into serious difficulties, such as have recently cropped out in the States of Virginia, West Virginia and Washington. In some of these cases heavy bribes have been given to secure votes. Where one case of bribery is exposed it is generally believed that a hundred are successful. A large corporation has some representative in every important city or town in the country.

In addition to all the corrupt influences known to politics, there is this further danger: that a rich company will prevail upon a city or town, when it is dissatisfied with the books used, to take in exchange its new books, free of charge; and, appealing as this does to the spirit of gain in the city or town, they take the new books without particularly looking into the question to see whether there are not better published by other houses. In a single year the new books become old and prove more unsatisfactory than the ones supplanted, but it is not so easy to make a second change. They are obliged to keep on with the old books for many years.

Any action of this kind that tends to sink out of sight the merit of a book and emphasize the one fact of pecuniary gain or price is fraught with great harm, for it lowers the business down to the lowest cost of printer's ink, paper and binding. The unfortunate thing about this whole matter is that the formation of the American Book Company intensifies the political side of the question, as I have said before, by creating alarm in the public mind, which is sure to result in a large amount of special legislation. When the people decide to make their own books, as in the State of California, they find many difficulties. It costs a great deal of money to establish a first-class printing office and bindery, and to make the plates for a series of books. It is difficult to secure the right kind of talent to make good books. In fact, publishers generally find that the whole United States is not too large a field to draw from for good editors; and when they have the whole country to select from, many series of books have to be issued before a successful one appears. Even the best books that are now in the schools have had to be made over many times before arriving at their present state of perfection. When a person selects the publishing business for his vocation, it is presumable that he has special talents fitting him for that line of work, and when he has to experiment on his own money, he is likely to take greater care to secure a satisfactory product.

If it is necessary for the successful publisher to have special ability for his work and the whole United States for his market, how much more uncertain and difficult must it be when a State goes into the business? Then a person is selected to manage the publishing business not on account of any particular fitness he may have for the work, but because he has been useful to the party in a political way. The State has to go to the large expense of printing and binding, and the amount of work required is not sufficient to keep up a first-class establishment. The State is also limited largely to its own people for editorial work, and the party having the public money at its disposal is not, in the nature of things, as careful in the use of it as he would be with his own. Then it is found that in a few years the books have to be revised and new plates have to be made, even under the best conditions. Therefore it is not strange that the experiment in California was such a significant failure. They find that their books are not only inferior to those in the open market, but they have cost about twice as much. The California experiment has probably ended that line of State action. There are others, however, that are nearly as dangerous, or perhaps more so, because their failure cannot be ascertained as quickly. I refer to State contracts, like those in Indiana and Minnesota, where the books are selected for a term of years, five or fifteen. At first the books may be fairly good, as the commission selecting them is likely to be made up of the strongest men, who will consider the question of merit as well as price. Gradually, however, there will be found upon these commissions parties more or less favorable to certain publishers. Where this danger does not exist, the price will be emphasized more than the merit, so that in a short time inferior books will certainly result. When the question of price is uppermost in the people's mind the cheaper will always drive the better out of the market.

There is a danger that the people themselves at first will help on the American Book Co. by accepting the gift of new books for old ones, and thus assist to destroy their only means of protection—free, open competition—and they will not realize fully their own dangers until after they have themselves firmly established a gigantic monopoly.

I am very much afraid that it will be impossible now to save the country from going through this disastrous experiment. The American Book Co. begins to realize something of the intense prejudice against large corporations, monopolies and trusts, and during the last year it would appear that it is trying to render this legislation as harmless as possible by tying up States and com-ties for a period of five years. This renewed activity in State legislation opposed by the American Book Company is having its legitimate effect in paring down profits to the smallest margin possible. Two years ago, when Indiana adopted the law fixing a maximum price which the State would pay for school-books, no reputable publisher would bid, for they all felt that these prices would before long destroy the business; and if they should be established in the State of Indiana they would be the basis of prices for the rest of the country. To-day many of the best books in the market are offered to the State of Indiana, although it is fair to say that the prices of some of them have been raised somewhat in the last year. If I interpret this action correctly, it means simply this: that the immediate outlook of the book business is so bad that the publishers are willing to take whatever margins, however small, there may be in sight today. It will not be many years before the business will reach such a point that there will be no margin of profit to secure any first-class editors, or to enable the publisher to spend the money necessary to experiment in producing a first-class book. It may take ten years to go through this "slough of despond," but I see no help for it now, unless the American Book Company at once ceases its demoralizing traffic of giving new books for old ones free of charge, and discontinues its efforts to induce legislatures to pass laws favorable to itself. The cutting down of the margin of profit below the amount necessary to produce a first-class article, in any business, injures alike the trade and the community. The trades must be prosperous or the community will suffer. If the people will discourage the elements at work unfavorable to the business, and will insist on having those books that have the greatest merit instead of the cheapest price, they may stop this lowering influence. When the public concludes to pay no more for school-books than the price of poor paper, poor ink and poor binding, and nothing for brains in either editor or publisher, they will get just what they pay for. If they want to spend $150 a year to educate a child, and then lose one-half of that expenditure to save twenty-five or fifty cents a year on the school-books, it is about time that they should consider whether such a course is wise economy.

THE CENSOR.

She's a priestess of Minerva,
With a scorn of lighter things;
And no idle smile can swerve her,
For she guards the Pierian springs.
And she draws the sparkling waters
For the learned and the weak,
Giving maidens "Beauty's Daughters,"
And professors crabbed Greek.

In the library fate's thrust her—
A sweet symphony in gray,
With soft eyes whose brilliant lustre
Fairly takes one's breath away.
But still she really seems to know
Each of the weighty tomes
That range from Kipling to De Foe,
From Homer up to Holmes.

If I ask for Herbert Spencer,
Or for Plato or Carlyle,
I can catch the pretty censor
In a faint approving smile;
But at Anna Karenina,
Or the gay contes of France,
She wears a cold demeanor
And a blushing, downcast glance.

THE "OLD CORNER BOOKSTORE," OF SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

THE W. F. ADAMS COMPANY.

If in one of its future issues Progressive Springfield makes the assertion that Springfield, Mass., is the hub of the universe, we, for one, shall not attempt to rashly dispute it. The current number of that lively journal is only the seventh thus far issued, but each one has brought new surprises. According to its accounts Springfield claims some of the most important publishing houses in the country—The Milton Bradley Co., G. & C. Merriam & Co., Clark W. Bryan & Co., King, Richardson & Co., and others; a number of the most important bookstores, such as The W. F. Adams Co., James D. Gill (who now has, however, exclusively an art store, having sold his stock of books to Forbes & Wallace), Horace Rude, H. L. Goodrich, and about fifty others, more or less connected with the book and stationery trade; not to mention the many other skilled industries in which Springfield is said to lead, as for instance the manufacture of carriages, railroad cars and locomotives, bicycles, and guns and arms in general. It has even a rival of Wanamaker's in the immense establishment of Forbes & Wallace, one of the stations of the Syndicate Trading Company. We wait with interest to hear of others.

In the May issue is given an interesting account of the "Old Corner Bookstore," which has stood at the corner of Main and State Streets for more than half a century. The old house was built by Col. Galen Ames in 1834, and was first occupied by George and Charles Merriam in 1835, who used the first floor as a bookstore and the third story as a printing office. The Merriams started business in 1831 in the old Town Hall building on State Street. In this "Old Corner" building Webster's Dictionary had its really first start, although it had been previously published in another place; but it was never printed here. Mr. John M. Wood, who had been with the Merriams in West Brookfield, went to Springfield as a young man and became a partner in the printing business, under the firm-name of Merriam, Wood & Co. The book publishing and selling business was conducted by G. & C. Merriam. At a later date Charles O. Chapin became a partner in the bookstore, and the firm was changed to that of Merriam, Chapin & Co. A few years later the publishing of dictionaries had become so important that the Merriams sold their business to Charles O. Chapin, of Springfield, and Joseph C. Bridgman, of Northampton, the firm-name being Chapin & Bridgman. Successive changes were made and the different firms have been J. C. Bridgman & Co., Bridgman & Whitney, Whitney & Adams, and later as well as at present The W. F. Adams Company. Mr. James L. Whitney, who for many years was connected with the business, was from Northampton, and for a long time had been assistant librarian of the Boston Public Library. Mr. Adams is a native of Springfield, and for six years was connected with the Second National Bank.

George and Charles Merriam remained in the building as publishers of Webster's Dictionary as long as they lived. A short time ago the office of the publishers was removed to the Springfield Institution for Savings, to get more room. The successors of G. & C. Merriam, as miscellaneous book publishers and booksellers, have published a number of local pamphlets and books, but the main part of the business has been confined to the retail trade, like that of many other bookstores in the smaller cities.

The "Old Corner Bookstore" was several years ago made a corporation. Its President and Treasurer is W. F. Adams, and its Secretary is Frank E. Cooper, for many years in the City Clerk's office. In 1889 Mr. Adams bought the land and the building for $40,000. Its original cost to Col. Ames was $1750.

THE "PAPYRUS CLUB" OF CHICAGO.

A NUMBER of Western authors, publishers, artists and booksellers gathered in one of the parlors of the Palmer House of Chicago on the 11th inst. to form a literary society to be entitled Papyrus Club of Chicago. Mr. Stanley Waterloo presided. The meeting was called on the invitation of Mr. Charles H. Sergel, a prominent Chicago publisher, who in a brief address stated the necessity which existed for such an organization. "The objects of the club are to bring together in closer and more friendly relations the authors, artists, publishers and booksellers of Chicago and the great Northwest. At present those different professions are so entirely unacquainted with each other's personnel that authors are sending their works to Boston, New York and Philadelphia to find a market, and publishers, on the other hand, are looking to the East for writers when men of talent and ability are to be found here at their very doors." After discussion as to the means of promoting the interests of the organization, the following committees were appointed: On Permanent Organization, Constitution and By-Laws, Messrs. Charles H. Sergel, Bierblauer, A. D. Hall and D. Schulte. On Membership, Messrs. Kerr, Banks, Vicars, Opie Reid and Austin Granville. Meetings of the new club will be held at the Palmer House every Thursday evening until further notice.

OBITUARY NOTES.

COL. ALEXANDER E. SHELDON, second son of the late Smith Sheldon, of the well-known firm of Sheldon & Co., died at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., on the 11th inst., aged fifty years. When the war broke out Col. Sheldon was studying law at Columbia College, but dropped his studies and went to the front with the 7th Regiment N. Y. S. M. at the first call for troops. He soon wrote home that he had decided to see the war through if he lived. His father, through the influence of his friend, Thurlow Weed, secured him an appointment as second lieutenant in the noted 4th Infantry of the regular army. This was Gen. Grant's old regiment, and Gen. Sheridan was a first lieutenant in it when young Sheldon joined it. The 4th Infantry reached New York from Oregon in August, 1861, and joined the Army of the Potomac, and was in every battle fought by that great army to the end of the rebellion. Col. Sheldon was present and took part in every fight, excepting only the unfortunate battle at Fredericksburg under Gen. Burnside. Young Sheldon was promoted to brevet-major in the regular army "for conspicuous bravery on the field of Antietam," and was again promoted to brevet lieutenant-colonel for conspicuous bravery at Gettysburg. At Gettysburg the slaughter of the regular brigade was so great that the company Capt. Sheldon was commanding had less than ten men who were not either killed or wounded. Col. Sheldon remained in the army two or three years after the war, resigning to take charge of the business department of The Galaxy, then published by Sheldon & Co. This position he held until The Galaxy was sold in 1877. In that year his father and Mr. H. Shailer retired from the firm and Col. Sheldon and two of his brothers were taken into partnership. He was cashier of the firm up to within a couple of months of his death.

HENRY EDWARDS, or, as he was better known, Harry Edwards, the actor and entomologist, died in New York City on the 9th inst. at the age of sixty-seven. He was born in England, but made his reputation in this country. Mr. Edwards was not only a painstaking and acceptable actor, but he was an enthusiastic entomologist and had made one of the best collections of butterflies in this country. Mr. Edwards prepared a number of essays on entomological subjects, with special reference to the butterflies of the United States. He edited for the Brooklyn Entomological Society the "Papilio," published by them, and a few years ago published a book under the same name. He also wrote a work on Pacific Coast Lepidoptera, which was published in two volumes. His last work was a bulletin for the Smithsonian Institution, entitled "Bibliographical Catalogue of the described transformations of North America Lepidoptera." "The Mingled Yarn," a volume of theatrical reminiscences published by G. P. Putnam, was also by him.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Forum for July will contain a review of the policy and an estimate of the character of the young Emperor of Germany, by F. Heinrich Geffcken, Imperial Privy Councillor, who explains in detail the dismissal of Bismarck and the relations between the Emperor and the ex-Chancellor. This article is one of the most important ever contributed to an American review.

BARON DE HIRSCH, whose liberal gifts for the relief of his outlawed kinsmen have attracted so much attention, has written an article expressly for the July number of the North American Review, describing his plans and the motives which have guided him in his philanthropic work. Mrs. Amelia E. Barr contributes to the same issue a defence of the dignity of the profession of literature. She is much offended by a passage in a recent story which imputes to society people a disrespect for women who write. That delightful essayist, the late E. P. Whipple, left behind him several unpublished essays, which have been secured for publication in the North American Review. The first of them, on "Loafing and Laboring," will appear in the July number. It is marked by all the polish and graceful ease which characterize the writings of one of the first of American essayists.

THE first number of Volume II. of the Outing Weekly Tennis Record for the season of 1891 was published on June 13, and it should be read by every devotee of the delightful game. It is the official organ and bulletin of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, and bears the indorsement of Chas. E. Stickney, Secretary of that organization. The Record is tastefully gotten up, and, in addition to all official records up to date, contains portraits of noted players, a department of "Club Gossip," "Current Chat," "The Referee," and editorial paragraphs from the pens of prominent tennis players, while club matters, personals, etc., lend additional interest. The principal editorials refer to the new committee and amended rules of the U. S. N. L. T. A. The "English Letter," an article on "Mixed Doubles," and "Tennis in the South," are special features of a most attractive number.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

JAMES PAYN has written a story entitled "A Modern Dick Whittington" for Tillotson & Son's Newspaper Syndicate.

MRS. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE quietly passed her eightieth birthday in Hartford, Conn., on the 14th inst.

GEORGE EDWARD WOODBERRY, who has shown himself to be one of the best qualified of the younger American writers of the day, goes to Columbia College as Professor of Literature.

THE Société d'Encouragement pour l'Industrie Nationale of Paris has awarded a prize of 2500 francs to H. M. Howe for his work on "The Metallurgy of Steel," published by the Scientific Publishing Company, 27 Park Place, New York.

IN a widely-spread newspaper paragraph it is stated that Jerome K. Jerome is the pseudonym of J. W. Arrowsmith. The statement is incorrect, and probably arose in confusing Mr. Jerome's name with that of Mr. Arrowsmith, of Bristol, England, who published some of Mr. Jerome's books.

DR. HENRY A. TODD, associate in the Roman language at Johns Hopkins University, has accepted a professorship of Roman language in the Leland Stanford University of California. Dr. Todd was graduated from Princeton College in 1876, with the honor oration in belles-lettres and the fellowship in modern languages. Dr. Todd is associate editor of Modern Language Notes, an officer of the Modern Language Association, and a member of various learned societies. His published works and articles have been numerous.

BUSINESS NOTES.

CHICAGO, ILL.—The Burrows Brothers Company deny definitely that they have any intention of starting a bookstore in Chicago.

GLENBROOK, CONN.—Bromfield & Co. have established their head offices at this place. They retain their shipping and storage quarters at 658 Broadway, New York, as before, and Fords, Howard & Hulbert, of 30 Lafayette Place, will act as their trade agents for certain lines of their publications, and will answer personal inquiries; but letters to the firm should be addressed to Glenbrook. This change has been made to meet the convenience of their Mr. E. T. Bromfield, who, as managing director for America of the Bromfield-Ingersoll Co., of Leeds England, finds it necessary to have his offices in the neighborhood of the proposed works of the English company, in Connecticut.

NEW YORK CITY.—The International Book Company (a branch of the U. S. Book Co.) has removed from Lafayette Place to 17 and 19 Waverly Place.

NEW YORK CITY.—William Evarts Benjamin has removed to 751 Broadway, where he has a large and handsome store.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Hubbard Brothers have just published a report of the progress in the adjustment of liabilities existing a year ago, from which it appears that $67,000 has been paid out to meet claims, and that it is hoped there will be no difficulty in paying off the balance as fast as it matures.

RICHMOND, VA.—The old firm of J. W. Randolph & English has been succeeded by J. W. Randolph & Co., J. J. English having sold his entire interest in the firm to N. V. Randolph, who assumes all the liabilities of J. J. English growing out of the partnership. Owing to the infirm health of Mr. J. W. Randolph, who has been in the book business for the past sixty years, and the more important business engagements of Mr. N. V. Randolph, they offer the entire stock of law, theological, historical, Confederate and miscellaneous books at very low prices, in order that the stock may be reduced to a point where the business can be continued by their present employees. Mr. E. J. Weymouth, who has been with the firm for thirty years, assumes charge of the bindery.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The firm of Pierson & Robertson, booksellers and stationers, has been dissolved. The business will be continued by A. M. Robertson under his own name.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE next publication of the Grolier Club is to be a study of Washington Irving, by George William Curtis.

J. G. CUPPLES, Boston, has in press "The Life Romance of an Algebraist," by George Winslow Pierce.

MRS. AMELIA E. BARR'S new story, to be published in Lippincott's, will have for its name the attractive title of "A Rose of a Hundred Leaves."

MACMILLAN & CO. announce a cheaper edition of Finck's work on "Romantic Love and Personal Beauty;" also a revised edition (the third), at a reduced price, of Dr. Martineau's "Types of Ethical Theory."

WITHIN the last two or three years it has come to be recognized that Australia is producing a literature of distinctive worth. As yet Americans have seen comparatively little of Australian fiction, and no doubt especial interest will be taken in the work of the clever Australian writer, Ada Cambridge, whose novel, "The Three Miss Kings," is to be published immediately by D. Appleton & Co., in the Town and Country Library.

DODD, MEAD & CO. will publish immediately, by arrangement with John Murray, of London, and from duplicate plates, new and revised editions of James Fergusson's "History of the Modern Styles of Architecture" and "Eastern and Indian Architecture." Both works will be in two octavo volumes, with several hundred illustrations. They also announce a new edition of Fergusson's "History of Architecture in all Countries;" also, a new illustrated 12mo edition of Dickens' works, in forty-eight volumes.

MITCHELL'S (Bowden & Smith), 830 Broadway, have reprinted an edition of 100 copies of Mr. Henry B. Dawson's "Records of the City of New Amsterdam in New Netherland," vol. 1, which originally appeared in 1867, in an edition equally restricted. These curious economic and police decrees of Peter Stuyvesant, Director-General, ranging from 1647 to 1655, are the earliest records of the corporation. They are given in an English version of New York. The pages have broad margins, and the volume is very prettily bound.

THE CRAIG PRESS, Chicago, have just published a book entitled "Chicago's Dark Places," by a corps of specially appointed writers, whose investigations included poverty and the poor, saloons and their habitués, theatres, concert halls and museums, immoral dives, the social evil, procuresses and abductors, obscene books, pictures and advertisements, etc.; together with observations on the making of criminals, the agencies of reform; how to remedy the evils that exist. It is said to have been arranged and edited by a prominent reform worker.

JAMES POTT & CO. have in press a second selection from Rev. Fred. W. Faber's "Spiritual Conferences," which will bear the title "Simplicity," and announce as in active preparation "Notes on Genesis," by W. E. Bryke; "Notes on Exodus," by F. J. Fulford; "Notes on Joshua," by C. E. Johnson, and "Notes on Judges," by C. L. Feltoe. Very shortly they will also publish "Our Sacred Commission," by F. R. Wynne; and "My Comfort in Sorrow," by Hugh Macmillan, a book full of helpful thoughts on the uses of adversity.

THOSE who have profited by the study of Verschoyle's "History of Ancient Civilization" will be gratified to learn that D. Appleton & Co. are about to publish a volume which may be called a pendant, or supplement to Verschoyle's work. This is "A History of Modern Civilization," a handbook based on Gustav Ducoudray's history. In this book "the author and adapter," according to a prominent London critic, "have reached one of the rarest results in literary work, a summary at once comprehensive and readable;" while the critical Saturday Review says that the book "contains a vast quantity of information on many subjects, generally arranged with much skill."

GINN & CO. will publish this summer "Whitney and Lockwood's English Grammar," being Whitney's "Essentials of English Grammar," revised for younger pupils by Mrs. Sara E. H. Lockwood, author of "Lessons in English," under the direction of Dr. Whitney. The purpose of this edition is to furnish a text-book in English grammar for pupils in the upper grades of the grammar school. The editor's aim has been to simplify the original work, without impairing the distinctive features which have made it an acceptable text-book for older pupils in high and preparatory schools. The special features of the revision are topical arrangement, abundant exercises, and more elementary treatment throughout. Whitney's "Essentials," which has been steadily increasing in sale, will continue to be published.

THE summer traveller will find the new issues of Gustav Kobbé's guide-books to the neighborhood of New York City handy and reliable. His handbook to the "New Jersey Coast and Pines" is fully illustrated and contains useful road maps of especial service to pedestrians and bicyclists. It has a large amount of interesting reading-matter, and embodies much useful information as to railways, hotels and rates, which the reader may put to good account. The 1891 editions of Gustav Kobbé's road maps are also just ready and form complete travellers' guides to Long Island, Central and Northern New Jersey, the Jersey coast to Tom's River, Westchester County, N. Y., with part of Fairfield County, Conn. These are published in card covers in pocket form. The Kobbé Company also publishes a handsome cloth-bound map of the country around New York City.

"CHAMBERS'S ENCYCLOPÆDIA," the seventh volume of which has just been published by the J. B. Lippincott Company, fully merits the high appreciation accorded the preceding volumes of the new edition. An unusual number of subjects of interest to Americans are incorporated in the work, which extends from Maltebrun to Pearson. Geographically there are exhaustive papers on, and excellent maps of, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Orleans, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio and Oregon. No less full and excellent are the articles on the Mormons and Negroes. In the work of revision there is proof on every page of the painstaking care of the editors. In the excellent sketch and estimate of the late Cardinal Newman, written by Mr. Hutton, one sees how thorough and timely the work has been made.

THE D. LOTHROP COMPANY announce many beautiful holiday books for the coming season. They have now in press a four-volume edition of the "Arabian Nights," edited by Dr. W. L. Griffis, one of the most accomplished Oriental scholars in the country, which will contain forty full-page illustrations and be printed and bound luxuriantly. Another charming gift-book will be Wedworth Wadsworth's "Leaves from an Artist's Field-Book," an oblong quarto full of landscape drawings illustrative of poems on nature. Mr. Wadsworth's reputation is a guarantee of the poetic beauty of these sketches, which have been finely reproduced by Andrew. A dainty book for the little people will be "Child Classics," which has some of the choicest short poems of Longfellow, Bryant, Whittier, Lowell, etc., with full-page illustrations from the paintings of Meyer Von Bremen, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Correggio and other famous artists. Another book which will appeal to numerous buyers will be "National Flowers," which tells the story of England's rose, Scotland's thistle, the lotus of Egypt, the lily of France and other representative flowers, with many illustrations. "The Christmas Book" is a collection of stirring poems, delightful stories and bits of historical incident by that acknowledged favorite with young people, Hezekiah Butterworth. "Verses" is the simple title of a volume covering some of Celia Thaxter's poems, illustrated by such artists as W. L. Taylor, Hy. Sandham, E. L. Garrett, etc. A book that will captivate the young folks is "School and Playground," a series of stories by Howard Pyle, Kate Upson Clark, Emilie Poulsson and other favorite authors. Two bird books of entirely different character are announced, the one being a volume of selected poems with 50 full-page illustrations, called "With the Birds," and the other "Birddom," a series of papers upon the characters and habits of birds, by a close student and interesting narrator of their ways. "Wordsworth for the Young" is a careful compilation, which even children can enjoy, of the simpler poems and bits of poems appropriate to children's study in the writings of the great poet of nature. A choice edition of "Black Beauty," which has proved everywhere so popular, is issued by this house, with twelve full-page illustrations. A popular history of the United States is being written by that most successful writer of young people's historical stories, Elbridge S. Brooks. A notable book, which will have an interest for both young and old, is "Prime Movers of the Revolution, Known to the Author," by Rev. A. B. Muzzey, who is next to the oldest living graduate of Harvard College, though his book betrays no sign of weakness or old age. The author of "Scythe and Sword" has written a stirring romance in song, full of rhythmic flow and melody, entitled "The Heart of the Golden Roan." A volume of the last poems of Rev. Horatio N. Powers, with introduction by Oscar Fay Adams, is also in preparation, to be called "Lyrics of the Hudson." "Wisdom of the Wise" is a very careful compilation of some of the choicest selections of prose and poetry, arranged by distinctive attributes, for the edification and improvement of young readers. There are still other books in preparation the titles of which are not yet made public.

REV. W. G. LAWES, of Port Moresby, New Guinea, has prepared a translation of the New Testament into the New Guinea language. He has taken it to London to be printed.

A VOLUME of "Personal Reminiscences of Laurence Oliphant," by Louis Leisching, whose name occurs several times in Mrs. Oliphant's memoir, will be issued in London soon.

A FEW copies of Miss Hawker's "Mademoiselle Ixe" were recently posted to various addresses in Russia. They are now, says an exchange, going back to England with the word "Défendu" (prohibited) stamped on the covers.

FISHER UNWIN, London, will publish shortly in the Pseudonym Library a new volume by the author of "Mademoiselle Ixe." It is to be called "The Hôtel d'Angleterre," and will contain three or four stories besides the one which gives it its name.

G. HEDELER, Leipzig, has just issued the third and concluding part of his important collection of "Gesetze über das Urheberrecht im In- und Ausland, nebst internationalen Litteratur-Verträgen und den Bestimmungen über das Verlagsrecht." Mr. Hedeler has rendered a great service to all interested in literature and spared no pains in making his work as complete and up to date as possible.

THE JESUIT COLLEGE PRESS, at Beyrout, has recently issued the second volume of the great "Syriac-Arabic Dictionary," by the Abbé Cardahi. The comprehensive grammar, in two volumes, by Vernier, is to be issued next January. Of Father Cheikho's edition of the Christian poets of Arabia, four fasciculi (622 pages) have appeared; two more fasciculi, completing the work, are in the press.

Mrs. Burnett's Earlier Stories.

Two Series, each 12mo, cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

In the First Series are included three of Mrs. Burnett's Earlier Stories, "Lindsay's Luck," "Miss Crespigny," and "Theo." In the Second Series are "Kathleen" and "Pretty Polly Pemberton.", "Each of these narratives has a distinct spirit, and is told not only with true art, but with deep pathos." —Boston Post.

On Newfound River.

A Story. By Thomas Nelson Page. 12mo, $1.00.

"A distinctly strong piece of fiction. We have had evidence elsewhere of Mr. Page's skill in delineating Virginia life, but like all works of genius, this novel has in it many elements of surprise. It is delightfully fresh and vigorous; its movement is quick, natural and irresistible."—Brooklyn Times.

JUST READY:

The Co-operative Index to Periodicals for 1890.

This work is a key to the contents of nearly one hundred representative magazines and periodicals published in the English language in the United States and Great Britain. It has been prepared by W: I. Fletcher, of Amherst College (the editor of Poole's Index), who has had the co-operation of nearly forty members of the American Library Association.

To the literary worker its value can hardly be overestimated ; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field ; to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time ; and to the bookseller it is of the greatest practical value, as it enables him to look up at once any inquiries for magazine articles, no matter how the question is asked.

Now issued as an annual, the index to the whole year being in one alphabet, by title of article or subject, supplemented by an author index, the work has reached its most complete stage of development.

The price has been fixed at $2.50 in half morocco, $2.00 in paper.

This House is Characterized by its Promptness, Carefulness, and Low Price.

DESIRING to RETIRE FROM BUSINESS, owing to the feeble health of Mr. J. W. RANDOLPH, who has been in the book business for 60 years, we offer the entire stock of books, new and old, at a reduced price (or will sell the business as a whole). It is one of the most valuable stock of books south of Philadelphia, consisting of Law, Theological, Medical, Historical, Virginia Historical publications and miscellaneous books. Many rare and valuable works now entirely out of print. It will pay the antiquary to examine the stock.

To one who desires to continue the business, this is an opportunity not often presented.

NOTES IN SEASON.

BRENTANO'S have just ready a contribution to humorous literature entitled "The Bachelors' Club." The conditions of membership in this organization were four: No member must follow a profession involving celibacy; no member must have ever had a disappointment in love; no member must be under thirty; no duly elected member must use a latch-key. Only twelve members could be found to pass the test of this high standard. How one by one they fell from their high estate of bachelorhood, verifying the author's motto "marriendum est omnibus," the details of their love histories, the descriptions of the women who conquered them and the author's pithy remarks full of humor, kindly satire and knowledge of human nature, form the matter of a book of much originality.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just issued "Recollections and Impressions, 1822–1890," by Octavius Brooks Frothingham, a kind of autobiography full of interesting remarks on the many distinguished people who have influenced American thought during the last fifty years; "Politics and Property; or, Phronocracy," a treatise on a compromise between democracy and plutocracy, by Slack Worthington; and "Theodoric the Goth," by Thomas Hodgkin, the fourth volume in the Heroes of the Nations series.

HARPER & BROS. will publish at once "Farming," by R. K. Munkittrick, with illustrations by A. B. Frost, printed in tint, an amusing story of a "city fellow's" experiments in idyllic farming, which is filled with suggestive thoughts to which he gives piquant and happy expression. As nearly ready are announced "The Touch of an Angel," a volume of stories by Thomas A. Janvier; "As We Were Saying," by Charles Dudley Warner, illustrated by H. W. McVickar, C. D. Gibson and others; "A King of Tyre," a tale of the times of Ezra and Nehemiah," by James M. Ludlow; and "Dally," a novel by Maria Louise Pool, describing a mischief-loving Southern girl set in the midst of Yankee scenes and associations on the hard and arid soil of a New England sea-coast town.

CASSELL PUBLISHING CO. have ready "The Letters of Marie Bashkirtseff," which, by special arrangement with Madame Bashkirtseff, the mother of the writer, and the French publishers, are published in this country before their appearance in France. André Theuriet, the editor of the "Journal of Marie Bashkirtseff," has edited these letters also. The book is uniform in typography and binding with the "Journal," and contains new portraits of Marie, with reproductions from her sketches, besides other illustrations. The new volumes in the Sunshine Series are "Old Raclot's Million," translated from the French of Emile Richebourg by Mrs. Benjamin Lewis; "An Artist," translated from the French of Mme. Jeanne Mairet by Anna Dyer; and "A Debt of Hatred," by Georges Ohnet, translated by E. P. Robins. In Cassell's Blue Library the new book is "The Price of a Coronet," adapted from the French of Pierre Sale by Mrs. Benjamin Lewis.

ENGLISH anxiety about American copyright shows itself, writes G. W. S. to the N. Y. Tribune, June 20, "in one way or another daily—now by articles or letters in the papers, now by private entreaties, again by questions in the House of Commons. Mr. Bryce asked on Monday whether the English Foreign Office had answered the American circular. The Under Foreign Secretary said no, but that the government were advised that the English Copyright law was so favorable to aliens that 'we may expect to satisfy the conditions of the American law.' That appears to mean that no bill will be brought in to amend this favorable English law, heretofore supposed to be ambiguous on the question of residence."

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

Arnold, Birch, (pseud.) A new aristocracy. Detroit, Mich., Bartlett Pub. Co., 1891. c. 316 p. por. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The rector of a small Western parish dies, leaving a daughter of twenty-four, one of sixteen, and a son somewhat younger totally destitute. By the sale of his books they get $400, with which they hire a small place and begin kitchen gardening. The second daughter afterwards becomes cook in a rich family for awhile. The older daughter and son found a society of Universal Brotherhood, and become lecturers in the interest of America's "New aristocracy of heart and brain."

The Hon. Obed Larkin, a self-made millionaire, has founded and endowed the University of Tarryville, a small town in Central New York, and is the big man of the place. His two nephews, both lawyers, are the heroes of a story describing conditions which are profoundly and typically American. "I mean to be true to myself and true to my convictions," is Alexander Larkin's motto. "I mean to succeed," that of his brother Horace. The heroines are also types of American womanhood, and clearly show the gaps and weaknesses in the educational systems for American girls of the period.

Frothingham, Octavius Brooks. Recollections and impressions, 1822–1890. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. c. 3+305 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The book opens with an interesting account of Mr. Frothingham's father and mother, his own youth and entrance into the Divinity School at Cambridge, his ordination as an old-fashioned Unitarian minister, and his marriage. His first service was rendered in Salem, Mass., next in Jersey City, then in New York. Reminiscences of these places and their distinguished ministers of various creeds follow. Chapters are given also on the war, the Free Religious Association of New York (over which he presided for many years), the progress of religious thought in America, the clerical profession, his teachers, companions, friends, the present situation and the religious future of America. The last chapter—"Confessions"—gives some insight into the writer's own religious experience.

Green, Evelyn Everett. Mrs. Romaine's household. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, 1891. 4–310 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

After her mother's death has left her utterly alone in the world, Clare Chesterton receives an unexpected letter from Mrs. Romaine, the wife of a cousin she has never met, offering her a home. Clare enters the Romaine household as a visitor, but becomes the children's governess, and finally the friend and adviser of each member of the interesting family and the strongest influence in the house. The every-day events of an English home are varied by some love-making and the details of a tragedy.

Leighton. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1891.] 6-384 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

In the little town of Leighton, in the early part of the present century, occur the events of this graceful, wholesome story. A quaint little Quaker maiden is one of the heroines, and the story relates largely to love, one case of "true love" being interrupted by the return of a wicked father who for many years has been thought dead.

Hamilton, E: J:, D.D. The modalist; or, the laws of rational conviction: a text-book in formal or general logic. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1891. c. 6+331 p. O. cl., $1.40.

"This text-book was written under the conviction that the most useful instruction is that which is enforced by the most thorough explanations. It is an attempt to connect the formulas of logic with principles the ultimate character of which will become evident to the faithful student. Besides, the author had an ambition to add something to the science by giving permanent form to views which have been held and taught for years."—Preface.

Harcourt, L. F. Vernon. Achievements in engineering during the last half century. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1891. 8°, cl., $1.75.

Hartshorne, H:, M.D. A cyclopedia of family medicine, surgery, nursing and hygiene for daily use in the preservation of health and care of the sick and injured. Phil., J: C. Winston & Co., 1891. 943 p. il. and pl. 8°, cl., $4; full mor., $5.

Hodgkin, T: Theodoric the Goth: the barbarian champion of civilization. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. c. 15+442 p. il. and maps, D. (Heroes of the nations.) cl., $1.50.

One of the most striking figures in the history of the early Middle Ages—Theodoric the Ostrogoth—is the hero of this new volume of the "Heroes of the nations." Mr. Hodgkin, who portrays his life and character, is the author of "Italy and her invaders," and has been and is a profound student of Roman history. The chapters relate to Theodoric's ancestors and boyhood, Italy under Odovacar, The conquest of Italy, Roman officials—Cassiodorus, The Arian League, Anastasius, Rome and Ravenna, Boëthius, Belisarius, etc.

Taxidermy and zoölogical collecting: a complete handbook for the amateur taxidermist, collector, osteologist, museum-builder, sportsman and traveller; with chapters on collecting and preserving insects by W. J. Holland; il. by C: Bradford Hudson and others. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1891. c. 16+362 p. O. cl., net, $2.50.

Mr. Hornaday, the author of "Two years in the jungle," and for eight years chief taxidermist of the U. S. National Museum, has sought in these pages to give in clear language the detailed information which he has found deplorably lacking in all manuals on this subject which he has ever consulted.

Phillips, Wendell. Speeches, lectures and letters; 2d series. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891. c. 9+476 p. por. D. cl., $2.50.

This volume illustrates the wide range of time and topic covered by Mr. Phillips' interest and his eloquence. It begins with the earliest of his speeches, delivered nine months before the famous Lovejoy address, which stands first in the first volume of the series, and closes with his last public utterance, his tribute to the memory of Harriet Martineau. Besides his recognized leadership in the anti-slavery movement, he stands forth as an early champion of other reforms—Woman's suffrage, the Labor agitation, Temperance and Penal legislation, are subjects included in the table of contents. The lighter play of his genius is seen in his "Letter from Naples" and his "Address to the Boston school-children." His literary lectures are given large prominence, and the book closes with six personal tributes from his lips.

Sanborn, Mary Farley. Sweet and twenty. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1891. c. 2-310 p. D. (Good company ser., no. 10.) pap., 50 c.

An old-time love-story full of kisses, quarrels, jealousies, misunderstandings and reconciliations. The scene is a pretty New England spot in the summer season. The heroines are the village pastor's innocent and pretty daughters. The heroes are the rich landed proprietor, who has just come into his inheritance, and his semi-invalid friend.

Seiffert, Rudolf. Kochin-arbeiten (tuberculinum Kochii) in Alexianer-hospital, Chicago. 1: Marz und April, 1891, berichte und original-abhandlungen. Chic., Ill., Koelling & Klappenbach, [1891.] c. 34 p. O. pap., 50 c.

Describes twenty-five cases of tuberculosis treated by injections of the Koch lymph in the Alexianer Hospital of Chicago. The symptoms of the different cases and the details of the action of the lymph were carefully studied and are here scientifically told for the benefit of physicians.

Smith, W:, ed., [and others.] A dictionary of Greek and Roman antiquities. 3d ed., rev. and enl. In 2 v. V. 2. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1891. 1072 p. il. 8°, cl., net, $7; hf. cf., net, $9.

Stephenson, Andrew. Public lands and agrarian laws of the Roman Republic. Balt., Md., The Johns Hopkins Press, 1891. c. 2-101 p. O. (Johns Hopkins univ. studies, 9th ser., nos. 7, 8.) pap., 75 c.

The writer's object has been to trace the history of the domain lands of Rome from the earliest times to the establishment of the empire. The plan of the work has been to sketch the origin and growth of the idea of private property in land, the expansion of the ager publicus by the conquest of neighboring territories, and its absorption by means of sale, by gift to the people, and by the establishment of colonies, until wholly merged in private property. This necessarily involves a history of the agrarian laws, as land distributions were made and colonies established only in accordance with laws previously enacted.

Vincent, J: M. State and federal government in Switzerland. Balt., Md., Johns Hopkins Press, 1891. c. 6+247 p. O. (Studies in historical and political science, extra v. 9.) cl., $1.50.

An outline of the existing conditions of government in Switzerland in its federal, state and local aspects. The writer approaches his subject from a republican standpoint, and treats it with appreciation and impartiality.

Waffle, A. E. The interpreter with his Bible. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1891.] c. 106 p. D. cl., 60 c.

The purpose of this manual is to help students of the Bible to ascertain its true meaning. It makes no special claim to learning or originality. Most of the suggestions and rules given may be found in the works on hermeneutics.

Warner, Susan, ["Eliz. Wetherell," pseud.] Pine needles. [New issue.] N. Y., Hurst & Co., [1891.] c. '77, 91. 3-346 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

First published by Robert Carter & Bros., 1877.

Worthington, Slack. Politics and property, or phronocracy: a compromise between democracy and plutocracy. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891. c. 12+334 p. D. cl., $1.50.

It is claimed in this volume that poverty can never be eradicated from society any more effectually than disease can be absolutely prevented in the human body; but since the latter can be relieved by the proper application of scientific remedies, so likewise can the former be ameliorated by the timely enactment of intellectual laws. The object of this work is to urge strenuous opposition to both plutocracy on the one hand and socialistic tendencies of all kinds on the other, and advocate a reasonable middle or conservative position between the two, which for convenience is termed "phronocracy," which signifies the rule of reason, prudence and understanding.

Zangwill, I. The Bachelors' Club; il. by G: Hutchinson. N. Y., Brentano's, 1891. 5+338 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The rules of the Bachelors' Club were so strict that the membership never exceeded a full dozen. Their club-room was decorated with mottoes calculated to keep continually before them the depths of misery that await all who commit matrimony. In spite of all, one by one the twelve bachelors take unto themselves wives, and the humorous accounts of how and why each one fell from the high pedestal of bachelorhood into the slough of matrimony fill the pages of this volume of studies in human nature.

PERSONAL NOTES.

MR. JOHN E. POTTER, JR., junior member of the firm of John E. Potter & Co., Philadelphia, was married on Wednesday, June 3, to Miss Elizabeth Herndon, of Tyler, Texas. Mr. Potter is the son of the head of the firm of John E. Potter & Co., and his young bride is the daughter of Col. W. S. Herndon, of Tyler, Texas, where the marriage was celebrated.

MR. JOHN H. BLACK, of McLoughlin Bros., will sail for Europe on his usual summer trip on the steamer Normannia, of the Hamburg Line, on July 2.

MR. SIMON BRENTANO, of Brentano's, sailed for Europe on the 20th, by the steamer La Bourgogne. He will remain in Europe some time on business connected with the Paris and London branches of his house.

MR. FRANK ALLEN, the Manager of Brentano's Publishing Department has recently returned to New York from England, after an absence of considerably over six months, during which, he has arranged for the publication in America, by Brentano's, of the works of several well-known authors.

MESSRS. ESTES and Lauriat both sailed for Europe last week.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

RUDYARD KIPLING is in this country for visit. He is travelling incognito, registering under the name of "J. Macdonald."

THE DISCOUNT QUESTION IN ENGLAND.

ENGLISH booksellers for the past six months and more have been giving serious attention to the discount question, and the outlook now seems to be that something will be done about it. Judging from the mass of correspondence that has appeared in the London Publishers' Circular from time to time, the situation on the other side does not seem very much unlike that among us; so that whatever action may be taken by the English book trade in this direction must necessarily be of the greatest interest to us also.

The chief difficulty in dealing with the matter seems to have been the lack of unanimity among the booksellers themselves. The booksellers agree on one point—that they have a grievance; but they are far from agreed as to the steps that should be taken to remedy the evil. The newly-formed News Agents' and Booksellers' Union, anxious to obtain a direct expression of opinion from retail booksellers throughout England, drew up the following questions, which they invited their correspondents to answer: (1) Do you believe in the practice of selling books, etc., at a discount? (2) Would you be willing, if others did, to cease to allow such discounts? (3) Do you think that the reading public would buy fewer books if this system were abolished?

To the first question an overwhelming majority replied in the negative. Only a few would be disposed to continue allowing discount to a limited extent—to Sunday-schools, for instance, and other institutions entitled to a slight advantage over other buyers. On the second point, also, there seemed to be unanimity. In nearly every instance those who replied were willing to join in some plan calculated to put a stop to the present system. On the third point there was, as might be expected, a greater variety of opinion. The only defect in this interesting and important expression of opinion is, as the Publishers' Circular pertinently points out, "that it does not represent the mind of the trade as a whole. Not more than twenty-five per cent. of booksellers throughout the whole country voted, so that we are left in doubt as to the sentiments of the remaining seventy-five per cent."

At the trade dinner recently held in London, when English publishers and booksellers met in a social way to discuss business affairs, one of the speakers, Mr. Marston, stated that "forty years ago a society, numbering amongst its members some of the leading men in the trade, had been formed for the protection of the bookselling interests, but that it failed in its object because the booksellers were not unanimous in supporting it." That want of unanimity is still the chief obstacle to successful action in England, and in America also. Reform lies with booksellers themselves. They, better than any one else, know or ought to know what their needs are, and should therefore be best fitted to suggest remedies. Let them come together, as has been suggested by Mr. Stott, formulate their grievances, and propose practical remedial measures. We share our contemporary's opinion that publishers would be ready to entertain any rational and practical scheme, and co-operate with the trade generally. It is all very well to call on publishers to regulate prices. Prices can be much more easily and successfully regulated when it is known precisely what booksellers want, and when they declare, with something like unanimity, that they will support a given plan. Publishers, too, we think, will be found quite ready to study the interests of the booksellers, so soon as the booksellers make it manifest precisely what those interests are.

GEORG, C., and OST, L. Schlagwort-Katalog: verzeichniss der bücher u. landkarten in sachlicher anordnung, 1883-87. Hanover, Fr. Cruse, 1888. 32.50 marks.

The most serviceable of German bibliographies. A list of all the books and maps of 1883-87 entered under their subjects, or more strictly their catchwords, in alphabetic order, with, on the whole, a satisfactory system of cross-references. It has been carried forward in two annual supplements, called "Praktische bücherkunde," published in weekly parts, but now discontinued.

—— —— 1886–1890, bearb. v. Haupt u. Weise. [Now issuing.]

Continued by HINRICHS' three-and six-monthly catalogues, and the monthly lists in the Börsenblatt. Since January, 1891, the Börsenblatt monthly lists have been published separately in pamphlet form.

KAYSER, C. G. Vollständiges Bücher-Lexikon, enthaltend die von 1750 bis ende 1886 in Deutschland und angrenzenden ländern gedruckten bücher; mit sachregister zu 1750–1832. Leipzig, T. O. Weigel, 1834–87. 25 v., 4°, net. 243 marks.

T. O. Weigel has started a new series, called "Systematisches verzeichniss der hauptwerke der deutschen literatur 1820–82," which will in a measure serve as a subject-index to the author-catalogues of Kayser and Heinsius. Of this two volumes have been published, one by Mollat, covering the branches of political and juridical science, the other, by Fromm, history and geography.—K. A. Linderfelt.

OTHMER, G. Vademecum des Sortimenters: zusammenstellung der wissenswürdigsten erscheinungen von anbeginn der druckkunst bis 1878. 3. aufl., nebst nachtrag, 1878–1884, bearb. v. C. Georg u. L. Ost. Hanover, Fr. Cruse, 1885. 2 v., 16°, 18 marks.

An excellent guide to German classical literature and belles-lettres.

REHER, Aug. Titel-Verzeichniss der Neuen Erzählenden und Volkstümlich-Wissenschaftlichen Werke, nach Schlagwörtern geordnet. Altona. A. C. Reher, 1887. 8°, 6 marks.

A unique work of great practical value is a list of all German novels, including translations, and the principal works in history, biography and geography, in the alphabetic order of their titles. This work has been very skilfully done.—K. A. Linderfelt.

WEISSBACH, H. Hand-Katalog des Sortimenters: ein nach schlagworten geordnetes verzeichniss der hauptsächlichsten erscheinungen der letzten 25 jahre. Weimar, H. Weissbach, 1889. 8°, 10 marks.

LORENZ, O. Catalogue général de la librairie française (par ordre alphabétique des noms d'auteurs, et table classée par ordre alphabétique des matières), 1840–1885. Paris, O. Lorenz, 1867–88. 11 v., 8°, pap., 330 fr.; hf. mor., 374 fr.

QUERARD's various bibliographies, "La France littéraire" and "La littérature française contemporaine" (Paris, Firmin Didot Frères, 16 v., 216 fr.), precede Lorenz and cover the period from 1700–1849.

THE CERCLE DE LA LIBRAIRIE publishes as a supplement to the Bibliographie de la France an annual list of books published in France. It contains short titles and subject references.

K. NILSSON ET CIE., 8 Rue d'Alger, Paris, continues the "Catalogue mensuel de la librairie française," established by O. Lorenz in 1876. With yearly index, 4 fr.

C. REINWALD, 15 Rue des St. Pères, Paris, also publishes a useful monthly catalogue of French publications. 3 fr.

TRADE JOURNALS.

THE AMERICAN BOOKSELLER, published in the interests of booksellers, stationers and newsdealers. N. Y., Astor Place. Fortnightly. 4°, $2 per year.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE DE LA FRANCE: journal général de l'imprimerie et de la librairie. Paris, 27 Rue Grégoire-de Tours. Weekly. 18 fr. per year.

With the following supplements which may also be had separately: Table alphabétique de la bibliographie. 5 fr. per year; Table systématique de la bibliographie, 2.50 fr. per year. These latter, published at the end of the year, form an annual catalogue of the books published in France.

THE BOOKSELLER: a newspaper of British and Foreign Literature [with which is incorporated Bent's Literary Advertiser]. Lond., J. Whittaker & Sons. Monthly. 5 s. per annum.

The Bookseller's specialty is a department of brief book notices which no other English book trade journal gives so compactly. Its book list is arranged under subjects.

BÖRSENBLATT für den deutschen buchhandel und die mit ihm verwandten geschäftszweige. Leipzig, Geschäftsstelle des Börsenverein der deutschen Buchhändler. Daily. 20 marks per year.

Established in 1834. This is the only daily paper devoted exclusively to books published in any language.

DEUTSCHE BUCHHÄNDLER-AKADEMIE: organ für die gesammt-interessen des buchhandels und der mit ihm verwandten gewerbe. Weimar, H. Weissbach. Monthly. 8 marks per year.

Contains much practical information, though considerable space is given to the history of the book trade.

GEYER'S STATIONER: devoted to the interests of the stationery, fancy goods and notion trades, paper manufacturers and dealers in paper-makers' supplies. N. Y., 63 Duane Street. Fortnightly. $2 per year.

NEWSMAN: a journal for publishers, booksellers and newsdealers. N. Y., 1285 Broadway. Monthly. $1 per year.

Useful to those who deal in periodical literature.

THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR and general record of British and foreign literature: containing a complete alphabetical list of all new works published in Great Britain, and every work of interest published abroad. Lond., Sampson Low, Marston & Co. Weekly. 4°, $2.75 per year.

LITERARY JOURNALS.

THE ATHENÆUM: journal of English and foreign literature, science, the fine arts, music and the drama. Lond. Weekly. 4°, 3*d*. per week.

DIAL: journal of current literature. Chicago, Ill., A. C. McClurg & Co. Monthly. $1.50 per year.

Gives excellent original reviews, written by authorities on the subjects treated by the books; also comprehensive briefs on new books.

CENTRALBLATT für Bibliothekswesen, hrsg. unter ständiger mitwirkung zahlreicher fachgenossen des in- und auslandes, von Dr. O. Hartwig. Leipzig, O. Harrassowitz. Monthly.

Of chief interest to antiquarians, scholars and librarians. Its departments contain excellent notices of new bibliographical works, information as to library economy, etc.

THE CRITIC [with which is incorporated Good Literature]. N. Y., The Critic Co. Weekly. $3 per year.

Fairly representative. It gives extended notices to the important books, and makes brief mention of minor publications. Has also a department of Shakespeariana, edited by Dr. W. J. Rolfe.

CURRENT LITERATURE: a magazine of record and review. N. Y., Current Literature Pub. Co. Monthly. 8°, $3 per year.

An eclectic magazine, skimming, rather than dipping into, current thought and the literature of the day. It serves the purposes of a scrap-book, in which is permanently preserved the best of what appears in the daily press.

LIBRARY JOURNAL: official organ of the American Library Association; chiefly devoted to library economy and bibliography. N. Y., 330 Pearl Street. Monthly. $5 per year.

Gives much practical information that may benefit booksellers indirectly. Contains also, valuable bibliographical lists, lists of anonyms and pseudonyms, catalogues, indexes and lists of changed titles.

THE LITERARY NEWS: an eclectic review of current literature. N. Y., Office of "The Publishers' Weekly." Monthly. $1 per year.

A comprehensive survey of all the books of the month. The opinions of the best authorities are quoted on the important books, and from such as are illustrated a characteristic picture is given. A full priced and annotated list of the books of the month, gossip about authors and books, and advance notes of forthcoming publications are given in each issue.

LITERARY WORLD. Bost., 1 Somerset Street. Fortnightly. $2 per year.

An authori y on literary matters, to which it is exclusively devoted.

THE NATION: a journal devoted to politics, literature, science and art. N. Y., 208 Broadway. Weekly. $3 yer year.

Gives decidedly the best and most reliable reviews of any journal in this country. Unfortunately it covers only a select list of books, and is generally late in publishing reviews.

TRÜBNER'S RECORD: a journal devoted to the literature of the East, with notes and lists of current American, European and Colonial publications. Lond., Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co. Monthly. 2 s.

BOOKSELLER'S REFERENCE LIBRARY.

Biographical.

ADAMS, O. F. Brief handbook of American Authors. 2d ed. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1885. 12°, 75 c.

—— Same, English Authors. 2d ed., 1885. 75 c.

ADAMS, W. D. Dictionary of English Literature; being a comprehensive guide to English authors and their works. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1880. $1.50.

ALLIBONE, S. Austin. A Critical Dictionary of English Literature, and British and American Authors, living and deceased, from the earliest accounts to the middle of the 19th century, containing 30,000 biographies and literary notices with 40 indexes of subjects. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1863–71. 3 v. 8°, $22.50.

A laborious and valuable "Author" catalogue, notwithstanding its errors and omissions, with lists of published works, accompanied by brief biographical and critical notes; extracts from standard authors, etc. It is useful biographically as well as bibliographically, but as there was an interruption in the printing, the user must bear in mind that up to the letter O the record is not later than 1858, while after that it is in some parts as late as 1870. The author frequently gives under another writer, whom he may be treating of, sometimes with appositeness and sometimes not, addenda to articles which had already passed into print.

ALLIBONE, S. Austin. Supplement to Allibone's Critical Dictionary of English Literature and British and American Authors. Containing over thirty-seven thousand articles (authors), and enumerating over ninety-three thousand titles. By John Foster Kirk. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1891. 2 v., 8°. In press.

This supplement will bring the subject down to about 1888.

APPLETON'S Cyclopædia of American Biography, ed. by J. G. Wilson and Prof. J: Fiske. N. Y., Appleton & Co. 6 v. ea., $5.

By far the most comprehensive and authoritative dictionary of the men and women of note who have lived in America, whether north or south of the Isthmus.

LADY BURTON AND THE MANUSCRIPTS.

From the New York Herald.

LONDON, June 19.—The widow of Capt. Burton writes that she intends as far as possible to publish all of her late husband's manuscripts, in accordance with his desires with the exception of his "magnum opus," upon which he worked until the day of his death—a translation from the Arabic of the "Scented Garden." * Burton, when dying, told his wife that this work would realize an annuity for her, and he would never write more on the subject, but would devote himself to his autobiography; that it was a baby tale compared with his "Arabian Nights," and was likely to make a row in England.

After his death she read the work and £6000 was offered for it. After days of self-torture trying to decide how to act in the difficult situation she burned the manuscript sorrowfully but reverently. She adds: "Not for six millions would I have risked its publication. If any judge me for this act unworthy of their friendship, I must bear it in silence. I shall retire from the world, and if I live I shall write the biography of my husband. It will be a big work and will occupy two or three years."

Incidentally she mentions her husband's desire that she should never read the "Arabian Nights," but she undertook the financial management of the publication, which realized £16,000, of which £10,000 was profit, instead of the £500 he wanted to sell it for.

* An English translation of his work was published in India, several years ago, under the title of "The Perfumed Garden."

DR. GROSART'S PRIVATELY PRINTED EDITIONS.

MR. A. WEBER writes as follows to The Athenæum, June 6, on a subject concerning which some American subscribers have long been agitated:

The above named publications finding their way at reduced prices into second-hand catalogues, I am reminded of some experience anent them which may be of use to others.

It is some thirteen years since I received a prospectus of the new editions wherewith Dr. Grosart was about to bless such as delight in books printed for private circulation only. "Spenser," according to the original and the Huth Library prospectuses, was to be issued in eight volumes, "Daniel" in four volumes, at the rate of two and one volumes per annum. It was confidently hoped the said number of volumes would not be exceeded. No sooner, however, had a few volumes of "Spenser" appeared than subscribers were informed, quite casually in my case, that "Spenser" (without increase of matter) would swell from eight volumes into ten, and I have since then been informed that "Daniel" is to expand to five volumes. What other subscribers think of this I do not know, but I think the fact deserves chronicling for the benefit of the unwary. Yet all this might be borne resignedly if only one could get the sets completed of which not a volume has been issued for years, although in his note to the 1883 prospectus of a new venture—The Puck Library—Dr. Grosart said that "the new Spenser being well advanced and to be completed early in 1884, Dr. Grosart feels that he can now respond to numerous requests for such a new series;" while in his undated prospectus of the issue of Choice Books of Elizabethan and Jacobean Poets he again writes that "also Spenser (vol. x., Glossarial Index, etc.) and Samuel Daniel will be completed within 1885 and 1886." In 1891 they remain incomplete still, and yet Dr. Grosart has found time to issue other books and to edit some Irish papers for the Duke of Devonshire, while he ignores the claims of older subscribers, concerning which the reverend editor seems to have strangely rudimentary notions. For, after dedicating his monumental edition of Spenser, as he calls it, to Lord Tennyson in a sonnet of doubtful beauty, Dr. Grosart seems to think he has done his duty both to himself and to his subscribers. When asked nearly three years ago whether "Spenser" and "Daniel" were to become "monuments" or remain ruins, he informed me that in case of death some one else would complete his work. Why cannot that "some one else" do it while the reverend editor is still among the living?

OBITUARY NOTES.

HENRY C. ROVER, for more than twenty years confidential clerk, cashier and accountant for C. T. Dillingham, was found dead at his residence, 257 W. 128th Street, New York, on the morning of the 22d inst. About June 10 Mr. Rover told his wife to prepare at once to go with him to visit friends in New Canaan, Conn., as he felt that he must have rest. Mrs. Rover left home on June 13, her husband promising that he would follow within a day or two. On the 17th, having heard nothing from Mr. Rover, she returned to New York to ascertain the cause. She called at Dillingham's and learned that her husband had obtained a vacation beginning the first of the week, and had not been seen since. Diligent inquiry failed to discover Mr. Rover's whereabouts, and Mrs. Rover appealed to the police and then returned to her friends in New Canaan. She returned again on the afternoon of the 22d and found the house locked and apparently empty. Neighbors told her they had seen her husband in the neighborhood the previous evening about 8 o'clock. The family occupied the third flat. There was a strong odor of gas in the apartments, which was traced to a little hall bedroom adjoining the parlor. Mr. Rover lay in the room dead, with the gas turned on full. Strong as the evidence points to suicide, it is rejected by all who knew Mr. Rover. He was of a happy and uniformly cheerful disposition; his home relations were entirely happy and congenial, and his business relations extremely so. He had the entire confidence of the house with which he was connected for nearly a lifetime, and was liked and respected by all who came in contact with him, for his genial manner, courtesy and unfailing fairness. He was a German by descent, and a man of fine and striking appearance.

CALMANN LEVY, the well-known French publisher, died on the 18th inst. He and his brother, under the designation "Michel-Levy Frères," founded in 1836, in Paris, one of the best-known publishing houses in Europe. Among the earlier works which they prepared for publication were a "Bibliothèque Dramatique" and a "Théâtre Contemporain Illustré." They also edited and published several periodicals. In the course of their career the Levy brothers published the books of a large number of French authors, including such famous ones as Guizot, Lamartine, Victor Hugo, Sainte-Beuve, George Sand, De Tocqueville, Prosper Mérimée and Dumas Fils; while translations of Thackeray, Poe, Motley, Heine and numerous other foreign writers also came from their press. Branch houses were established in several cities for the extension of the business of this house, which did much to exploit the productions of littérateurs who, but for them, would have been far less known.

GEORGE A. WHEAT, one of the oldest printers and publishers of plays in this country, died at Bayonne, N. J., on the 11th inst. He was at one time a member of the firm of French & Wheat in Park Row, N. Y., known for years as publishers of plays. After gaining a reputation for this kind of work, Mr. Wheat set up in business alone in Spruce Street, where for three years he published the "New York Drama," which contained in all 150 plays. Here, too, he issued the first paper with colored illustrations ever published in this country, the Western World.

... Company, died June 15 in Boston, aged 50 years. In early life he was a clerk in Clapp's music store on Court Street, and later was employed with Oliver Ditson & Co. In 1868 he formed partnership with C. A. White. The firm had houses in Boston, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, New Orleans, St. Paul, Kansas City, Denver and San Francisco.

GARRET VAN NOSTRAND died at his home in South Nyack, N. Y., June 15, aged 70 years. He was treasurer of the Reformed Church Board of Publication, of 26 Reade Street, and had filled many other positions of trust in New York City.

CHARLES H. KALBFLEISCH, the well-known and scholarly book collector, died at his home in New York City on the 16th inst. from a sunstroke. He was fifty-three years old. His library contains many rare specimens of Americana and Shakespeariana.

VICTORINE HAVEN PUTNAM, widow of George P. Putnam, the founder of the well-known publishing house, died June 16 in New York, where she was born in 1824. When but 17 years old she married George Palmer Putnam. Mrs. Putnam was the mother of eleven children, nine of whom are now living, and among whom are Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi, George Haven Putnam, John Bishop Putnam and Irving Putnam. The three last named constitute the present publishing firm of George Putnam's Sons. Besides her nine sons and daughters now living, Mrs. Putnam leaves nineteen grandchildren. The last four or five years of her life were spent principally in Europe. The immediate cause of her death was an operation from which she failed to recover.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

THE NOTTINGHAM (Eng.) Free Public Reference Library has published a useful list of works in the department of history, with an author's index. (Class List, No. 16, 32 p., 2d.)

THE HARVARD UNIVERSITY BULLETIN, No. 49, May, 1891, contains a list of the orators and poets of the Phi Beta Kappa Alpha of Massachusetts, with a bibliographical description of their orations and poems which are in Harvard College Library, prepared by William Hopkins Tillinghast, assistant librarian.

Catalogues of New and Second-Hand Books.—Banks & Bros., N. Y., Law books. (207 p. 16°.)—W. E. Benjamin, 751 Broadway, N. Y., Scarce and Rare books. (No. 36, 80 p. sm. 4°.)—Brentano's, 5 Union Sq., N. BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Haskell Pub. Co. has removed to 181 Tremont Street, where it has larger and more convenient quarters for its increasing business.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Frederick Diehl, bookseller, has removed to a larger store at 210 W. Market Street.

NEW YORK CITY.—S. F. McLean & Co. have secured the entire stock of the late Joseph Lord, Albany, N.Y. The addition of over thirty thousand volumes to their stock forces them into larger quarters, and they will remove immediately from 775 Broadway to 13 Cooper Union. The late Joseph Lord, it will be remembered, was in business over forty years, and hundreds of his books (more particularly his works on theology) are rare and valuable, antedating the beginning of the present century. McLean & Co. make a specialty of procuring out-of-prints for the trade. They invite correspondence.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. — Henry Altemus (the Philadelphia Bible Warehouse) has removed his offices to 28 South Fourth Street. His factory remains at 507-513 Cherry Street.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The J. Dewing Company, publishers and dealers in fine-art goods, has issued a circular to its creditors offering to compromise its indebtedness by paying fifty cents on the dollar. The outstanding obligations of the firm are said to aggregate $200,000. Two-thirds of this amount is owed to Eastern creditors. A member of the firm states that there will be no assignment. He attributes the present condition of the firm to the want of ready money, due to dulness of trade and recent large outlay of capital.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—James D. Gill, who has been one of the leading booksellers of Springfield for more than twenty years, has disposed of his miscellaneous book stock and will henceforth give his entire attention to his extensive art business, in connection with stationery and blank books.

VICKSBURG, MISS.—Clarke & Co., booksellers, have had their property destroyed by fire to the extent of $25,000. Insured in part.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES,

KEPLER & SCHWARZMANN will publish at once the interesting "Hypnotic Tales," by James L. Ford, that attracted such widespread attention during their appearance in Puck.

THE Bible of Martha Washington, which was bought by Mitchell's (Bowden & Smith), New York, at the sale of the Washington relics in Philadelphia for $760, has passed for $5000 into the collection of Mr. C. F. Gunther, of Chicago.

A Broadway Series of copyright novels will be shortly begun by a new publishing house now being established in New York. The publishers are said to be men of wide experience and responsibility, who believe there is ample room for another series of well-made good novels.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL CO. will publish at once a new volume by D. L. Moody. Already 500,000 copies of this author's works have been issued. All so-called "authorized" editions, unless coming from this house, are garbled and shorthand reports which the author does not recognize.

THE AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASS'N, Chicago, will publish at once "Allen Dorman's Poetical Works," a collection of over 600 poems by a farmer-poet who, according to his prospectus, was "born [in 1857] in a log cabin and rocked in the half of a bee-hive, 'mid surroundings of poverty and obscurity, and has cultivated crops of corn for 21 years without a single intermission."

EM. TERQUEM, 19 Rue Scribe, Paris, desires to warn his patrons in the United States and the book trade generally that a young French Canadian travelling under the name of "Jean Fortier, représentant de Maison Em. Terquem," is in no way connected with his house. Fortier was for a short time in M. Terquem's employ, and, it is alleged, absconded with a sum of money belonging to his employer.

THE WORTHINGTON COMPANY has just ready "Columbia, a Story of the Discovery of America," by John R. Musick. This is the first of a series of twelve volumes by Mr. Musick which is to cover important periods of American history, so that the series will be a complete history of the United States in twelve stories, each of which, however, will be complete in itself. The next volume will be entitled "Estevan, a story of the Spanish conquests." Each volume will be fully illustrated.

MITCHELL'S, of 830 Broadway, N. Y., advertised for sale the original deed of Staten Island to the British in 1670. A few days since this deed was found to be missing from the records at Albany. Enquiry showed that it had been stolen, and the work of tracing out the thief was entrusted by the State officers to the Messrs. Mitchell. By following the various clues that presented themselves the deed has been traced back as far as Kripple Bush, Ulster Co., N. Y. The person who sold it from that place has, it is alleged, been writing to various State officials and begging various sums—$5, $10 or $15—for the purpose of either buying bells, for repairing or otherwise beautifying the local church. He will be called upon to explain as to how the deed came into his possession, and incidentally the church story may be investigated.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO. announce as in press the long-expected supplement to "Allibone's Critical Dictionary of English Literature and British and American Authors," which will appear in two volumes. John Foster Kirk, formerly editor of Lippincott's Magazine, has prepared this work for publication. It will give the names and history of 37,000 authors and enumerate 93 000 titles, and will be a most valuable and much-needed compilation. In fiction this house is preparing "The Little Ladies," by Helen Milan; "A Sketch in the Ideal," and a new novel by Rosa Nouchette Carey. In scientific works there will be a new edition of "The Chemical Analysis of Iron," by Andrew Alexander Blair; "A Handbook of Industrial Organic Chemistry," by S. C. Sadtler; a fifth edition of "Hypodermic Medication," by Robert Bartholomew; and "Regional Anatomy in its Relation to Medicine and Surgery," by Dr. George McClellan, to be published in two volumes with colored plates. Other announcements include "Life of Benjamin Harris Brewster," by E. C. Savidge; "The Swiss Republic," by Boyd Winchester, late United States Minister at Bern; "Atlantis Arisen; or, Talks of a Tourist About Victor; and "Harmony of History," by Malcolm Macdonald.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have in preparation a fine library edition of the military novels of Charles Lever. The edition will be in convenient form, in clear legible type, handsomely printed on the best quality of paper. The volumes will have as illustrations full-page etchings specially executed for this edition by C. A. Walker from the characteristic and spirited illustrations contributed to the original editions by "Phiz" and Cruikshank; also illustrations in the text. The first to make their appearance are "The Confessions of Harry Lorrequer," 2 vols., and "Charles O'Malley," 2 vols. These will be followed by "Jack Hinton," 2 vols.; "Tom Burke," 2 vols.; and "Arthur O'Leary," 1 vol. The volumes will be of crown 8vo size. A limited large-paper edition, consisting of 250 numbered copies, will be issued in medium octavo size, on hand-made paper, with Japan proof impressions of the etchings. Messrs. Little, Brown & Co. will publish next month "Carine, a story of Sweden," by Louis Enault, translated by Linda Da Kowalewska, with forty illustrations by Louis K. Harlow; also "Tales of Three Centuries," by Michael Zagosin, translated from the Russian by Jeremiah Curtin. In the fall they will publish, uniform with the "Blind Musician," "A Woman of Shawmut," a story of old colonial times, by Edmund James Carpenter, with illustrations by F. T. Merrill.

ESTES & LAURIAT, as already announced, are getting up superb editions of the novels of Walter Scott and George Eliot, uniform in size, style and price with their wonderfully successful editions de luxe of Dickens, Thackeray and Bulwer. The edition of Scott will contain all of the Waverley Novels and comprise forty-five volumes. By a strange anomaly French artists have studied and illustrated Walter Scott far more intelligently and effectively than his own countrymen, and the publishers have secured the services of celebrated French etchers for the ideal creations and historical studies to illustrate the works; these etchings and photo etchings will be supplemented with reproductions of fine photographs from nature where the scenes of novels are laid in historic localities. Voluminous historical notes will elucidate and explain the text. The edition will be printed from new type on paper manufactured especially for this edition—a natural tint laid paper, made of the finest material, making a volume of remarkably light weight. The illustrations will be proof impressions on imperial Japanese paper. The George Eliot will be in twenty-four volumes and contain upwards of one hundred and twenty-five original etchings and photogravures. The photogravures are reproduced from drawings by many prominent American artists, among whom are Dielman, Harper, Sandham, Taylor, Garrett, Merrill and Champney. These will be supplemented with photogravures from photographs taken of the localities described in the historical romances. These editions will be limited to 1000 numbered copies each and will be sold by subscription only. The volumes will be issued at the rate of two a month for each author. They will be bound in English vellum cloth, library style, with paper titles, gilt tops and uncut edges. The publishers will raise the price as soon as the sets are com- subscribed for.

JOHN MURRAY has in press a new volume of his series of Student's Histories, dealing with the history of the Roman Empire from its establishment by Augustus to the occasion of Commodus in 180. In fact, it covers the period from the point at which Dean Liddell's History left off to the point at which Gibbon begins.

THE second volume of Charles Booth's "The Labor and Life of the People" has just made its appearance in London. It is a large work, which, when completed by the third volume, will, it is claimed, present the most exhaustive study of every phase of existence in the great modern city yet made. It deals exclusively with London.

P. AMBROSIUS, one of the Trappist missionaries in Zululand, has printed at their station of Mariannhill a "Zulukafir Grammar," which is to be commended to students of the Bantu class of languages. It is written in German, and bears the title: "Grammatik der Zulu-Kaffirschen Sprache für den Schulgebrauch und das Privatstudium."

G. A. AITKEN, the biographer of Steele, has written a full life of Dr. John Arbuthnot, to be accompanied by a selection from his miscellaneous works. The volume, which will be published in the fall by the delegates of the Clarendon Press, is the first serious attempt to give to Arbuthnot his proper position among the wits of the eighteenth century. It will be furnished with a detailed bibliography and index.

THE "Lectures on Architecture and Painting" delivered in Edinburgh in 1853 by John Ruskin, which were printed in 1854 and 1855, but have been long out of print, are now to be reprinted uniform with an edition of "The Seven Lamps." There are four lectures, two on "Architecture," one on "Turner and His Works," and one on "Pre-Raphaelitism." Fifteen illustrations by the author will be given.

CARLO CASTELLANI, Prefect of the Biblioteca di San Marco, Venice, writes to the London Academy to warn book collectors that some one is offering a copy of Livy which he pretends was printed at Venice by Johannes de Spira in 1469, and had a special colophon establishing its authenticity. Examination proves it to be a copy of the well-known edition of Livy printed by Vindelinus in 1470, with a forged colophon at the foot of the last leaf of the first volume.

GREAT excitement has been caused in the artistic world of Germany by a book entitled "Who is Rembrandt?" by Max Lautner, who contends that a great part of the paintings attributed to Rembrandt are the work of one of his scholars, Ferdinand Bol. With a new photographic magnifying process, invented by himself, he discovered, he says, on a great number of works bearing the name of Rembrandt the clear traces of the name of Ferdinand Bol scratched in the original fresh paint and under the varnish. Thus in the case of the celebrated picture "Joseph and Potiphar's Wife," purchased at a high price by the Berlin Museum, the photographic apparatus has discovered a very clear impression of Bol's name to the left of the raised foot of Potiphar's wife, on the pedestal of the seat on which she reposes.

LUZAC & Co., Great Russell Street, London, will publish shortly an English edition of Prof. Carl Capeller's "Sanskrit-Wörterbuch" (1888), which possesses the merit of being the cheapest and most concise dictionary of Sanskrit in existence. Based upon the larger and smaller Petersburg dictionaries, it is meant to furnish a vocabulary to Böhtlingk's Chrestomathy, to the seventy hymns of the Rigveda translated by Geldner and Kaegi, to the twelve hymns edited by Windisch, and to the parts of the Satapathabrahmana edited by Weber, besides Nala and the dramas of Kalidasa. It also professes to contain a complete list of roots and primitive words in Sanskrit; and it marks the accent in authenticated cases, the method followed being that first introduced by L. von Schroeder in his Maitrayani Samhita— the acute being indicated by a vertical stroke above, and the circumflex by a curve below the accented syllable.

E. ROUVEYRE, Paris, has just issued a work on bookbinding. "La Reliure," by Henri Bouchot, author of "Livres Modernes" and "Ex Libris." The Nation speaks of it as "a well-reasoned discourse on the proprieties of bookbinding, beginning with an historical review of the modes which have prevailed during the present century. In none of these does M. Bouchot find anything but flat imitation of 'tous les styles défunts,' and his main object is to foster originality which shall mark the present time and restore personal inspiration to the binder himself. He does this with the aid of photographic illustrations from recent bindings which are out of the beaten path, and of which he frankly acknowledges the inequality of merit, since we are in the groping and experimental stage. His leading principle is that the design and treatment and material should be inspired by the work itself, and should have relation to the contents as the Leit-Motiv to the action of the operatic drama. This produces what he calls a 'reliure à l'emblème,' with possibilities of infinite variety. He marks the recent craze for decorating the inside of the cover, on which Grolier never bestowed a thought, and he discusses the proper stuffs for such use, as to which much false taste has been displayed. This little manual is quickly read and is certain to inculcate sound ideas."

JUST PUBLISHED:

The Letters of Marie Bashkirtseff.

Translated from the French by MARY J. SERRANO, translator of Marie Bashkirtseff's Journal. With illustrations and fac-similes of the author's own letters. 1 vol., 12mo, $1.50.

It is unnecessary to call attention to the extraordinary popularity of the "Journal of Marie Bashkirtseff," translated by Mrs. Serrano and published in English by the Cassell Publishing Company. The history of the publishing business records scarcely any other such success. The Letters which are now offered the public are published by the Cassell Publishing Company before their appearance in France by especial arrangement with Mme. Bashkirtseff, the mother of Marie, and the French publishers. They will be found quite as original and brilliant as the famous Journal and are destined to a wide popularity. M. André Theuriet, who edited the Journal, has edited the Letters also, specimens of which are given in fac-simile of Marie Bashkirtseff's own handwriting. The book will be as beautiful in typography and binding as was the volume containing the Journal, and will contain new portraits of Marie, with reproductions from her sketches, besides other illustrations.

New Vols. in Cassell's Sunshine Series.

Old Raclot's Million.

A Novel. By EMILE RICHEBOURG. Translated from the French by Mrs. Benjamin Lewis. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth. 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

The Price of a Coronet;

Or, Jeanne Berthout, Countess de Mercœur. Adapted from the French of PIERRE SALE by Mrs. Benjamin Lewis. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth. $1.00.

A Wedding Trip.

A Novel, by EMILIA PARDO BAZAN. Translated from the Spanish by Mary J. Serrano, translator of Marie Bashkirtseff's "Journal," Marie Bashkirtseff's Letters, etc., etc. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Through Russia on a Mustang.

By THOMAS STEVENS, author of "Scouting for Stanley in East Africa." With 16 illustrations made from photographs taken by the author. 1 vol., 8vo, $2.00.

Mr. Stevens has never written a livelier book than this. It is unconventional and full of amusing and thrilling incidents. He saw Russia as few travellers have seen that country, and he tells of what he saw in that fresh and breezy style for which his writings are conspicuous.

Hadasseh;

Or, From Captivity to the Persian Throne. By E. LEUTY COLLINS, author of "'Tween Heaven and Earth," etc. 1 vol., 12mo, extra cloth, $1.50.
